EVERY RECORD SMASHED

We had twenty clerks last week and we couldn't serve the people. The response to our Big Liquidation Sale was beyond our anticipations. We were selling the goods right -- the people knew it, and they came in shoals. But for this week and next the knife goes in deeper than ever.

YOU HAVE HAD GOOD BARGAINS BEFORE. YOU WILL NOW HAVE BETTER BARGAINS. PRICES. ALREADY LOW, WILL GO LOWER.

We established new records for business in Dufferin county and we will now break our own records.

BIG SATURDAY, BIG MONDAY, BIG TUESDAY AND BIG WEDNESDAY.

4 BIG BARGAIN DAYS 4

Prices never equalled before for the high-class goods composing this stock.

Fifty New Winter Coats For Women.

Here is the cream of the new Winter Styles, in warm, sightly, fashionable materials, manufactured by the famous Northway Company. They come in all sizes and they sell in the regular way up to..... $25.00

We are determined not to carry one garment over. There will be a great lack of these lines for next winter—the war will make both materials and skilled labor very scarce and this price provides an opportunity for every thrifty woman, young or old, to save dollars on each and every purchase.

We have put to one side twenty of these fine Northway Coats, formerly selling at $15.00 to $20.00, and for the Four Big Days, they go not only at cost, but so far below, that this offering above should fill the department Saturday.

Twenty-five Northway Coats, in all the season's new materials. Sold anywhere at $15.00 to $20.00, now..... $4.95

Furs ! Furs ! Furs !

The balance of our fur stock goes lower and lower. Mink Marmot Neck Pieces. $6.50 value. Further reduced to..... $1.95

A few Muffs left to clear..... 95c

Persian Paw Setts, full wide collar and large Muff. $40.00 value $14.95

Beautiful Coney Seal Neck Pieces. $17.50 value. Now..... $5.95

Ladies' Astrachan Coat. One only. $75.00 value. Now..... $24.95

Ladies' Heavy Quilted Lined Melton Coat, black fur collar. $25.00 value $6.95

Remember you will never buy furs again at these prices.

Boys' Winter Reefers, for boys of 3 to 5 years of age, only a few left in good styles, warm and sightly, and selling at $3.00 to $5.00, now..... 98c

Silks, Satins and Velvets Still Further Reduced.

Dress Trimmings, Laces, Embroideries.

No other store in the country has so specialized on fine Dress Accessories as this.—Fine Silk and Wool Braids, Cords, Gimps, Sequins, Jets, Passementaries, Fringes, Insertions, Overlaces, Fancy Nets, etc., to be absolutely annihilated, all at a mere fraction of factory price. Many of the better lines laid out at specially attractive prices for the Big Four Days.

CALEDON EAST.

A masquerade carnival will take place next Wednesday night on the new rink, when several excellent prizes will be offered for competition. The rink is in fine order, a warm building every night, and the best attention given those from a distance.

The debate, which was adjourned from the box social, came off last Friday night. The subject was "Resolved that the present War will end militarism in Europe." The affirmative was taken by Rev. G. H. Purchase and W. J. McKinley, and the negative by W. L. Judge and John Anderson. After an interesting and instructive debate the verdict was left in the hands of meeting which declared in favor of the negative.

S. P. Wilson has invested in a large new gasoline engine and says he intends to make things hum.

The trustees of the village have given notice that no ashes are to be laid on the Main St., or any other of the bye roads within the precincts of the police village and any person infringing in this respect will be dealt with according to law. Let us hope that everyone will receive the same treatment in regard to the ash question.

We regret to report that Miss Berdia Glassford does not make rapid improvement towards complete recovery. It will be remembered that Miss Glassford was injured three or four weeks ago by the beautiful vehicle that plies between Bolton station and Bolton village.

The members of the A.Y.P.A. in connection with St. James' church will entertain the members of the A.Y.P.A. of Sandhill, Tullamore and Campbells Cross next Wednesday night in Hanton's Hall. About one hundred and fifty young people are expected to be present.

Village trustees J. O. Proctor and W. A. Cranston went to Bolton on Tuesday night to attend the turning on of the Hydro Electric in that corporation.

Mr. C. J. Cranston, drover, of Caledon East, has taken out an auctioneer's license for the counties of Peel and Dufferin, and is now prepared to conduct all sales intrusted to his care.—Enterprise.

MONO MILLS.

Mr. Geo. Holdsworth and children, of Cobourg, spent last week at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jackson.

We note in last week's issue of The Banner that Mr. R. J. Potter of this village has been appointed Secretary-solidated Telephone Company, of Caledon.

Mr. James Arlow will hold a credit auction sale on Tuesday, Feb. 9th, at which a lot of good stock and implements will be offered. See bills for list of articles. Mr. Jas. A. Patterson, Auctioneer.

The meeting of the Epworth League on Wednesday evening of last week was in charge of the Committee on Citizenship. The most important feature of the programme was the debate on the subject, "Resolved that the Voluntary System of Recruiting is more effectual than the Conscript or Forced Service System." The affirmative side was taken by Miss Viola Crombie and Mr. Austin Fagan and the negative by Miss Anna McFarland and Mr. Harold Dowling. Both sides of this question, which has become of vital importance in the present crisis, were well presented and supported by good, strong arguments. The decision was given for the affirmative. Miss Mabel Martin, Mr. Jno. E. Jackson and Mr. John A. Vance were the judges. A well rendered solo by Miss Laura Henry and instrumental music by Miss Lillie Duke completed an interesting programme. The next meeting will be consecration meeting and the programme will be arranged by the Christian Endeavor Committee, of which Miss Anna McFarland is convenor.

Miss Alma Dowling spent last week with friends at Farmington.

ALTON.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Dodds are spending a few weeks with friends in Toronto.

A YEAR INDOORS.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

Had Nervous Dyspepsia

With Frequent Sick Headaches and Much Pain After Eating — Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured.

This letter is from a lady who gained 14 pounds by using the great food cure. It did wonders for her in improving her general health. She is enthusiastic in its praise, and refers to her neighbors as witnesses of the splendid results obtained.

Mrs. Susan Dobson, Spring Hill Mines, N. S., writes:—"It is with pleasure that I write to you in praise of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was troubled with dyspepsia, and could not eat without suffering much pain; also had sick headaches frequently, and my nerves were in bad condition. About ten years ago I took a thorough treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, using altogether 21 boxes, and since then can eat anything, have been freed from headaches, and my health has been greatly improved in every way. I gained 14 pounds in weight, and feel sure I owe everything to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. You may use this letter, and my neighbors can tell you of my condition before using this treatment."

COULD NOT HOLD CANDLE.

A pompous manufacturer of machinery was showing a stranger over his factory.

"Fine piece of work, isn't it?" he said, when they were looking at a very ingenious machine.

"Yes," said the visitor, "but you cannot hold a candle to the goods we are turning out."

"Indeed!" said the chagrined manufacturer. "And what is your line?"

"Gunpowder," was the reply.

This Store Is Headquarters

For All that Is New and Useful

WE keep abreast of the times. When you see anything new in our line advertised come to our store and you will find it here.

We test and try out the new things before we offer them for sale. They must have genuine merit and be all the makers claim before we recommend them.

And back of the maker's guarantee is our guarantee. We make good every promise.

We have seldom sold anything that gives more satisfaction than the O-Cedar Polish Mop. Every woman who has ever used one is enthusiastic in her praise. And no wonder, for it saves hard work, time and money.

You know the hard work of dusting, cleaning and polishing hardwood floors. It is easy, simple and quick with the O-Cedar Polish Mop. This mop is treated with the famous O-Cedar Polish and it collects all the dust and dirt from the floor, and at the same time gives it a hard, lasting polish. No hard rubbing, no stooping or bending. You just go over the floor once.

And with the same mop you can dust everywhere. All the hard-to-get-at places, the tops of doors, the molding, the stairs and banisters. Under the bed and radiators, in fact every place.

Guaranteed Satisfaction or Money Refunded.

The O-Cedar Polish Mop, complete, sells for $1.50 and with this distinct understanding, that you can try it for two days and at the end of that time, if you are not perfectly satisfied with it your money will be instantly refunded. We invite you to try one.

STEALING COPPER WIRE.

For some time during the fall and early winter copper wire stealing was carried on rather extensively in Toronto and suburbs, and the police were unable to locate the thieves. New buildings that were being wired would be stripped in a night and rolls of wire that were on hand for the purpose of wiring the buildings were carried away. Recently a loaded car was accidentally derailed in the railway yard at London, and it was found to contain tons of copper wire that had been shipped as junk. This gave the police a clue and an investigation led to the fact that Wm. McMullen, of Lisle, was connected with the shipping of the wire. One day last week Constable Young got word from Toronto to effect the arrest of young McMullen at Lisle, and at once proceeded to do so. On being placed under arrest, McMullen gave the whole thing away and told how he had been led into it by his supposed brother-in-law, Harold Brown, the man who formerly posed as a private detective, and figured prominently in the arrest of Geo. Alderson a year ago. Detective Murray came up from the city and took McMullen back with him, and the arrest of Brown and others quickly followed. The case came up in the police court, when an adjournment was made until Monday this week.—Creemore Star.

John Morgan, reeve of Ailsa Craig, was elected warden of Middlesex after a long deadlock.

An Ayr hotel keeper was fined $20 and costs as a result of a visit made by Inspector Knowles quite recently. The inspector found the blinds drawn and things in general indicating that the hour of closing was not observed.

A GERMAN SCARE.

Railway Guards Uncovered a Real Live Plot—For a Few Minutes.

"What's this?" ejaculated the first man, holding up a small can.

"Lemme see," came the answer.

A moment's pause. Then a frightened scream from the second person and two pairs of feet scampering away, a maddened rush, a frenzied dash.

"What's — what's the matter?" gasped the first man, after he had followed the second at a dead heat for some five minutes.

"That was — nitro-glycerine — in that can," gasped the second in turn.

"Nitro-glycerine!" echoed the first, pronouncing every syllable, his eyes bulging. The two stared at each other without speaking. They were bridge guards on a railway in old Ontario and, as was their custom, they made an examination of the ground under their bridge every morning.

"Well, we'd better tell the boss. I'll find him. You go back," said the second guard.

"Oh, no! I'll find the boss," said the first guard, his cheeks paling.

"We'll both go," they eventually agreed, and in fifteen minutes three forms could be seen on a handcar dashing madly along the track toward the bridge. They stopped about twenty yards from the bridge and under the direction of the two shivering guards "the boss" descended into the hollow under the bridge. Gingerly he approached the spot where the can lay. Gingerly he stooped and as carefully lifted it up. The brave guards were now standing beside him looking on.

Then "the boss's" eyes gleamed, his nostrils dilated. "Fatheads!" he roared, "that's brass polish!"

Queen Anne's Gifts.

The old Mohawk church near Brantford, one of the oldest churches in Ontario, has many relics of historic interest still in its possession, among them a silver communion service presented by Queen Anne, which bears the royal arms and the inscription, "The Gift of Her Majesty Anne, by the Grace of God of Great Britain and Ireland and Her Plantations in North America, Queen, to her Indian Chappell of the Mohawks, 1712." A Bible, also the gift of Queen Anne, is inscribed with the names of royal visitors. Both Bible and communion service were deeply revered by the Indians and guarded most jealously. They were buried by the Indians during the war of 1812-14 and restored later to their present position.

The tablets, altar cloth and royal coat-of-arms of George III., above the entrance, were sent from England by the Government in 1876.

Not the least interesting of these valuable relics retained by the church is the oldest church bell in Ontario. Cracked and dust-laden, it still commands veneration, for its music first startled the stillness of the forest and summoned the Red Man to the house of prayer.

Beneath the shadow of the little church is the tomb of Thayendanagea, or Captain Joseph Brant, whose memory is revered by white men as well as red, and his epitaph testifies: "This Tomb is Erected to the Memory of Thayendanagea, or Captain Joseph Brant, Principal Chief and Warrior of the Six Nations Indians, by His Fellow Subjects and Admirers of His Fidelity and Attachment to the British Crown. Born on the Banks of the Ohio River, 1742. Died at Wellington Square, W.C., 1807."

The oldest church still stands in the midst of its quiet churchyard, a silent sentinel of Time's ceaseless change.

Gas Below Standard.

The gas inspectors of the Dominion Inland Revenue Department have found some remarkable conditions in a few Canadian cities, according to the annual report of the department issued at Ottawa.

In regard to illuminating power 21 tests out of 23 in Victoria, B.C., showed the gas to be below the standard. In Winnipeg 75 out of 102 tests were below the standard, in Ottawa 26 out of 82 tests were the same.

In Toronto, Montreal, St. John and the majority of the other cities and towns the gas was up to the standard for illuminating power.

The inspectors of gas meters in Toronto found that 196 had to be rejected, of which 124 were too fast, in Hamilton 73 were rejected, in Belleville 34, and in Peterboro, Woodstock and Ottawa none.

The report on electrical energy shows that the amount generated for use in Canada was almost exactly equal to the amount exported in the last fiscal year. There was 117,955 horsepower for home use and 118,207 for export. The chief exporting companies were the Ontario Power Co., which exported 43,000 out of its total of 106,000 horsepower generated, and the Canadian Niagara Co., which exported 61,241 out of 62,968. The total horsepower generated in the country was 236,169.

Farmers Were Suspicious.

Farmers in the Counties of Wellington, Perth and Huron reported to Ottawa the erection of certain towers at long distances apart on which lights were seen at night.

It was suspected that this was a signal system used by alien enemies within the country. The Government found that the towers were erected by a party sent out by Dr. King of the observatory at Ottawa to make geodetic surveys. The lights were placed on the towers at night to establish accurate distances.

Kindly Warning.

County Constable Ward of Wiarton visited our neighborhood last week giving a kindly warning that the law would be enforced concerning raffles in the future. Some of our younger people are not aware of the seriousness of holding and attending a raffle, as the law provides a heavy fine for its violation.—Colpoys Bay cor. Wiarton Echo.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

Hundreds of People Have Found "Fruit-a-tives" Their Only Help

READ THIS LETTER

Superintendent of Sunday School in Toronto Tells How He Cured Himself of Chronic Rheumatism After Suffering for Years.

55 DOVERCOURT ROAD, Oct., 1st, 1913.

"For a long time, I have thought of writing you regarding what I term a most remarkable cure effected by your remedy "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered from Rheumatism, especially in my hands. I have spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now, and am pleased to tell you that I am cured. All the enlargement has not left my hands and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in 18 months".

R. A. WAUGH

Rheumatism is no longer the dreaded disease it once was. Rheumatism is no longer one of the "incurable diseases". "Fruit-a-tives" has proved its marvellous powers over Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago—in fact, over all such diseases which arise from some derangement of stomach, bowels, kidneys or skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

GIVE DAIRYING A CHANCE

During a season of severe drought in the major part of Eastern Ontario the cows contributing milk to the factories increased their flow by 170 pounds on the average. This happened during the year 1914, when up to June 24th little rain was seen and in some districts much later than that. Why are not the cows of Eastern Ontario giving 6,000 lbs. of milk per year? During 1912 about 281,489 cows were milked by factory patrons, and each cow yielded approximately 3,274 pounds of milk during the factory season. A good milking cow should milk all winter and then give that quantity of milk from May 1st to Nov. 1st, which constitutes the season proper. The paltry little increase of 170 pounds in six months does not mean much in itself, but occurring in a season as it did, when grass and water both were scarce, it reveals the fact that a summer silo, green fodder and perhaps some extra grain would increase the flow of hundreds of these cows to the extent of 1000 pounds each.

When cows are only milking a short time over six months 1000 pounds of milk per month should be the average in a well established herd. The low fat content is also a drawback to profits, but so long as factories pay by the hundredweight instead of by some recognized test, patrons will continue to produce milk low in fat. The cheese business is a good industry if patrons and manufacturers will combine to give it a fair chance, but so long as the cows yield between three and four thousand pounds, and this poor in fat, producers will be jumping from factory to creamery and to export or city trade much to the detriment of the industry and to the individual's interest. What is most regrettably wanting now is a determination on the part of farmers to produce more and better butter milk per cow, and someone in authority with courage enough to recommend a suitable method of paying for milk and courage to stand by his conviction.

Fire Insurance a Tax.

Fire insurance is no doubt an institution of great benefit, especially after a fire loss. Nevertheless, it is a striking commentary upon the business judgment of the Canadian citizen that fire insurance is now also characterized as a tax, distributed, through the buying and selling process, upon the entire community; that every additional fire and every extra fire hazard tends to increase this tax, while every precaution for fire prevention and for the reduction in the number of fire losses tends to lessen the insurance rate. The business man must shift the cost of insuring his goods to the consumer, and, not only is the amount of this tax added, but, as this is part of the cost of doing business, he is entitled to a profit on it as well. Moreover, the amount of rent which the business man has to pay is influenced by the cost of insuring the premises occupied, and this tax, too, is concealed in the selling price of his goods. This fire insurance tax must also be added to the selling cost at every handling between the original raw material and the finished article.—"Conservation."

Received News of Atrocities.

Miss Linda Boyd, Belleville, has received a letter from a friend in England, saying that in Vottingham, a village of about 500 people, within 20 miles of London, about 20 Belgian refugees were being cared for. Amongst these homeless people were five little children who had both hands and feet cut off, and one woman who had a thumb pulled out of her hand.

Elgin County for Refugees?

Dr. Bryce, of the Immigration Department, was in St. Thomas recently looking into the matter of having some 500 acres of farm land in Elgin County purchased and divided up into ten-acre farms for Belgian refugees. Other Western Ontario cities are to be visited by the official also.

A CLERICAL RACONTEUR.

Very Rev. J. J. Craven of Hamilton Is Noted as a Story-Teller.

If you have "one on Pat," a good and new one—and, mind you, it has to be good and new, for there isn't a blessed one otherwise, born or manufactured, that isn't in the list of the genial priest—tell it to Very Rev. J. J. Craven, the new Dean of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Hamilton, formerly of Galt, and you have a listener with an appreciation so keen and a manifestation thereof so hearty and wholesome, that your effort is rewarded to soul's content.

Troth, it's a question whether Father Craven wouldn't sooner have the laugh on than with his countryman—more especially when the story points a moral. "Come, come!" he will reason with a despondent parishioner who has sought counsel of him. "Cheer up! You know the old song:

"Be a man, be a man,
Stare fate in the face!
Shure, the heart will be aisy
If it's in the right place."

"Did I ever tell you about McKenna, the troublesome old grouch, who was always declaring it would have been money in his pocket if he'd never been born?"

And so the jolly priest laughs the gloomy fellow out of his doldrums.

Or if it happens to be a particularly obstinate case, the good father, after soberly admonishing, will have recourse again to anecdotal antidote.

"We all know, as Rafferty puts it, that this is a quare world—nobody comes into it that ever goes out of it alive. And you want to live? To be sure, you do! That's why Mike and Dan couldn't suicide. You see, the pair were a trifle down in their luck, and they agreed to go into a barn, cover up with blankets, and pass peacefully away. Fifteen minutes later Mike, in his corner, uncovered his head and asked: 'Are ye there, Dan!' The answer came from the other corner: 'I am!' 'An' ye're not dead, yet?' 'Sorra a bit o' me!' 'Nayther am I, Dan. I can't die for the life o' me!'"

Nor is Father Craven's stock of laugh-makers confined to products of the Emerald Isle. He relishes, and can repeat effectively, an English, Scotch, or German jokelet. When on the subject he will tell you that the funniest story he ever heard—apart, of course, from the Poor Pat variety—is that of the inebriated reporter in the British Upper House, who, during an unlooked-for lull in a momentous debate, involving one of the gravest issues in national affair, leaned over the gallery rail and blandly preferred the request: "While we're (hic) waitin', will shome (hic) noble lord pleash (hic) shing a comic shong?"

All this discloses but one side of Rev. Father Craven's nature and characteristics. Primarily and essentially he is a true type of the well-born, scholarly, cultured, Catholic gentleman. He has a fine presence and a face that beams with benignity and sheds sunny smiles. Well-informed, polished, graceful, and fluent in conversation, an earnest, eloquent preacher, and zealous, devoted minister, he is revered and beloved by all creeds and classes in the town of Galt, where he has labored for fifteen years before going to Hamilton a short time ago, a model ecclesiastic and exemplar of all-round good citizenship.

And if, in this connection one were to tell a bit av a shtory—the same being on the good dean's own cherished "lisht," if I am not mistaken—maybe it might not detract from the dignity nor impair the sincerity of this passing tribute to the virtues, character, and capabilities of the new Dean of St. Patrick's, Hamilton.

Heffernan and Murphy, at the noon hour, were discussing the work in hand.

"'Tis har-rd labor, this dhraindiggin'," declared the former.

"'Tis that, indade," assented the latter. "Now, for a nice, clane, dacint, as well as aisy job, Heffernan, gimme a bishop!"

BALANCE OF $250.06

East Luther Agricultural Society's Finances in Satisfactory Shape.

There was not a large representation of The East Luther Agricultural Society at the annual meeting on Tuesday, but those present naturally were the ones whose personal work and interest have done so much to bring the Society to its present high standing. President Reith presided, and after routine business the Director's Report was presented, which reviewed the work of the past year. The Secretary-Treasurer's statement proved interesting and satisfactory. The receipts amounted to $3040.46, including $800.86 balance on hand. Legislative grant $221.00 and Municipal grant $275.00. The expenditure was $2602.40 of which $729.50 was for prizes at the fall exhibition. $203.34 prizes for spring show, $753.68 for erection of new buildings, $125.73 for new fence, leaving a balance on hand of $280.-06. The assets including balance on hand, and buildings are $5088.06, against which are liabilities of only $511 including a $400 mortgage.

Following are the new officers for this year :—

Hon.-Pres.—J. J. Reith
President—Alex. Park
1st Vice-Pres.—Samuel Platt
2nd Vice-Pres.—John Campbell
Directors—Oscar Crewson, Wm. McClelland, Wm. Scaife, Wm. Park, W. A. Wansbrough, John Bryan, W. L. Craig.

Lady Directors — Mrs. Jas. J. Reith, Mrs. W. A. Wansbrough, Mrs. E. J. Bennett, Mrs. G. H. Nodwell, Mrs. Alex. Park, Mrs. Wm. Park.

It was decided to have a spring horse show about the 20th of April; and to hold another field crop competition this year possibly for two kinds of grain and a root crop.

Departmental Judges will again be asked for the spring show and the fall show which will be held on September 30th and October 1st.

The President, Hon.-President and Secretary-Treasurer were appointed delegates to the Fairs and Exhibition Convention in Toronto next month.

It was also decided to have a complete re-arrangement in many departments of the Prize List, making it more modern and up to the times. —Star & Vidette.

PROHIBITION CONTENTION

Arrangements are Under Way for Monster Gathering of Temperance Workers in Massey Hall.

On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, March 3rd, 4th and 5th, the prohibitionists of Ontario and the Dominion are planning for a monster Convention to be held in Massey Hall, Toronto, under the joint auspices of the Dominion Council of the Dominion Alliance, and the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance. Calls have been issued by both bodies and preliminary arrangements are well under hand.

Amongst the prominent speakers who are expected to take part are W. H. Anderson, Superintendent of New York State of the Anti-Saloon League, and National Legislative Superintendent of the Methodist Church. Sir F. X. Lemieux, Chief Justice of Quebec, Rev. Dr. J. L. Gordon, of Winnipeg, and Rev. R. J. Patterson, (Catch-my-Pal) of Belfast, Ireland.

Prof. E. O. Excell, of Chicago, assisted by Alvin W. Roper, pianist, and Prof. T. C. Jeffers, organist, will have charge of the music. The Convention proceedings will be interspersed with solos by H. Ruthven McDonald, Master George Branton, W. H. Norris, Willie Norris, and other prominent vocalists.

There will be an attractive display of scientific charts, campaign posters, temperance books, leaflets, and literature of all kinds in the basement of the Hall, during the entire time of the Convention.

It is expected that under Convention arrangements single fare returns will be obtainable from all points in Canada. Last year about 200 delegates were in attendance at the Provincial Convention alone; it is expected that the attendance this year will exceed all previous records.

Geo. Robinson has disposed of his 200 acre farm in Mulmur for city property.

FRAUD IN LAND DEALS

Attorney-General's Department Causes Arrest of Five Members McCutcheon Bros. Syndicate.

Five members of the firm of McCutcheon Bros., Limited, dealers in Western real estate, with head offices at 98 King Street, west, Toronto, were arrested Friday night, Jan. 15, on warrants charging them with conspiracy to defraud. Four of the five were arrested in Calgary, Alberta, on telegraphic instructions from the Toronto police and the Attorney-General's Department. The fifth member was arrested here by Detectives Montgomery and Mitchell. Those under arrest are :—

Toronto.—Gordon D. McCutcheon, vice-president, 37 Lonsdale Road, Toronto.

Calgary.— David S. McCutcheon, Clarence M. McCutcheon, Joseph W. McCutcheon, Marshall A. Cook.

David S. McCutcheon was arrested by Montgomery and Mitchell at his office at 98 King St., west, at six o'clock. He was taken at once to the Court Street station. He was held there until after midnight, when he was admitted to bail of $10,000. The other members of the firm were taken into custody by Chief Cuddy at Calgary.

The action against the McCutcheon brothers was instituted by Hon. I. B. Lucas, Attorney-General, following a thorough investigation into complaints regarding the operations of various real estate syndicates in which they were concerned. For weeks past the department has been receiving letters from people in various parts of the province, a very large percentage of them coming from the small centres and rural districts, all complaining that they had been induced to purchase real estate under misrepresentations.

Edward Bayly, K.C., solicitor to the Attorney-General's Department, was placed in charge of the matter and instituted an inquiry into the facts stated in the letters. Through various sources the department secured enough evidence to convince them that McCutcheon Brothers, Limited, were in need of more than casual investigation and that the company was behind two score or more syndicates in Western land that had been the means of unloading large areas of comparatively valueless property upon purchasers.

With these facts before him Hon. Mr. Lucas decided that prompt action was necessary and Mr. Bayly was instructed to meet Crown Attorney Corley and secure the necessary warrants for the arrest of the brothers. Accordingly Mr. Bayly visited Mr. Corley and when the case was explained the warrants were issued. The wording of the warrants is based on section 144 of the Criminal Code and the specific charge is that they did "conspire to defraud the public." The charge of conspiracy to defraud was laid as it was the only charge under which the Attorney-General's Department had the jurisdiction to take action, as many of the complaints that have been received regarding the company's dealings came not only from points outside of the province, but from points outside of the Dominion.

As soon as the warrants were secured from the Police Clerk's office, Mr. Bayly and Mr. Corley went to Inspector of Detectives Kennedy's office. The case was explained to him and the warrants were placed in his possession. Mitchell and Montgomery were given the warrant for Gordon D. McCutcheon and the information against the other four was telegraphed to Chief Cuddy at Calgary.

Mr. Bayly stated that the alleged fraud charged to the McCutcheon Brothers will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars. Complaints against the firm have been received from many points in Ontario, numerous places throughout the West, and from London, Eng.

It is understood that the Attorney General will not rest his efforts with the arrest of the real estate men, but will appoint a special counsel to go into the books of the company and watch the prosecution for the department.

At the time of the arrest warrants were wired to Calgary, search warrants were also telegraphed, and the books of the Calgary office will be seized by Chief Cuddy of that city.

Mr. Gordon McCutcheon appeared in the police court Monday morning and was remanded a week. The Calgary contingent were released on $10,000 bail, giving their bond to appear in Toronto when called.

At first it was thought they would be brought East in charge of an officer, but the bail bonds upset this plan.

"He is my ideal and I'm his idol," said the girl.

"And your love affair?"

"Is an idyl."

"And your fiancee?"

"He's idle, according to papa."

HARVESTING ICE CROP.

Co-operation Among Farmers an Economical Advantage in this Work.

There are few localities in Canada that have not available a river or smaller stream from which a supply of ice may be obtained for use during the summer months. The ease with which the ice crop may be secured is probably the reason why it is not taken advantage of to a greater extent than at present. For economical harvesting operations it is advisable that a number of the farmers of the community co-operate, sharing the expense, and making the labour proportionately lighter.

A few tools are necessary to harvest the ice supply efficiently. A steel scraper to remove the snow covering is desirable; some styles of road scrapers may be used, or a very good homemade scraper may be made of wood and faced with a strip of steel. An ice plough facilitates the work of scoring into blocks for breaking off. A slice bar for breaking off the blocks can be made similar to a crowbar, with a sharp blade from six to eight inches wide. An ice saw may be improvised by removing one handle of a crosscut saw. A number of pike poles, ice tongs and a chain, with heavy pair of ice tongs attached, complete the tools required. A platform, one end of which may be let down into the water, and the other end raised level with the floor of the sleigh, permits the use of a horse in taking the ice out of the water and loading on the sleigh.

The ice should be packed as solidly as possible in the ice house and care taken to have sufficient insulating material around the outside and on top. If more ice is required than can be accommodated in the ice house, it may be piled outside, first laying boards on the ground, and covering them with a layer of sawdust or straw. The sides and top should also be well covered and protected with boards to prevent the wind carrying away the insulating material. Sorted in this way the ice will keep till well into the summer.—D.

$25.00 FOR A LETTER

Can You Write One?

Thirteen Prizes to be Awarded in a Letter Writing Competition.

Some years ago the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., offered a series of prizes to residents of the province of Ontario for the best letters describing cures wrought by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Hundreds of letters were submitted in this competition and yet there must have been thousands of other users of the pills who did not avail themselves of the opportunity to win a prize. To all these another letter writing competition is offered. Thousands of cures through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have never been reported. These will furnish the material for the letter to be written in this contest. There is no demand upon the imagination; every letter must deal with facts and facts only.

THE PRIZES.

The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont., will award a prize of $25.00 for the best letter received on or before the 1st day of March, 1915, from residents of Ontario, on the subject, "Why I Recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills." A prize of $10.00 will be awarded for the second best letter received; a prize of $5.00 for the third best letter, and ten prizes of $2.00 each for the next best ten letters.

THE CONDITIONS.

The cure or benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills described in the letter may be in the writer's own case, or one that has come under his or her personal observation.

More than one cure may be described in the letter, but every statement must be literally and absolutely true.

Every letter must be signed by the full name and correct address of the person sending it. If it describes the cure of some person other than the writer of the letter, it must also be signed by the person whose cure is described as a guarantee of the truth of the statements made.

The writer of each letter must state the name and date of the paper in which he or she saw this announcement.

Fine writing will not win the prize unless you have a good case to describe. The strength of the recommendation and not the style of the letter will be the basis of the award.

It is understood that The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. shall have the right to publish any letter entered in this contest if they desire to do so whether it wins a prize or not.

The contest will close on March 1st, 1915, and the prizes will be awarded as soon as possible thereafter. Do not delay. If you know of a cure write your letter NOW. Observe the above conditions carefully or your letter may be thrown out.

Address all letters as follows :

A Turkish Love Story

By GERTRUDE E. MORRHOUSE

Selma and Rabieh, two little Turkish girls, the former sixteen, the latter seventeen, living in Constantinople, went one day for a walk together along the bank of the Bosporus. The location of Constantinople is beautiful, and since Leander swam what was then called the Hellespont to visit Hero on the opposite shore it has been associated with romance. History comes in for its share of interest from the time Constantine made the city on its European bank the capital of the Roman empire.

These two Turkish girls each wore the charshaf, the long gown of the women of that country, and veils over their faces. The custom of keeping the face covered is not as obligatory among Turkish women as formerly, and some of them dress in European costume. Yet these girls, being very young and unmarried, did not think of lifting their veils while walking where they would be liable to meet men. But coming to a grassy spot, where their faces would be to the water, they sat themselves down and, throwing their veils back, permitted the cool air to fan their faces.

The Bosporus was covered with all sorts of craft, from the skiff to the ocean steamer lying at anchor, while on the opposite shore towered a profusion of buildings, minarets and trees. The boats did not come very near the slope on which the girls were sitting, so there was no necessity for them to let down their veils. They sat looking at the various craft out on the water, now a little steamer plying between different points on the strait, now a motorboat and now a small sailer with leg-of-mutton sails. It was all so charming, so soothing, the breeze was so refreshing that the maidens reclined on the slope, Rabieh laying her head in Selma's lap.

It was not long before Rabieh was dozing and Selma was blinking. There was a sharp point on one side of them which cut off the shore in that direction. A rowboat came round the point and passed within a few yards of them. Selma, who was nodding, suddenly started at seeing a young man with a pair of oars in his hands looking straight at her.

At sixteen a girl may be captured by a look. The young man, who was but a few years Selma's senior, was wrapt in admiration and expressed it in every feature of his face. To Selma he seemed so beautiful that for a moment she forgot to drop her veil. Then, remembering to do so, she shut off what was to the young man a vision of loveliness.

"Rabieh," exclaimed Selma, shaking her friend, "wake up and let down your veil! That boat you see pulling away came very near us. The young man in it is, oh, so beautiful! He has a face that must have been copied from that of Allah."

Rabieh yawned, arose, and the girls walked on.

It was not long after this that Selma and her mother were crossing the Bosporus in one of the little steamers used for ferriage. They were seated in the harem, as all women's apartments in Turkey are called, and were unveiled. A flutter of wind blew aside a window curtain, and there on the deck without sat the young man who had looked upon Selma while she was sitting on the shore. For the second time the two pairs of eyes met, and for the second time through them two hearts leaped toward each other.

After that Selma saw the young man several times, though he did not see her, for she was always veiled when they passed each other on the water bridge, once in Stamboul and once in Scutari. Every time she met studied his face and either saw or clad she saw the wrapt expression of a lover.

At the meeting in Stamboul, Selma was walking with her Aunt Leila.

"That is Orkhan, the son of a very dear friend of mine," said the aunt.

"Is he a fine young man?" asked Selma, with a tremor in her voice that she could scarcely conceal.

"A very fine young man indeed."

There was silence for some time between them, during which Leila had forgotten having met Orkhan. Presently Selma said:

"Aunt Leila, when will mamma arrange a marriage for me?"

"I don't know, child. Do you wish to be married?"

"Certainly. Doesn't every girl wish to be married?"

"Well, dear, I will speak to mamma about it."

Soon after this conversation Selma's mother, Gulistan, at her sister's suggestion determined to look about for a husband for Selma. She knew no men personally—Turkish women know no one but those of their own sex—so she made inquiries among her friends for a marriageable young man. Aunt Leila also took a hand in the matter and quite naturally called on Orkhan's mother, Mikri, to ask if a match could be arranged between Orkhan and Selma. Mikri said she would see about it.

One day Selma overheard her mother and her aunt talking about getting her a husband.

"Mikri says," said Leila, "that she proposed to Orkhan to get a wife for him, but he will not marry; that he is looking for a girl he has seen on the bank of the Bosporus and again on a steamer. If he can find her he will marry her, but no one else."

This was very harrowing to Selma. The man she desired wanted her, and she wanted him, but could not find her. He must not be informed who or where she was, because a Turk sees his bride's face for the first time when he lifts her veil immediately after the wedding ceremony. An American girl would have found a dozen ways to make herself known without appearing to have anything to do with the matter. But Turkish women, especially the girls, are very helpless.

But Aunt Leila was a woman, and even a Turkish woman likes to have her own way. She knew nothing of the meeting between her niece and Orkhan, but his mother was the only woman she knew who had a marriageable son, and she determined to get him for Selma. Leila was wealthy, and she offered Mikri a large dowry for Selma if her marriage with Orkhan could be brought about. Mikri told her son that he must stop dreaming about the girl he had seen and; like a dutiful son, marry the woman she had provided for him. He promised to think about it and at last gave in because he need not be restricted to one wife and if he ever found the girl with whom he had fallen in love he could marry her as well.

One day Gulistan told her daughter that she had found a husband for her and that they must begin to make preparations for the wedding. Of late years there is not always an objection to letting the bride know something of the appearance of the man she is to marry. Gulistan, not dreaming that Selma had ever seen Orkhan, showed her his picture, telling her that he was to be her husband. Selma, who had been almost crazed at the thought of marrying any one except the man she loved, on seeing the photograph was like one reprieved just before an expected execution. How she ever concealed her emotion she never knew herself.

Meanwhile Orkhan continued to look for the girl on whom he had set his heart, for the expense of living has risen in Turkey as well as elsewhere, and only wealthy men can afford more than one wife. The young man was very miserable, for he wished to find the girl he loved in time to break with the wife his mother had provided for him. But since he was permitted to look upon the face of no woman except his wife how could he find her? He had passed her three times without recognizing her, she being veiled.

The wedding day came, and he had not found her. The women were seated, most of them smoking cigarettes and eating sweetmeats. Then they were taken to inspect the apartments to be occupied by the bride and groom, in which were the wedding presents and the trousseau, the latter including articles of apparel belonging to the groom. Then the guests were seated in a large room to await the entrance of the wedding party. The bride, veiled, was brought to the door of the house, where she was met by the groom. He led her into the house and past the guests, who were elbowing one another to get a view of the bridal pair, into a chamber, the door of which was closed behind them.

This is the moment when at Turkish weddings the groom lifts his bride's veil and for the first time looks upon her face. Orkhan had proceeded thus far like one going to a funeral rather than a wedding. How the bride looked no one could tell, for her face was covered. The two stood alone. The groom, conforming to what was expected of him, raised the veil.

A pretty subject for an artist would be this incident—the man's face changing from indifference to surprise and delight at recognizing the girl he loved, she looking up at him lovingly, enjoying his surprise, mingling her happiness with his. Then they were locked in a long embrace.

Curiously enough, there is no other marriage ceremony in Turkey than this, though there is always a formal betrothal some time before. No religious ceremony corresponding to those of European peoples is required. The marriage with the Moslem is simply taking possession of his wife.

IN STERLING LIVES A GIRL

Who Suffered As Many Girls Do—Tells How She Found Relief.

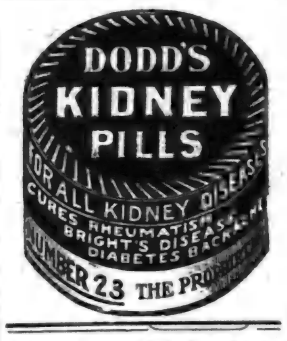
Sterling, Conn.—"I am a girl of 22 years and I used to faint away every month and was very weak. I was also bothered a lot with female weakness. I read your little book 'Wisdom for Women,' and I saw how others had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it, and it has made me feel like a new girl and I am now relieved of all these troubles. I hope all young girls will get relief as I have. I never felt better in my life."—Miss BERTHA A. PELOQUIN, Box 116, Sterling, Conn.

Massena, N. Y.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I highly recommend it. If anyone wants to write to me I will gladly tell her about my case. I was certainly in a bad condition as my blood was all turning to water. I had pimples on my face and a bad color, and for five years I had been troubled with suppression. The doctors called it 'Anemia and Exhaustion,' and said I was all run down, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me out all right."—Miss LAVINA MYERS, Box 74, Massena, N.Y.

Young Girls, Heed This Advice.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should immediately seek restoration to health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

SALE REGISTER.



Mr. James Arlow will hold a credit auction sale of farm stock, implements, etc., on the w ½ lot 39, con. 1, Albion (at Mono Mills) on Tuesday, Feb. 9th, beginning at one o'clock sharp. See posters or advt. for list and full particulars. Jas. A. Patterson, auctioneer.

Mrs. J. C. Scott, of Grand Valley, slipped on a piece of glassy pavement at the Royal Bank corner on the way to church, and broke her right arm just below the elbow.

The recount in Brant Township for the reeveship sustained Spence Nesbitt on the job by a majority of two votes. George McCallum, the defeated reeve, won his election the year before by the same majority.

Mr. George Elliott has sold out his lease of the Del Monte Hotel in Preston, to Mr. S. Garfunkel, who already owns the Bath House property. With the lease go the furnishings, good-will and license.

George Garfield Till was electrocuted in the Murray Hotel, Oakville, last year, and at the trial $6,000 damages were awarded the municipality and the heirs against the Bell Telephone Company, but the Appellate Court has dismissed the action as against the Bell Co.

AN APPEAL.

The men of Great Britain with their Allies are fighting not only for their own existence and to restore Belgium, but against the domination of militarism throughout the world.

From the English, Scotch and Irish many millions of our countrymen are descended. We speak the same language; our traditions, standards and ideals are the same.

In behalf of the soldiers and sailors at the front and in the hospitals the British American War Relief Fund issues this appeal to those who in this struggle sympathize with Great Britain.

It asks for warm clothing, comforts and necessities.

The articles required are mufflers, wristlets, socks (size 10 or 11), woollen gloves (size 9 and 10), abdominal belts, woollen helmets, colored handkerchiefs, woollen underdrawers, undershirts, cardigan jackets, sweaters, and tobacco, and for the hospitals, old linen, bandages, antiseptic gauze and anesthetics.

The Society has been in existence only since October 20, but contributions have been received from nearly each state of the United States, from Canada and the West Indies.

The articles already forwarded have been acknowledged by Lord Kitchener in the following cablegram:—

"First consignment of gifts from women of America for British on active service, received with much appreciation and gratitude. Letter follows."

KITCHENER
'Secretary of State for War.' "

Any cash donation will be used in the purchase of these articles.

In order that your contribution may benefit those in America as well as those abroad, all srticles will be purchased here.

No money will be sent out of this country.

Through the co-operation of British Steamship Lines all consignments are delivered in England free of charge, and the British War Office guarantees prompt delivery to the men at the front and in the hospitals.

All contributions in kind and all communications to be addressed to Mrs. Ralph Sanger, British American War Relief Fund, 200 Fifth Avenue, and all money contributions will be gladly received at the same address by Mr. Henry J. Whitehouse.

The Fund is under the patronage of the Presidents of St. Andrew's Society, The St. George's Society, The St. David's Society, and The Canadian Society.

Committee:—Lady Herbert, Pres.; Mrs. Ralph Sanger, Secretary; Mr. Henry Whitehouse, Treasurer; Judge Barlow, Mrs. A. S. Burden, Mrs. Alfred Coats, Mr. Richard Harding Davis, Mrs. J. W. Dixon, Mr. W. R. Farquhar, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mr. Elliott Gregory, Mr. Archer Huntington, Mrs. Oliver Iselin, Mrs. J. Elliot Langstaff, Mrs. John Magee, Mrs. Walter E. Maynard, Mr. John G. Milburn, Mrs. J. P. Morgan, jr., Prof. H. Fairfield Osborn, Mr. Moses Taylor Pyne, Mr. Ogden Reid, Mrs. Shaw Safe, Mrs. J. H. Sears, Mr. Norrie Sellar, Colonel R. F. Thompson, Mrs. George Vanderbilt, Mrs. H. J. Whigham, Mrs. F. W. Whitridge, Mr. F. W. Whitridge, Miss M. H. Wilcox, Mr. R. M. Stuart Wortley.

MONO CENTRE.

Mono Centre Literary Society is holding another debate on Saturday night on the subject "Resolved that Money has more Influence in the World than Brains." The affirmative will be taken by Miss Alice Parks and the negative by Miss Olive McLaine. A good programme will be provided in addition to the debate.

MONO ROAD.

Messrs. Lawrence and Soall are busy filling contracts with the farmers for sawing wood.

Mr. Wm. Wiles has the contract of cutting ice on Scott's Lake.

It is reported that Mr. George Young, of Caledon East, has disposed of his butcher business to Mr. A. Boyce, of Port Perry.

Messrs. Nelson and Cranston shipped their live stock to Hamilton last week.

The Rev. Mr. Purchase reports very liberal contributions to the Belgian Relief Fund by the churches of his circuit.

Six young men left Mono Road on Jan. 28th to join the 3rd Contingent for foreign service. Only one is a Canadian, Selwyn E. Judge, only son of Mr. W. L. Judge, our Postmaster. As he never was identified with the military in any capacity, his stepping forward at this juncture is highly commended.

POWER FROM RAIN.

Energy is wasted in every direction, although during the past two or three years considerable ingenuity has been manifested in efforts to turn natural resources to account. A correspondent in an American journal has recently pointed out what we are losing through our failure to make use of the rainfall. The district in which that observer resides was visited by a severe rainstorm, the fall of water aggregating 4.17 inches in ten hours over an area of ten square miles. He estimated the height of the raincloud to be five thousand feet, and on that basis some six million horse-power-hours. The correspondent estimates that if this energy were harnessed, four thousand arc lamps in the city streets could be kept alit therewith for four hundred and twenty-five days.

DIED.

DUKE—On Sunday, Jan. 31st, 1915, at 2133 Gerrard St., east, Toronto, Robert Duke, beloved husband of Mary Price, in his 63rd year.

The elder of Rev. W. D. Collins, Anglican rector at Exeter, Huron County, to go to the front as a commissariat has been accepted and he will leave with the third contingent as a lieutenant.

ACROSS THE CONTINENT

Atlantic and Pacific Coast Cities Linked by Telephone.

Inventive Genius Scores Another Big Triumph.

Talking by telephone across the continent, linking the Atlantic and the Pacific by a speech canal just as the big ditch across the Isthmus of Panama joins the two oceans by a waterway—that was the big feature of last week's news. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the Telephone, talks from New York to Thos. A. Watson, 3400 miles away in San Francisco. And as they talked they thought of that day thirty-nine years ago when, with much shouting and endless repetition, they achieved the first "long distance conversation" by telephone over a distance of two and one half miles, from Cambridgeport to Boston. Their trans-continental talk of Monday last over 3400 miles of mountain and valley, desert and plain, was carried on with as much ease as if they had been at opposite ends of the same room whereas the earlier one of two miles was achieved only with much labor, anxiety and uncertainty.

How account for the improvement—what has intervened to make the difference?

The question was asked of Mr. John J. Carty, Chief Engineer of the American Telephone & Telegraph, to whom belongs much of the credit for this marvellous achievement.

"What has intervened," said Mr. Carty, impressively, "is the entire art of telephony. No single device nor invention has made trans-continental speech possible, as we have it to-day. Rather it has been the cumulative effect of improvements great and small in telephone transmitter, line, cable, switchboard and every other piece of apparatus or plant required in the transmission of speech. What has intervened has been the American Telephone & Telegraph Company with its experimental and research department of 550 engineers and scientists, including four professors, post-graduate students, scientific investigators—the graduates of over 140 universities.

"When the telephone was born nothing analogous to telephone service as we now know it, existed. There was no tradition to guide, no experience to follow—an entire new art had to be created. The art of electrical engineering did not exist.

"The results achieved represent vast expenditures of money and immense concentration of effort, which have been justified by results of immeasurable benefit to the public. No local organization unaided could bear the financial or scientific burden of this work. Some results are possible only through a centralized staff, avoiding wasteful duplication of efforts, working out problems common to all for the benefit of all."

The power that sends the human voice over the telephone is scarcely greater than a summer breeze, and yet the means have been provided by which this tiny, almost imaginary impulse, made up of as many as 2000 separate vibrations a second, can be picked up by a delicate instrument, conserved over a distance of 3,400 miles and reproduced perfectly and instantly across the continent.

If it were possible for one to shout loudly enough for the sound to travel across the continent without the aid of wires it would take four hours for these sound-waves to make the journey. But when the sound waves are converted into electrical waves, as by the telephone, they travel the 3400 miles in one-fifteenth of a second.

The route of this new-transcontinental line from San Francisco is via Salt Lake City, Denver, Omaha, Chicago. At Chicago the line branches, one branch going to Pittsburg thence to New York, and the other branch to Buffalo and from there to New York. A continuation of the line also runs from Buffalo to Boston, and of the Pittsburg line to Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia.

In the line there are four wires, making it possible to carry on three conversations simultaneously. Each wire is 3400 miles long and of No. 165 inches in diameter. The total weight of wire is 2960 tons, supported by 130,000 poles.

The line is not yet open for commercial use. Arrangements are being perfected to that end and announcement of its opening for commercial purposes will not be long delayed, although much work yet remains to be done.

To Canadians this latest step in the advance of the telephone art is of especial interest, for as Dr. Graham Bell has more than once affirmed it was at Brantford, Ontario, that the telephone was born. Moreover both Paris, Ontario, and Toronto, figure in those historic experiments, which marked the beginning of this great utility.

This is the way Dr. Bell himself describes the birth of the telephone:—

"When I went from Boston to Brantford, Ontario, in the summer of 1874," he says, "I had under way, two distinct lines of investigation. On the one hand was my system of multiple telegraphy. I had reached the application of the undulatory current, the conception that if you could move an armature as the air is moved during the passage of a sound, you could transmit speech.

"On the other hand I had with me an apparatus made out of a dead man's ear for studying the movements of the air during the utterance of a sound. The membrane of the ear was like a piece of tissue paper, hardly the size of a finger nail, and the bones that were moved by that little membrane were really very heavy and massive compared with it. It suddenly struck me that if such a small membrane as that would move bones so massive in comparison, why would not a larger membrane move my piece of iron? And at that moment the telephone was born complete as a theoretical proposition, and in Brantford."

But it was not until the following year that Bell's first telephone was made. Mr. Thomas A. Watson, who last Monday talked from San Francisco to Dr. Bell in New York, was the man who built it and who heard thefirst words ever spoken over a telephone line.

HOW IT WORKS.

Prohibition Has Reduced Crime in Russia.

To the Editor:

There has been a great deal of theorizing about how prohibition of the liquor traffic would work. I would like to lay before your readers a few examples of how it does work in places that have it. I will begin with a few places in Russia.

From Orel the report is "prohibition has reduced crime by eighty per cent, as compared with previous months."

In Voronegh the police report that in the first half of July when the liquor shops were open there were in this city twenty-seven murders or other serious crimes. In the first half of August when the liquor shops were closed there were only eight.

The Police of Ekaterinodar report that crimes attributable to drunkenness have wholly ceased.

In Ekaterinodar the police report that crime has decreased ninety per cent., hooliganism has disappeared and the town is absolutely quiet.

In Saratof the monthly average of crimes has fallen from one hundred and thirty to sixty. The asylum for alcoholics is empty. The river stevedores have put on new clothes and are sending money home.

In Yaroslow the registers of the Justices of the Peace show that between the 31st of July and the 28th of August there was brought before the magistrates only one case. In the same length of time before the closure of the liquor shops the number of cases often exceeded two hundred.

I will not occupy your valuable space with any more. These are enough to show how prohibition works in places where it is carried out. In this country we seem to have got the notion that part of the taxes could not be collected if the money was not first spent in drink. From a study of how it works in other parts of the world I am convinced that our taxes, especially in the cities would be reduced twenty-five per cent. or more by prohibition. Why not? The money that is spent for crime, poverty, half of the insanity and in many other ways caused by drink would amount to a large sum.

CALEDON.

At the regular monthly meeting of our Library Board it was decided to keep the Library Building open on Wednesday afternoons from 3 to 5 and 7 to 8 o'clock, and on Saturday evenings from 7 to 9 o'clock, to meet the increasing demand for books. Many new members are being added to the library this year.

A high-class entertainment under the auspices of the Public Library will be given in the Town Hall on March 17th. Watch for further announcements.

Mrs. Griffith, of Stratford, is seriously ill with broncho-pneumonia at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wm. McCartney.

The Caledon Branch of the Women's Institute will hold an open meeting in the basement of the Presbyterian Church in Charleston on Wednesday next, Feb. 10th, at 2.30 p.m. The District President, Mrs. Dorrington, of Alton, will give an address on Institute Work. Music will be provided by Misses Vogan, Glassford and Dodds. All ladies are cordially invited to attend.

ST. MARK'S CHURCH NOTES

The annual Men's Banquet will be held on Friday of this week in the basement of the Church. It will be in the form of a Patriotic Evening, the Toasts all being of that nature. The speaker of the evening will be the Rev. Professor G. M. Wrong, M. A., Professor of History, Toronto University, who will speak on "Why Germany went to War." Only 200 tickets are being issued, and these must be secured before the evening of the banquet. Through the kindness of a Toronto firm the schoolroom will be beautifully decorated with flags and bunting. Tickets can be procured from the Rector and also from Mr. H. Shaw.

Sunday, February 14th, will be observed at St. Mark's by celebrating the anniversary of 100 years of Peace between Canada and the United States. A special form of service will be used, and special sermons will be preached.

The Organ Recitals on Sunday and Monday last by Mr. A. Simpson at St. Mark's were greatly enjoyed by the congregations at each of the Recitals. Mr. Simpson is one of the best organists that have visited Orangeville within recent years. His technique was perfect, and his playing marked by great depth of feeling and keen appreciation of the composers' works that he rendered. His combinations of the stops and couplers of the new organ at St. Mark's were exceedingly effective, and it is to be hoped he will be able to pay the church another visit before long. Thanks are also due Miss Bessie Lewis and the Choir for their very acceptable items at the recital on Monday evening.

WEST MONO PARISH.

Divine service will be held on Sunday next, Feb. 7th, as follows:—St. Matthew's, 11 a.m.; St. George's, 3 p.m. and Herald Angel, 7 p.m.

—Unsurpassed range of Scribblers now on sale at The Banner Book

Suggett-Barton.

A very pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized in Lacombe, Alta., on Jan. 1st, 1915, when Blanche, the only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Barton, was united in marriage to Charles L. Suggett, of Mirror, the Rev. Mr. Patstour officiating.

The bride looked very pretty in white liberty satin, trimmed with fur and sequins and white satin slippers.

The bridesmaid was Miss Eloise Price, and Mr. A. M. Watkins was best man. The groom's gift to the bride was a lovely piano, to the bridesmaid a gold brooch and to the best man a pearl tie pin.

The best wishes of their many friends are for a happy and prosperous wedded life.—Mirror Journal.

The groom is a son of Mrs. D. Suggett, of West Broadway.

Still-Bagnell.

Mr. Alexander Still, a well-known young farmer in Mono, and Miss Margaret Bagnell were married quietly at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. George Bagnell, lot 9, con. 3, east, Mono, at 4 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon of last week. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. A. J. Fowlie, of Camilla. After the ceremony the happy couple drove to their future home, where over 130 guests assembled and enjoyed themselves until a late hour in dancing and other amusements. Refreshments were served and an exceedingly pleasant time was spent by everybody. A large circle of friends unite in tendering their hearty congratulations.

Section Foreman Injured.

Joseph McKittrick, of Shelburne, aged about 60, section foreman of that division of the C. P. R. and George Pearson, aged 29, while pushing a hand-car ahead of them as they were examining the track on Thursday of last week near Shelburne, were run down by a snowplow driven ahead of an engine in charge of Engineer Robt. Walden and Conductor C. R. McRoberts. The big snowplow concealed the sectionmen from the engineer's view. McKittrick was seriously injured, having one arm broken, one shoulder dislocated and one leg broken in two places. Pearson escaped unhurt.

A Terrific Snow Storm.

A terrific snow storm was experienced in this section of Ontario on Monday night and Tuesday. Monday night a driving north-east wind and a heavy fall of sleet made people glad to keep indoors. Tuesday morning the wind had veered to the north and a blinding snow storm was filling highways, sidewalks and obstructing railway traffic. It was well along in the afternoon when the storm let up. By that time traffic of all kinds was at a standstill. Householders spent a good part of the day digging paths from their homes and shovelling off the sidewalks. The Toronto train reached here about three hours late, but got no further. Early in the afternoon a train was made up for Toronto. Tuesday night there were no trains from any direction. Monday night's train from Owen Sound stuck fast in the Laurel cut and did not reach Orangeville until about 7 o'clock on Tuesday morning. With a couple of freights stalled along the line and a snow plough off the track near Laurel, traffic north and west of Orangeville was completely demoralized on Tuesday. Yesterday trains were running again in all directions, but most of them were considerably behind schedule time.

THE CAMPHOR MONOPOLY.

How the Japanese Tried to Corner the World's Camphor.

Industrial history contains few more interesting studies than that of the failure of the Japanese attempt to corner camphor. Its history is little known except to the chemist and to the industrialist, and of these it is probable that not many understand the international importance of the rapid rise in the price of camphor after the Russo-Japanese war; yet few events caused the Governments of the world more serious anxiety, a fact to which the large expenditure upon secret-service work and chemical investigation in this connection bears witness.

Ten years ago the world enjoyed two varieties of camphor. There were Borneo camphor, the purer quality, of which comparatively small quantities were produced, and which was used mainly for medical purposes. In addition to this there was the coarser common camphor of commerce, whose use had increased enormously since the discovery of its employment in making celluloid by the Englishman Parkes in 1858, and since it had been employed an an indispensable ingredient in the manufacture of smokeless explosives.

Camphor is extracted by distillation from the laurel (Cinnamomum Camphora), a tree which flourishes in Japan, Formosa, parts of southern China, Cochin-China, and Java, but whose preference for Japan and Formosa is shown by the fact that in 1905 over 90 per cent. of the world's supply came from those islands. In that year the total export of the Japanese Empire (the most of which came from Formosa) amounted to over six million pounds.

It appears to have been after the Russian war that the Japanese Government first awoke to the possibilities of their practical monopoly. "As the production of camphor is practically limited to Formosa and Japan, we now control the supply of the world," wrote Yosaboro Takekoshi in 1905. Synthetic camphor had already made its appearance in 1903, but at a prohibited price. The formula discovered by the German Komppa required the oil of turpentine, which in itself is scarce, and becoming scarcer. It was accordingly hoped by the Japanese that they would be able to force up the price to a figure limited, of course, by the possibilities of synthetic camphor, but still high enough. 'We cannot,' said Takekoshi, 'permantly monopolize the industry;' but it was hoped to derive sufficient profit from a transient monopoly to finance some of Japan's naval schemes, and to relieve the very heavy taxation which oppressed the country after the war. It was realized that the camphor laurel would flourish elsewhere than in Japan and Formosa. But the Japanese seem to have been inspired with unjustified confidence in the security of the moment by the traditional methods of the Chinese distillers; for it was a dogma among the Chinese that trees could not be felled with profit for distillation until they had stood for fifty years and it apparently did not occur to the Japanese to question this belief, which, if correct, would have meant fifty years' monopoly to themselves, even if the laurels could be cultivated elsewhere. They seem accordingly to have been confident of their power to squeeze the world for a considerable period, and to retain in their hands the monopoly of an ingredient indispensable in the manufacture of explosives. They did not, therefore, hesitate to raise the price of the article some 70 per cent., and to ensure their own supplies by stimulating reforestration. In 1906 they planted three hundred and forty-six thousand trees; in 1907, one million three hundred thousand; in 1908, four million eight hundred and thirty thousand; in 1909, five million and sixty thousand. Unfortunately for the Japanese, their energy only served to call attention to their monopoly, and to nerve the world to efforts to nullify it—efforts which were very soon to be successful.

Most Governments, and particularly those of Germany, Great Britain, and the United States, devoted themselves resolutely, if unostentatiously, to experiments in producing camphor. The Americans, in particular, feared a monopoly of their Asiatic rivals in an article of military necessity, and their Department of Agriculture, by every means in its power, fostered experiments in growing camphor-trees. Seeds were procured from Formosa by secret agents—not without trouble, for the Japanese were watchful—and efforts at culture were made by the British in Ceylon, by the French in the Midi and in Madagascar, by the Germans at Anani in German East Africa, and by the United States in Texas and Florida. In 1907 the camphor acreage in Ceylon increased to one thousand one hundred and six. It was also found that the laurel flourished in Italy, and, lastly, but most important of all, in Jamaica. Jamaica has always been renowned for its production of essential oils. It now has another advantage over Formosa in the cheapness of its labor supply. Seed can be obtained at twenty-five cents a day. The Japanese are reported to be paying as much as a dollar a day in Formosa—why, it is hard to say, unless it has been found that with a lower rate of wages the monopoly is not secure against betrayal. The difference speaks for itself.

But since, even in the most favorable circumstances, some ten years are required for trees to attain their maturity, all this would not of itself have procured immediate relief if the world had been content to go on believing with the Chinese and Formosans that the precious drug could not be extracted with profit from trees that have stood for less than half a century. However, it was soon discovered that the Celastials had as little reason for this superstition as for many others. In Florida and Texas excellent results were obtained from trees of five years' growth. Some enterprising individuals went further, and reaped the young shrubs when three feet high by means of a machine similar to that used in reaping corn. The experiment was successful. Finally, an astonishing discovery was made which gave the "coup de grace" to the moribund monopoly.

The story runs as follows: it is impossible to verify it, but it is highly probable, and there is no doubt of the solid results. It illustrates what is going on daily in the industrial world. A German chemist analyzed the wood of the camphor laurel, and discovered that it yielded .61 per cent. camphor. With this, many men would have remained content; the Chinese, for example, had remained content with far less for many thousands of years. But the German, being patient and methodical, went on to analyze the twigs. He found that these yielded 1.05 per cent. He then proceeded to the green leaves, which gave 2.37 per cent., and to the dried leaves, which yielded 2.52 per cent. The dead leaves showed a fall to 1.39 per cent. It was also discovered that the leaves can be gathered without injury to the tree.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

On Wednesday evening, Jan. 27th, a very enjoyable parlor meeting was held at the home of Mrs. K. Pattullo. A varied and pleasing program was furnished, consisting of music, readings and recitations. While the program was being rendered a number of the ladies were busily engaged making and preparing bandages for the Red Cross Society. Refreshments were served and after singing the National Anthem all went home feeling that they had spent a very pleasant and profitable evening.

The Dominion organization is doing a noble work for the country. Its latest undertaking is the support of a missionary among the soldiers at Salisbury. The Orangeville Union is contributing to the expense of maintaining this missionary. Surely such a good work as this is worthy of the support of every citizen.

A GUARANTEED MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

Baby's Own Tablets are a good medicine for little ones. They are guaranteed by a government analyst to be absolutely free from the opiates and narcotics found in so-called "soothing" mixtures. They cannot possibly do harm—they always do good. Once a mother has given them to her little ones she will use no other medicine. Concerning them Mrs. Jos. Desrosiers, St. Alphonse, Que., says: "Baby's Own Tablets saved my little one's life when he was suffering from worms and I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Peel S. S. Convention.

The County of Peel Sunday School Association is holding its annual Convention in the Presbyterian Church, Streetsville, Feb. 11th and 12th. A very full programme has been provided. Mr. Preston G. Orwig, of the Provincial Association staff, is to be there. Rev. J. C. Robertson, D.D., and Rev. C. J. Cameron, B.A., of Toronto, are among the speakers. All interested in Sunday School work are earnestly desired to attend.

A Special Letter Rate.

The Post Office Department announces that arrangements have been made whereby the ordinary rate of two cents per ounce, applicable to all letters sent from Canada to the United Kingdom, will apply to letters addressed to British and Canadian troops on the Continent. The rate on ordinary letters from Canada for the Continent is five cents for the first ounce, and three cents for each subsequent ounce, so that this extension of the two cent an ounce rate to letters addressed to our soldiers on the Continent, is a decided reduction in favour of correspondence going to the soldiers.

Brampton's Waterworks

The report of Brampton's Waterworks Commission for 1914 shows receipts amounting to $11,578, of which $8,303.21 was for water rates and $1,305.91 for meter rents. The expenditure included $1,556.17 for salaries and allowances; $1498.93 for repair and expense, and $1,394.95 for debentures; $8,194.95 for extensions; $1,550.91 for services; $1,482.68 for meters, and $761.15 for pumping equipment, the last four items being included in the capital expenditure. The assets are valued at $164,353.13, and the liabilities at $47,676.33. New mains will be constructed on fifteen of the town streets during the coming summer.

"THE DEACON"

Comedy Drama in Orangeville Opera House on Feb. 10th.

An entertaining five-act comedy drama entitled, "The Deacon," will be presented in the Orangeville Opera House on Wednesday night, February 10th, under the auspices of the Orangeville Women's Institute. The play, which will be elaborately staged with all the accessories essential to a successful production, will be presented by fourteen of the town's clever young people. "The Deacon" is a temperance play of a wholesome, elevating character and yet abounding in situations that arouse and hold the close attention of an audience. The play will be presented under the management of Mrs. Banks, who has won quite a favorable reputation as an amateur actress and play directress. St. Andrew's S. S. orchestra will provide music before and between acts. Admission 25c. to all parts of the hall. Seats may be reserved at The Banner Office without additional charge.

The Dufferin Poultry Show.

Special Attraction for February Fair Day.

The fact that the Dufferin County Poultry and Pet Stock Association's first annual Winter Fair will be held on Wed. and Thurs. next, will add still another enterprising feature to Orangeville's already popular Fair Day for February. The farmers in the surrounding community will have an opportunity to see some high class fowl and pets. Entries have been received from Owen Sound, Flesherton, Brampton, Alton and a number of other outside places, as well as a large number of local entries. Entries close February 6th, and are open to all. Those having good exhibition or utility birds should encourage the Association by showing.

The Pet Stock end of the fair will be well attended to, and those having pets such as pigeons, rabbits, bantams, etc., should get in their entries as well. There will also be a large showing of geese and ducks.

All entries should be forwarded to H. A. Dorrance, Orangeville. Get into the game and help boost your favorites.

Institute Comments.

The Orangeville Women's Institute does a variety of work and does not confine its efforts entirely to cooking and dress-making classes and demonstrations, though these quite naturally have an important place in its activities. A more scientific management of domestic duties, coupled with a helpful discussion of the problems relating to true citizenship, is ever the object of Institute work. The solution of these broader problems is a goal to which it aims and toward which great progress will have been made when women shall take a place of equality in the solution of questions of state, thereby gaining the opportunity of serving their country as efficiently as they have by patient toil and unobstrusive devotion been instrumental in building up and sanctifying the home life of this great Dominion.

The Orangeville Institute has a membership of 36 with a yearly average attendance of 20 at its regular meetings on the fourth Tuesday of each month. In the early fall in response to the first call for help for homeless Belgian refugees, the Institute sent six very large bales of good winter garments. To this contribution was added a seventh prepared by some of our Public School teachers and sent in the name of the Institute to the Belgian Consul in Nova Scotia. It reached its destination in good time for the first shipment of such supplies. Our next care was a little motherless girl of our own town for whom we met several times and secured a comfortable supply of warm clothing. All this kind of work means unselfish effort and the Institute has many good members who are ever ready to respond to the test of unselfish action. To Lord Dufferin hospital during the last few weeks the Institute has supplied for the Institute room, dishes, an invalid wheel chair, two pairs of blankets, rubber sheeting and a comrade chair. Last week out of our purchase of yarn and material we sent to the soldiers forty pairs of hand-knit socks and twenty pairs of invalid bed-socks, and have now in progress of preparation $20 worth of yarn supplied by the Red Cross and hope by the middle of this month to have the socks finished and started on their journey. During the year two pictures were given, one entitled "Personality," by Mrs. Norman, of Toronto, and the other on "Paris," by Miss Hawkins, who returned to Toronto from France at the commencement of the war.

Two Teas have been given lately by Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Langford to augment the funds for the purchase of material to send aid to the soldiers. Our meetings are free, are marked by a spirit of kindly hospitality and besides giving an opportunity to do a little of the "worth while" are really enjoyable.

Hospital Notes

The monthly meeting of Lord Dufferin Chapter, Daughters of the Empire, will be held at the home of Mrs. Dahl, on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 4th, at 4 o'clock. The Executive will meet at 3 o'clock.

At the Tea given in the Ugoigo Club rooms on Saturday afternoon last under the auspices of the Regents of Lord Dufferin Chapter, the sum of $22 was realized. The Tea was given in aid of the Red Cross funds. The ladies appreciated very much the donation of cut flowers sent them by Miss McDiarmid and Mrs. Geo. Nicholson.

Mrs. Warren Groskurth, of Laurel, donated a dressed chicken to the hospital last week.

Mrs. Robert Jackson.

The death of Maggie Baldwin, beloved wife of Robert Jackson, occurred at her home, lot 27, 4th line, Erin, on Monday, January 25th, 1915. Mrs. Jackson, who was in her 43rd year, had lived all her life in the vicinity of her late home, being born at lot 28,, 5th line, Erin, and moving at the time of her marriage to Mr. Robert Jackson, December 28th, 1892, to the place of her death.

The deceased was for a long time an honored member of the Disciples Church, Mimosa, and was held in very high esteem by those who knew her. The very sudden demise of one who was known to be a sympathetic wife, a tender hearted and self-sacrificing mother and a considerate and charitable neighbor, has cast a gloom of sadness over the whole neighborhood. The deceased's life was replete with beautiful service for home and friends and church. Sweet and patient of spirit, clear of mind, with faith unwavering and hope triumphant, she awaited the coming of Death's Messenger without fear and without a murmur, ready for the transition to the greater life beyond.

The funeral, which was attended by friends and neighbors in very large numbers, was held on Wednesday, January 27th, to Huxley Cemetery, being conducted according to the dying request of Mrs. Jackson by Rev. Mr. Thorpe, of Toronto, who sang also at her request "Meet Mother in the Skies." The pall-bearers were two cousins, Mr. Leonard Awrey and Mr. John Reid, three brothers-in-law, Mr. Thomas Jackson, Mr. William Jackson and Mr. William Alexander and a brother. Mr. Edward Baldwin.

Mrs. Jackson leaves to mourn her loss, besides her husband, two daughters, Gladys Lillian, lately in attendance at Hamilton Normal School, and Margaret Burrell, five brothers, Joseph, George and Henry, of Saskatchewan, Edward and Charles, of Erin Township, and three sisters, Mrs. Joseph Loree, of Alberta, Mrs. John Loree, of Manitoba, and Mrs. Alex. McKechnie, of Saskatchewan.

Mrs. Thomas Bruce.

Mrs. Thomas Bruce, a daughter of Mr. Albert Penfield, of Caledon, died very unexpectedly at her home near Beeton on Thursday, Jan. 21st. Deceased woman, who was apparently in the enjoyment of her usual good health, dropped dead while at her work about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Mrs. Bruce was 47 years of age and was formerly a resident of Tottenham. Of late years she has lived in Tecumseth township. She was a very industrious woman and had many warm friends, all of whom learned with deep sorrow of her sudden demise. She is survived by her husband, who, with the other relatives, has the sympathy of the community in his loss. The funeral was held to Mount Tegart cemetery on Saturday following her death.

SALE REGISTER.

One of the biggest auction sales of the year will be held by Mr. Jos. E. Dyer, lot 2, 16th line, East Garafraxa, on Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 17th. Mr. Dyer's entire stock of horses, registered cattle, cattle, pigs, implements and household furniture will come under the hammer. See advt. or posters for list and all particulars. R. J. GEO. BAILEY'S DEATH.

Melancthon Township Loses an Old and Honored Resident.

George Bailey, an old, widely known and highly respected resident of Melancthon township, died at Duntroon early Wednesday morning, Jan. 27th, within two days of his 84th birthday. His death resulted from an attack of pneumonia contracted while he was attending a golden wedding celebration at Duntroon. The deceased was a prominent figure in the municipal life of his township for many years and was well-known in Orangeville through his visits to the town as a member of the County Council. The Economist gives the following sketch of his life and public career:—

Deceased was born in Dorsetshire, England, on Jan. 29th, 1831. After serving an apprenticeship of seven years in the manufacture of farm implements he went to the Isle of Guernsey, on the coast of France, where he spent thirteen months, and subsequently was engaged for four and a half years on government works at Alderney. In 1855 he married Ellen Norris, and in 1857 they decided to come to Canada, landing in Toronto on Aug. 22nd of that year. After residing in Toronto two years they came to Melancthon.

In 1880 Mr. Bailey was elected Township Councillor, which office he held for three years, being twice elected by acclamation. He was Reeve for eight years, and five elections out of the eight were by acclamation. He was also Warden of the county for one year. He was postmaster at Shrigley since 1888, and a justice of the peace from the formation of the county. He was a Reformer, and at the elections for the Provincial Legislature in June, 1890, contested the county in the Liberal interests, but was defeated. At the following municipal elections he was defeated by the late Robt. McGhee in a contest for the Reeveship. In 1897 he was elected County Councillor for a two-year term.

Deceased is survived by four sons and four daughters: Geo. E. Bailey, Shrigley; William, Shrigley; Rev. John Bailey, Toronto; Robert, on the homestead; Mrs. Malcolm Cameron, Camlachie; Misses S. A., Emma, and Minnie, Shrigley.

The sympathy of a large circle of friends is extended to the sorrowing ones in their bereavement.

DEATH OF JOHN ROGERS.

Mount Forest Loses a Useful and Respected Citizen.

Mr. W. E. Rogers was in Mount Forest last week attending the funeral of his father, the late John Rogers. The following obituary notice appeared in last week's issue of the Mount Forest Representative:—

John Rogers, saddler and harness maker, whose death occurred Saturday, was one of Mt. Forest's best known and most highly esteemed citizens. In his prime he was prominent in the town's public life, especially as a High School trustee before the days of the Board of Education. In political circles there was no better posted man, or more effective platform speaker. He was a militia veteran of the Fenian Raid, a life-long Orangeman, Liberal-Conservative and an active worker and official for years of the Methodist Church and Sunday School as well as being prominently identified with temperance work. He was born about 80 years ago in County Cavan, Ireland, and came to Canada when a young man, locating first at Kemptville, Ont., with his half-brother, Richard Hanna. After a few years in Kemptville, the two came in 1857 or 58 to Mt. Forest, where the late Mr. Rogers finished his trade, married Miss Harriet Corley, a second cousin of Mr. John Corley, of this town, and went into business for himself. In later life he passed through much bereavement during which he was called upon to part in death with three sons, his wife and daughter. His own health continued good until a few years ago when he began to fail until it was found necessary for him to go to a hospital and he passed away on Saturday at Homewood, Guelph, death being directly due to pneumonia. His body was brought to town Monday and the funeral took place Tuesday afternoon from the residence of his son, Mr. Arthur Rogers, Queen St., to the Mt. Forest cemetery. The only surviving members of his immediate family circle, his two sons, the one named and William, of Orangeville, were in attendance, also his niece, Miss Rogers, of London. Rev. Mr. Eddy, of the Methodist Church, conducted the services, assisted at the home by Rev. Mr. Cooper, Presbyterian. The members of L.O.L. 633, to which he belonged, attended in a body and added their burial service to that of the church. Members of the Board of Education also attended the funeral in a body and occupied a conveyance in the cortege. In addition to beautiful floral offerings on the casket it was draped with the Union Jack, as a just tribute to one who had not only taken up arms in his country's defence, but was known by all his friends and acquaintances as one of Britain's most loyal sons and an ardent lover of the flag. The pall-bearers were the following brethren: Wm. Stevenson, Wm. Brown, G. L. Allen, R. N. Crair, Dr. Allen, J. A. Lambert.

Death of Robt. White.

Robt. White, of Shelburne, son of the late Henry White, one of the first settlers in Mulmur, died at his home here on Friday, January 22nd. Deceased was born on lot 8, con. 2, E.H.S., Mulmur, nearly 78 years ago. Had he lived until February 7th he and his aged partner would have celebrated their golden wedding. With the exception of a few years spent in Toronto, the family has resided here since about 1875. The late Mr. White was a strong, healthy man and last winter took a great interest in curling. He was ill about ten days and the cause of death was pneumonia. He was of a very sociable disposition and was well liked by everyone who knew him. He is survived by his widow, three sons and three daughters. The sons are Richard White, merchant, of Toronto; Dr. S. T. White and J. E. A. White, druggist, of Shelburne. The daughters are Mrs. Andrew Douglas, Shelburne; Miss Minnie White, teacher, and Mrs. G. Hudson, of Toronto. Jas. White, of Pearl, Mich., is a brother and Mrs. Robt. Tait, of Shelburne, is a sister. The services at the house were conducted by the Revs. B. B. Stevenson, of Knox church, and B. P. Westgate, of St. Paul's church. The former conducted the services at the grave. The funeral was in charge of the members of L.O.L. No. 1321, Shelburne, and over eighty members marched in the procession to the cemetery on Sunday afternoon. The bereaved family have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their affliction.—Free Press.

INFORMATION FOR THE TRAVELLING PUBLIC.

CANADIAN PACIFIC TRAIN SERVICE BETWEEN TORONTO, MONTREAL AND OTTAWA.

Attention is called to the excellent night service from Toronto to Montreal and Ottawa via Canadian Pacific. Train No. 22 leaving Toronto Union Station at 11.40 daily, carries electric lighted sleepers, compartment observation car from Toronto to Montreal, and Toronto to Ottawa. This train runs via Lake Ontario Shore Line, due Montreal 8.55 a.m. daily, the Ottawa sleeper arriving in Ottawa 7.25 a.m. daily. Smoking is permitted in the lounge or observation or observation room of the Buffet Library Observation Compartment Car Toronto to Montreal, and arrangements have been made whereby porters on this car will press clothes for passengers at very reasonable charges.

Being the last night train from Toronto for Montreal and Ottawa, it gives the travelling public the opportunity of spending the entire evening with their families, or enables them to attend the theatre and other places of amusement, and still have plenty of time to take the train. Sleepers are placed for occupancy at 10.00 p.m. at Toronto Union Station, enabling passengers who so desire to retire at that time.

Dining Car is attached at Smiths Falls, every morning, serving breakfast into Montreal, so that business men may proceed direct to their offices or appointments immediately on arrival.

The Canadian Pacific operates a high class passenger train from North Toronto Station at 10.00 p. m. daily, carrying standard electric lighted sleepers and compartment car for Montreal—and sleeper Toronto to Ottawa. Train is due Montreal 7.35 a.m. daily, and Ottawa car reaches that point at 7.25 a.m. daily.

A solid night train is also operated from Toronto Union Station to Ottawa leaving Toronto 10.50 p.m. daily, this train carrying standard electric lighted sleepers and compartment car, due Ottawa 7.25 a.m. daily. Carries from Smiths Falls to Ottawa the standard sleepers for that point, leaving North Toronto at 10.00 p.m. and the standard sleepers leaving Toronto Union Station at 11.40 p.m. daily, so that Ottawa passengers may take their choice of either one of these three trains, and reach Ottawa at exactly the same time.

The Canadian limited No. 20 via Lake Ontario Shore Line route leaves Toronto daily 9.00 a.m. for Montreal, connecting at Smiths Falls for Ottawa, stopping at important places, carrying Observation Parlor Car, Dining Car, and first and second class coaches.

PORTER IN PEEL.

Reeve of Toronto Gore was Elected Warden.

Business Transacted at Meeting in Brampton Last Week.

The first meeting of the County Council of Peel for 1915 commenced on Tuesday, the members all being present. After taking the oath of qualification the clerk asked for nominations for the position of Warden. There were four nominees as follows: McCabe, of Albion, Milner, of Brampton, Bell, of Chinguacousy, and Porter, of Toronto Gore. Messrs. Milner and McCabe each received five votes, the next ballot showing nine for Mr. Porter, which gave him the coveted honor. Mr. Porter's mover and seconder, Mr. Pallett and Mr. Rutledge, escorted him to the chair amid the applause of the members and of those in the chamber. In returning thanks for the honor, Mr. Porter said that while he was naturally anxious to be warden of the county, he had given up hopes of securing it this year and was therefore all the more delighted at the support of his fellow councillors. The honor, he said, was one which might well be coveted by any citizen of the county and he would regard it as a special honor to the township he represented rather than to himself. The work of the year would have his best attention and he asked for the consideration and assistance of all the members. There were questions coming forward which would require a good deal of care at this time, when business generally is somewhat quiet, and the financial resources of the country fully taxed. He would also endeavor to have the business of the different sessions carried through as promptly as the circumstances would permit.

The present warden is not the first person of the name to be honored with the wardenship of Peel. In 1875 and again in 1884 Mr. Wm. Porter, father of Mr. John Porter, filled the position. Only two other men representing Toronto Gore have filled the warden's chair since 1867. They were Walter Watson, in 1891, and George T. Ward in 1906.

The standing committees for 1915 were appointed as follows: Finance—Mr. Milner, Chairman; Messrs. Elliott and McCabe; Equalization of Assessment —Mr. Elliott, Chairman, Messrs. Lightheart, Pallett, Porter, Falconer, Leavens, Beatty, Quinn and McCabe; Education— Mr. Falconer, Chairman, Messrs. Leavens and Beatty; Printing and Contingencies—Mr. Leavens, Chairman, Messrs. McCabe and Rutledge; Miscellaneous Communications — Mr. Rutledge, Chairman, Messrs. Armstrong and Pallett; Agriculture—Mr. McCabe, Chairman, Messrs. Quinn and Beatty; County Property, Roads and Bridges—Mr. McCaugherty, Chairman, Messrs. Lightheart and Quinn.

Reeve Leavens, of Bolton, was unable to vote for the wardenship, the village clerk having failed to attach the seal of his certificate of election. This is not the first time a slip of this kind has occurred. Twenty-five years ago the three representatives from Chinguacousy, Messrs. Lightheart, Crawford and Pickering, came to the council without having their certificates properly signed. Forty-six years ago this month David Kirkwood, the present clerk of the county, came down from Caledon without a certificate. In those days there was no C.P.R. and there were no telephones, but the stage went up at night and brought down the certificates the following morning, and the newly elected Caledon representative was qualified for business.

The statement of the Brampton High School Board contained the following information:—Cost of maintenance, 1914, $9673.33; Legislative grant, $1129.82; Fees paid by county pupils, $599.00; Attendance of all pupils during 1912, 22849 days; 1913, 23070 days; 1914, 23977 days. After deducting the amount of the legislative grant and the fees paid by county pupils the sum asked for is $3,316.

The following requests from neighboring high schools for payment for pupils attending from County of Peel were received: —Georgetown, $472.58; Orangeville, $575.75; Weston, $191.84.

On motion of Mr. Pallett the members of the council were made members of the committee on county bridges.—Peel Banner.

DO NOT PLUNGE

The plunger generally loses heavily in the end. True, the man who never takes a chance seldom becomes wealthy, but it is equally true that the steady, thoughtful man, who weighs each important move carefully before making it, never goes bankrupt and generally keeps considerably ahead of the game, be it farming or other business. Just now there is a great tendency for the farmer to neglect live stock operations and plunge into grain growing, particularly wheat. Wheat and coarser grains are high in price and the war may force them even higher, but conditions do not warrant the growing of wheat to the total exclusion of live stock and other branches of farming, for nothing is surer than that wheat must come down when conditions become normal again, and the drop will be sudden and disastrous to the man who depends on wheat alone. Besides, all are agreed that to keep land in a high state of fertility and in that tilth which ensures big yields, it is necessary to practice mixed farming and rotation of crops. "Some stock on every farm," should be our ideal. A prominent man in Western Canada affairs says this of his country. It is even more true of the Eastern and Central Provinces. It might be safely changed to "more stock on every farm." Men are farming not for one year, not for five years or ten years but for a lifetime, and they, if they are good farmers, desire to leave the land to their children in better tilth and more fertile than when they started on it. If so, do not plunge. We on knew a man who plunged ever year. One year it would be all wheat, another year all clover or alfalfa, another year all sugar beets and so on and the unhappy experimenter always happened to hit a year of crop failure in his particular line, or a year of extremely low prices which scarcely afforded him a living. His changes were costly, and while his neighbours enjoyed the prosperity which came of steady progress in mixed farming with several branches to fall back upon, he stood still or went backward. It is a good time to distribute effort over a wide field in agricultural endeavor.

THE DOLLAR-A-DAY MYTH.

German Prisoners Are Well Treated But They're Not Paid.

The "charge" has been made, it charge it can be termed, that the German and Austrian prisoners interned at Stanley Barracks, are treated with undue consideration. So firm a hold has this idea got in the imagination of some portion of the public at least, that the assertion is freely made by the fellow "who knows it for a fact," that the prisoners even receive a dollar a day for any work they may do around their place of confinement. Such rumors, stories and "relations of facts" increase, multiply and become prolific simply as a result of the close guard that is kept over the prisoners, and the fact that they are cut off so completely from everyday life that the general public knows next to nothing as to how they fare.

When it became necessary to have a detention camp in Toronto, the military authorities altered and "fortified" the old Dragoon building to make is suitable for its new class of occupants. The windows were all closely barred with heavy steel rods, the wooden doors were sheathed in iron, and even the small port-holes, part of the original ventilating system, through which a large-sized rabbit couldn't have squirmed, were barricaded up with sheet iron.

In each of the five dormitories there are sixteen cots of the same pattern. Make and quality the same as those supplied to the non-commissioned officers at the Exhibition camp. The rooms are well-heated, and so far as physical comfort is concerned, the prisoners have no cause to complain. The bugle does not sound the "lights out" in the detention camp. The lights burn the whole night through, so that the guard outside may peep through the small glass aperture in the door and satisfy himself that all is well within. In wet weather these dormitories are the prisoners' sitting rooms, as well as their sleeping apartments. Here, during the day time, when the weather is unfavorable outside, and they are not needed to do fatigue duty, they may retire and read books on any subject almost from the Descent of Man to Higher Civilization.

But they must not see a newspaper or a magazine. Some of them think that the denial of this luxury is a welcome relief, but from the anxiety expressed in the questions put to the guards, others would give all their worldly wealth for a resume of the war's events to date. In the daytime, when the weather is not too unpleasant, the prisoners live in the open air. An erection, colloquially referred to as the "bull-pen," is provided for them on the lawn in front of their sleeping quarters. This area is enclosed by a high wire and steel fence, inside of which the interned exercise themselves by playing games, walking, lying, sitting, rolling or loitering. It is needless to add that the guards are never absent and never asleep. On high pedestals they stand with loaded rifles and fixed bayonets, and the six men thus armed in the day time, and the double guard at night, is all-sufficient to keep splendid order and prevent any outbreak of riotous conduct.

Exactly the same rations, in quantity and quality, are supplied to the prisoners as are supplied to the overseas contingent in the adjoining camp. The work they have to do is not heavy. It consists chiefly of tidying up the barrack square, cutting the lawns, sometimes they may have to repair a sewer pipe that is out of order, or help in the routine work if assistance is needed.

Indigestion and Headaches

Arising From Constipation, Cured and Regular Habits Established by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

In the western Provinces, where so many thousands live far from doctors and drug stores, very many rely on Dr. Chase's medicines to cure disease and maintain health and strength. This letter gives some idea of what perfect control Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills exert over the most common ills of life.

Mrs. H. K. Hewer, farmer's wife, Eastburg, Alta., writes:—"For about ten years I suffered from constipation, indigestion, headache and languid feelings. Treatment from two or three doctors afforded only temporary relief, so I turned to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and with most satisfactory results. Headaches have disappeared, regular habits established and general health very much better. Both my husband and I can speak highly of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, as we have both been greatly benefited by them." One pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

RURAL DEPOPULATION.

(Weekly Sun.)

The statistics of population gathered by the Ontario Department of Agriculture from the returns of municipal assessors have been proved by the Dominion census a trustworthy source of information. They showed, according to an analysis made by the Sun some time ago, that from 1911 to 1913 the rural or township population of old Ontario decreased in forty counties 30,185 and increased in five counties 3,046. There was a net loss in two years of 27,139.

The tide seems to have turned. Comparing the statistics of township population in these counties taken from the assessment reports of last spring, with the statistics of 1913, it appears that only twenty-two counties show the following losses:

Bruce	966
Dufferin	188
Dundas	148
Durham	505
Elgin	113
Grenville	204
Grey	562
Hastings	52
Huron	499
Lambton	508
Lanark	250
Leeds	57
Lennox and Addington	186
Manitoulin	198
Muskoka	113
Norfolk	43
Northumberland	283
Peel	314
Perth	32
Prescott	485
Prince Edward	140
Stormont	25
	5,961

The following counties show gains:

Algoma	187
Brant	658
Carleton	2,465
Essex	349
Frontenac	659
Glengarry	889
Haldimand	199
Halton	338
Kent	20
Lincoln	386
Middlesex	189
Ontario	500
Oxford	263
Parry Sound	76
Peterboro	112
Renfrew	1,930
Russell	384
Simcoe	50
Victoria	225
Waterloo	1,670
Welland	222
Wellington	1,250
Wentworth
York, including the township of York	1,152

The township population, therefore, increased during the year 1913-14 by 6,098. The condition of the farm population is, however, not so favorable. An increase in Ontario County is due to the inclusion of the inmates of the asylum in East Whitby. The gains in Carleton, Brant, Middlesex, Wentworth, York are due almost entirely to urban overflow. The gains in Lincoln and Welland are due to the new Welland Canal. There is probably an error in the figures for Russell, as there is in those for Durham, which ascribe a loss of nearly five hundred to the township of Hope.

The change in the movement of the farm population, which is clear in the figures for the counties removed from public works and urban overflow is due to the contraction of credit in the early fall of 1913. It proves that the main motive of rural depopulation was the pursuit of gain. Although we are sure that the assessment reports for 1913 and succeeding years will show an increase of the farm population, we are not hopeful that the cult which makes its living by exhortation will become less zealous or turn as it ought to the promotion of measures to increase the profit of farm industry.

The Meaford and St. Vincent Agricultural Society, at their 63rd annual meeting were unanimous in registering a protest against the proposed action of the Government in reducing grants to fairs.

THE LOST ART

The Stupendous Task That Was Set a Lover

By CHAUNCEY THOMAS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"No, sir!"

"But why not?"

"Young man, I have not the slightest objection to you personally. Your family, your character, are above reproach, but financially, my dear sir, financially. Ethel has been raised accustomed to everything that money can buy, and to be candid, my dear sir, what have you?"

Old Herrington, millionaire president of the First National bank, tilted back in his chair and gazed, half in compassion, half in amusement, yet with a show of regard, at the doleful young man before him.

A fine, strapping specimen of manhood Philip Stone was, but just now he appeared all dejection.

"Then I cannot marry Ethel?" he asked ruefully.

"I am very sorry, but I must say no."

"But could I had I the money?"

"Well, my boy, that is another question, but I am not certain. Yes, I will say positively that if you were able to support her you would have my full consent."

"How much?" asked the young man laconically.

"Good! That sounds like business," responded the banker, bringing his feet flat on the floor. "Well, I think I would risk you with a hundred thousand dollars."

"A hundred thousand suns!" muttered the young fellow. "To tell you the flat truth, Mr. Herrington, I have nothing but an income of less than a hundred dollars a month from my salary."

"My dear Stone," said the elder man earnestly, "I admire you immensely, and of all young men I know I would choose you, if you had the money, for Ethel's husband. Now, Ethel is barely eighteen and can well afford to wait. You may have her on this condition:

"WHAT HAVE YOU?"

I will advance you $1,000 in cash today upon your promise not to see Ethel for a year, and if at the end of that time you have not $100,000 in cash or the prospects of it, which I alone must decide, then you will never see Ethel again. On the other hand, if you have the money you may marry her a year from today if she is willing."

"Yes, Philip, that is what I mean."

The young man gazed thoughtfully at the carpet for many moments.

"Agreed!" he said, putting out his hand.

With one hand the banker took the proffered grasp, while with the other he reached for his private check book.

Three minutes later Philip Stone was bidding his all but to be father-in-law goodby. In his pocket was a check for $1,000.

"Tell me, Mr. Herrington, what shall I do to get this fortune and Ethel within a year, for get both or them I will?"

"Go to the ant, thou sluggard," smiled the old man, with a kindly grasp of Philip's hand that took all the sting out of the epithet.

Philip Stone left the bank and sought the seclusion of a quiet, sunny nook in the park. For awhile he sat and planned and schemed, but to no purpose.

Then the old man's advice came to his mind. "Go to the ant, thou sluggard," and as a forlorn hope he began idly to watch a city of insects at his feet.

Red ants they were, busily engaged in repairing the havoc wrought by a passing hoof.

Then an inspiration thrilled him. With his penknife he carefully tore the ant hill to pieces, stopping here and there and brushing vigorously to avoid the stings of the brave little home defenders. In his handkerchief he placed a double handful of the white larvae—embryonic ants.

Gently knotting the handkerchief together and putting it carefully in his coat pocket, he caught the nearest cab and gave the order, "Keen & Bishop, Broadway, bullion dealers."

An hour later, when he returned home, in one pocket was a pint of red ants' eggs, in the other a thousand dollars in the shape of six pounds of unrefined gold dust.

Then he sent Jones, the man of all work about the house, to the florists for some very fine earth free from all sandy particles.

On Jones' return he took a peck of this earth and sifted it through a fine sieve; then with it he mixed the gold dust and put all but a handful in a glass jar.

He carefully deposited the ants' eggs in the jar on top of the earth and over them lightly sprinkled the remaining handful. This done, he put the whole in the sun.

In a week they came, several hundred vigorous young ants with unheard of energy for ant hill building, but with no material with which to work except the grains of gold dust scattered throughout almost microscopic dust. But, heavily handicapped as they were, they went vigorously to work.

In two weeks a tiny hill, a genuine ant hill of pure gold, was erected within the jar. Philip watched this process with huge delight. Soon that golden hill was alive with white larvae, eggs of a new generation. When they, too, had become ants he destroyed the hill and once more mixed the gold with the dust. Again the little workers sorted it all out and built a hill of gold.

Before long the house was full of white larvae, which in time turned into a third generation of ants accustomed to handling nothing but gold.

But this was not his plan. Six months had passed, and still he was no nearer the hundred thousand dollars or Ethel than before. But he had gained this much—he had a plan that, to his mind, at least, promised certainty, so that day he applied for a two weeks' vacation from the fruit house where he was bookkeeper.

Incidentally he asked for and received a pass to Arizona and return. Then away to Arizona went Philip Stone and his trained ants.

He returned to New York, went quietly to work recording peaches and prunes and said nothing.

Five months passed, still no $100,000. But two weeks more were left when Philip appeared one morning before Mr. Herrington, the millionaire banker.

"Well, Philip, my boy, have you got it?" asked the old gentleman eagerly.

"Don't know, sir. That is what I want you to go and see," responded the young man.

"Where?" asked the elder.

"Arizona," said Philip.

"Mining?" said the old gentleman.

"I don't know, sir," said Philip. "I want you to go and see with me. Will you?"

The old man rubbed his bald pate reflectively.

"Philip, you're a genius. My physician told me I needed a change of scene and a higher altitude. We'll go to Arizona. Be ready to start in the morning."

A week later Philip Stone and Banker Herrington stood on the high arid plateau thirty miles west of Phoenix, Ariz.

"Philip, my boy, I don't see any mine here," said the old gentleman. Then he looked at Philip suspiciously.

"Perhaps the poor boy is unbalanced," mused the old gentleman, "brooding over all this. I was cruel to him, for he is not the kind and he is not the breed to plan anything irregular."

"No mine?" said Philip, with the sunshine in his face.

"No mine," repeated the old gentleman.

"Look at your feet, sir," suggested Philip joyously. "You're standing in an ant hill, sir."

Banker Herrington looked instantly at his feet, at the ant hill. It was a mound two feet high of pure gold.

"There's Ethel, sir," said Philip.

The old gentleman gazed with open mouth. He reached down, took a handful of sand—gold it surely was, half a bushel, and easily $100,000 worth.

He reached over and took Philip by the hand.

"Allow me to congratulate you, Philip, my boy; you have done it. Tell me, how did you find it?"

"I find it, sir? I didn't. I did it by forcing three generations of hill building red ants to collect gold dust when they'd nothing else with which to build. I bred into them the instinct to collect nothing but gold. Six months ago I brought them out here and planted them. You see the result."

The old gentleman saw and then and there gave Philip his full consent. On their pack horses they took that ant pile to civilization.

Philip had won Ethel. The old man was delighted. Philip was still more delighted, but the most delighted of all was Ethel.

Banker Herrington enthusiastically proclaimed that he had the most intelligent son-in-law in existence, for the supply of ants is unlimited, and in the sands of Arizona are undoubtedly billions of gold dust that, for lack of water, can never be washed.

But in destroying that golden ant hill for the sake of his gold they had unwittingly killed all the trained inhabitants.

Philip could never again breed another hill like them. It is now one of the lost arts.

But the motto engraved on the Herrington-Stone escutcheon reads, "Go to the ant, thou sluggard."

A Surprise Promised for the Germans.

Considerable interest has been aroused by the mammoth engines of destruction which are being employed by the German armies. Terrible tales have been told of the eleven and seventeen-inch Krupp weapons; but it may be said, without depreciating the powers of the enemy, that these stories are considerably exaggerated. The existence of these weapons has been known to military experts since the day the first of them appeared on the testing-range of its creators. A friend of the writer, who has been responsible for many important developments in artillery weapons, and who saw these guns under test upon the Krupp ranges, maintains that neither of these terrible howitzers has yet been used, but that the 16 and a half centimetre—four and a quarter inch—howitzers, with which the German army is well equipped, have been mistaken for them. The former were employed against Liege, Namur, and Antwerp fortifications with deadly effect. No occasion has yet arisen for the use of the larger weapons, although the eleven-inch gun was being dragged southward and was to be used for the reduction of the fortifications of Paris. Fortunately, however, the transport proved too difficult, and the guns became stranded in the country along the River Aisne. The forty-two centimetre howitzer, which the same informant also saw under trial at the testing ranges, has a life of only about thirty rounds. The shell weighs nearly a ton, while the firing of a round represents an expenditure of twelve hundred pounds. The weight of the weapon precludes its movement by ordinary systems of haulage, and it can be moved only over a railway. The shell, when fired at a vertical angle of sixty-five degrees, has a range of between eight and ten miles, attains an altitude of about three miles, and travels at a speed of one thousand feet per second upon leaving the muzzle. The flight may be followed with ease even by the naked eye, while with glasses the action of the revolving turtle, which occurs when the missile has reached the highest point of its trajectory, is plainly visible. Expert artillerists, who are fully cognizant of the Krupp trend in gun evolution, evince slight regard for this weapon, and emphatically declare that 'its bark is worse than its bite.' The forty-two centimetre weapon is claimed as the modern wonder of the artillery world; but as a matter of fact the British force is just as powerfully equipped; and when the time arrives for bombarding the fortresses guarding the German frontier it will be the Germans, as well as other nations, who will be surprised in turn. The field artillery of the artillery world; but as a matter of the most powerful in the world, it will be found that our siege weapons will fully maintain our claim to pre-eminence in this particular field of human endeavor.—Chamber's Journal.

ST. MARK'S BANQUET

Prof. Wrong Tells Why Germany Went to War.

Over 200 Guests Present at Big Gathering.

The men of St. Mark's Church held their annual banquet in the basement of the Church on Friday night. The affair was a splendid success, about two hundred guests being present. The banquet took the form of a patriotic evening and the decorations were of a patriotic character, including numbers of Union Jacks, French tri-colours, large British ensigns, and red and blue bunting. A sumptuous repast was served under the direction of the Women's Auxiliary, whose efforts contributed materially to the success of the banquet.

After the removal of the covers a number of toasts were proposed and were responded to in bright and eloquent addresses. Dr. James Henry occupied the chair, performing the duties of his position in a most acceptable manner.

The opening toast to "The King" was honored by the entire company rising and singing the National Anthem with great enthusiasm. The first speaker was Mr. W. G. Hyland, Manager of the Bank of Hamilton, who responded to the toast "Our Allies." Mr. Hyland emphasized the significance of the term "Allies" as relating to the present war. Japan, one of our allies, was now acting in accord with Russia, a former enemy. France and Russia had both been enemies of Great Britain at one time, but were now fighting side by side with British soldiers against the common enemy. Servia and Belgium, both small countries, were doing their part in the common cause and had shown inspiring courage and daring in the face of tremendous difficulties. Belgium had suffered terribly, its homes had been destroyed, its lands devastated and thousands of its children left fatherless, but the Allies, would see that reparation would be made to the brave little nation at the end of the war.

Mr. Hyland's address was followed by a song by Mr. J. E. Jessop. Mr. Jessop's number the "Song of the Allies," by a Canadian author, was received with great heartiness. As an encore Mr. Jessop sang "The Veterans' Song."

The toast "The Empire" was followed by all singing "Rule Britannia. Mr. M. J. Leighton, of Mono, who responded, stated that The Empire was too big a subject and confined his remarks to Church matters.

The "Army and Navy" was responded to by Mr. A. A. Hughson, who emphasized the fact that the maintenance of the rights and liberties of the Empire depended on the British Navy. At the beginning of the present war Britain had practically no army. She was unprepared for war so far as the army was concerned, but in a few weeks after the outbreak of hostilities was able to place 150,000 highly trained men in the battlefield. Belgium had offered stiff resistance and had checked the Germans in their advance in the early stages of the war, thus giving France and Britain time to get men on the firing line and foil the German plans for the speedy conquest of Paris. Mr. Hughson referred to the important part the colonies were taking in the war and expressed the opinion that the Canadians and Australians would acquit themselves creditably. The Canadians, he predicted, would be in at the finish when the allied armies made their triumphant march into Berlin. Speaking of the Navy the speaker laid emphasis on the fact that Canada depended entirely on the British navy to protect its shores, its trade routes and its trade with other countries. Australia had already taken steps toward the creation of a navy but Canada had not done anything in this direction. Mr. Hughson cited the Heligoland engagement, the battle off the Falkland Islands and the recent North Sea battle as proofs that the British navy would worthily maintain its best traditions. It was owing to the effectiveness of the navy that the world found it possible to carry on trade on the high seas in much the usual manner. Mr. Hughson closed by predicting an ultimate victory for the allies, who were, he said, unprepared at the commencement of the war, but were now in much better shape to carry on a successful war than the Germans and Austrians.

"Our Guest," the important toast of the evening, was proposed by Sheriff Endacott, and responded to by Professor Geo. M. Wrong, M.A., one of the professors of Toronto University. Professor Wrong, who spoke on the subject, "Why Germany Went to War," said that the war was caused by Germany's desire for world control. In earlier times the Church had striven to gain control over the State. In more recent times Louis XIV. of France and Napoleon Bonaparte had endeavored to dominate the whole world, but had failed. Now Germany is making an effort for world dominion. The speaker had lived in Germany and at that time admired the German people. Developments since the opening of the war had astonished him. During times of peace he had found the German people divided on the question of militarism, but now the people are welded in the struggle for the Fatherland. He believed that the people had been misled as to the real cause of the war and the issues at stake. One reason why the Germans had been so easily led into the present conflict was due to the great victories they had won in the last fifty years. From 1864 to 1870 Germany was victorious in three great wars. In the war with Denmark she won the provinces of Schleswig and Holstein. Then followed the defeat of Austria and the humiliation of France in 1870-71. Flushed with these victories Prussia was seized with the idea of becoming a great world power. The military strength of the nation was developed until the Prussians had become imbued with the idea that it was possible to conquer the world. Democratic countries, Prof. Wrong stated, are not likely to desire war. The minds of the people are too much occupied with matters of education, social and business affairs to bother about war. Germany is not ruled by a democratic people. As a matter of fact the people have no voice in deciding whether the country shall have war or peace. Germany has a very small and exclusive ruling class. Military power is supreme. The German Empire, it should be remembered, is very young. Canada is itself four years older, but while Germany has the faults of an untrained youth Canada has inherited the political traditions of the Mother Country. The Germans are children in politics. Their energies are misused by a small political class. The people have no control over the Government. The Reichstag, which represents the people, has no political power. The franchise in Prussia is based on the amount of taxes the subject pays. Germany is so thoroughly under the control of the military class that a man cannot change his boarding house without notifying the police. To obey is the prime essential of good citizenship as understood in Germany. The Press is virtually controlled and inspired by the Government. Free speech, as we understand it, is unknown. Public meetings are broken up by the police if the speakers happen to become too outspoken, although to a Britisher the speeches would seem very mild indeed.

In Britain, Prof. Wrong continued, the civil power was supreme, while in Germany the army was above Parliament and subject only to the control of the Sovereign. Germany was filled with ambition, envied England and wanted to add to her territory. Her policy of maintaining an enormous standing army was due to her belief that her neighbors were conspiring against her. The Christian religion teaches the strong to protect the weak. Germany believes in the doctrine of the survival of the fittest. She believes that might will prevail. Canadians, the speaker said, have not fully realized the significance of this war. The very existence of the British Empire is at stake. Canada has made Britain's cause her own and must be prepared to send more men to the front and to do her share in caring for the suffering. There would be no disarmament as the result of this war. Britain must retain command of the seas. Canadians must not lose faith in the Empire, but must prepare for a long, bitter fight for liberty, which is after all a stronger force than great armaments.

The Banquet was brought to a close by singing "Tipperary" and "Auld Lang Syne."

Excellent music was furnished by St. Mark's orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Russell Morrow.

Vice-Presidents—John Park, Orangeville; Austin Richardson, Grand Valley; Wm. Sime, Amaranth; James Dodds, Mono; Wm. Park, East Garafraxa; T. R. Huxtable, Melancthon; Wm. Hunter, Mulmur; Thomas Sime, East Luther.

Secretary-Treasurer—W. L. Craig, Grand Valley.

The Association decided to place a candidate in the field for the House of Commons and tendered the nomination to ex-Warden T. C. Dryden, of Riverview. Mr. Dryden asked for a few days to consider the matter before accepting.

Resolutions of confidence in the Liberal Oppositions at Ottawa and Toronto were adopted, also a resolution of sympathy with the family of the late George Bailey, a prominent Dufferin Liberal and an ex-Warden.

A unanimous resolution, proposed by John Park, favored the calling of a Provincial Liberal convention at an early date to formulate a platform.

An Acknowledgment.

A short time ago the Ugoigo Club forwarded a contribution of $15.00, the proceeds of a patriotic euchre party, to the Canadian Red Cross Society. The following acknowledgment has just been received by Mrs. J. A. Arnott, treasurer of the Society.

Mrs. J. A. Arnott,
Treasurer, Ugoigo Club,
Orangeville, Ont.

Dear Madam:

I herewith enclose official acknowledgment of the welcome subscription from the Ugoigo Club. Money which can be applied instantly to our urgent needs is perhaps of all things the most useful contribution.

Yours truly,
H. E. Harcourt Vernon,
General Secretary.

THE SALISBURY FLOODS.

Nothing Like Them in the Last Thirty Years.

Canadian Soldiers Are Royally Entertained by English People.

The following are extracts from several letters which Mr. and Mrs. B. McGuire have received from their son, Lieut. H. B. McGuire, of the First Canadian Overseas Contingent:

Salisbury, Eng., Jan. 6, 1915.

My Dear Mother:

I am in Salisbury for a week on police picquet. I came in on Tuesday and will be here for a week or perhaps only until Friday when it is rumored that all these duties will be taken over by other troops to allow us to move.

I am sitting in my room at the "Red Lion Hotel," a beautiful large room and plenty of easy chairs. "Boots" has just lit the grate fire for me and it is quite cheerful. It is a treat to sleep in a large soft bed again and have a real hot bath. The floors of our tents are not very soft for sleeping on.

My work is fairly easy and nice for a change. To-day I am on town picquet with a bunch of men and we see that no troops are in here that should not be. Any that are late getting back from leave we must arrest and of course any that are not behaving properly must come along with us to the guard room. To-morrow I will be on station picquet and the next day on transport, when I deliver all prisoners to their respective camps by motor truck. There are a bunch of officers here and we change about in our duties.

The floods in this country have got quite general. It is difficult getting around this city on account of the water. For 30 years there has not been a flood like it. As we came in by motor truck we had to plow through lots of water and there were great crowds around watching the fun in the water. A picture man was taking movies of the traffic through the flooded area and he got our jolly Tommies in it.

The water is running through houses and cellars are full. People cannot get along some streets except by boats or high waggons. I will mail a few pictures of it to the girls. The beautiful cathedral is flooded too.

Bustard Camp, Jan. 10, 1915.

I am back in camp again. I was relieved of my duties in Salisbury on Saturday and am back sleeping in the tent on the hard floor once again. We have been in England now about three months and we have had 62 days rain, so it is not much wonder we are flooded out.

Friday last I had a strenuous day. I was still on duty at Salisbury and I had to deliver prisoners to the various camps by motor trucks. They are not comfortable to ride in and the roads have become terribly cut up with the heavy traffic. My first trip took me to all the camps with prisoners, a distance of about fifty miles around through floods and mud. I got in at 2 p.m. and started around the same route in the evening and got in at 9.30 p.m. cold and wet. The evening trip was pretty fast. I had to go from Salisbury to Amesbury, to Bulford camp, to Sling Plantation, to Bustard, to Shrewton, then back the Seven Villages Road through flooded roads. There was a dance in Salisbury which I wanted to attend. I got to it about 10.30 and it lasted until 3 a.m., so I had a big evening of it. The guests were all officers and ladies of Salisbury. There were about 150 there. The dance hall was the banquet hall in the Council Chambers—a very elaborate English room with highly polished floor, beautiful paintings and fire places. There was a splendid orchestra, pretty ladies and lovely gowns. The lounge rooms and lunch room were beautiful. All the dances were waltzes and one step. Everyone was so friendly to us. They were mostly all strangers, but we soon became acquainted.

Saturday our picquet was relieved. A number of our officers went to Portsmouth to play English ground hockey with the officers of the Royal Marines. I could not go but they had a splendid time.

Bill and I had an invitation for the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Newbury, of Amesbury, so we went by train there. We had tea with Mrs. Huxham. Miss Huxham and Miss Whistler. George Endacott often visits the Huxhams. It was a very homelike place and we took turns in turning Mrs. Huxham's sewing machine. She had three girls, about Alice and Louise's size, and it was great playing with them while they were dressing their dolls. The English people think the Canadians are great, with their free and easy ways. We have upset a great many of their old customs alright. We had dinner at the Whistlers, and afterwards Bill and I went to Newberry's, where we stayed until Sunday night. They were waiting for us and we had a pleasant evening talking around the hearth. They do everything for us. In the morning our shoes would appear beautifully shined and we had a hot cup of tea in bed, then get up for breakfast at 10 a.m., lunch at 12.30, the never failing tea at 5 p.m. and dinner at 8.30 p.m. We had a delightful time all day there—music and long stories. Canada is receiving a great deal of free advertising wherever we Canadians go. Colonel Holbrook came in for a while and he read us letters from his son, Commander Holbrook, of Dardanelles fame. The Colonel is awfully jolly and told us many good stories. We drove back to camp about 10 p.m.

I guess you will think we are enjoying ourselves alright, but it is a treat to get away for a while from the mud, cold, wet and lonesomeness of camp. The canvas tents are not very tempting.

There are many rumors of our going to the front soon, although some say not until March. Some claim the war will be over in a few months; others that it will last long. However we will be disappointed if we do not move soon as we confidently expect to.

Bustard Camp, Jan. 17, 1915.

This has been a real pleasant Sunday in camp—the first for some time. It was quite crisp and cold but bright this morning. We paraded to church at 8.30 a.m. We have battalion church in the large Y.M.C.A. tent, by our own Chaplain. This afternoon four of us walked over the downs to Shrewston and back six miles.

I would like to get some Canadian mail to-night. Everyone is anxiously awaiting its arrival. Something has delayed it for there has not been any since last Sunday. What a whoop will go up when the bugler sounds the mail call.

Last week we spent in battalion marches of many miles and entrenching. I thoroughly enjoyed the trenching, but it is rather hard work as after one foot of earth is got through there are four or five feet of hard chalk to be dug. We made good work of it and I can handle the pick and shovel with lots of them. I always help the men by doing my share and helping them in their own work, rather than stand around and have them do it alone. We have a splendid bunch of men.

Saturday I got a wire from the Newberrys, of Amesbury, to go over and see them. So Bill and I rode over in a transport waggon, and had tea with them. Mrs. Newberry and other ladies went to a dance given by the officers of the 5th Battalion, so Bill and I stayed with Mr. Newberry and played cards for a few hours, before starting home again. The English homes are beautiful. The hosts practically hand over their homes to us and we must be one of themselves while we are there. I have been in some splendid homes and have met the very best people. Our comic papers joke about the Englishmen, especially the Lords, Dukes, etc., but this sort are great. We all have a very high opinion of the English. I have met a number of Baronets, etc., and they seem very anxious to entertain us Canadians. The younger set of the upper classes have all gone to war.

Kipling nicely described his visit to the Canadian camp. He knew he was close to it when he met a waggon tearing along madly with a fiery team of horses. The English slow teams are funny—a sort of heavy cart, often two-wheeled, with a single horse or tandem hitched—old plugs—and the driver walking, and the whole thing walking at a snail's pace. The horse would drop dead if made to run.

I read a good joke to-day. A guard was on duty and the sentry was instructed to challenge everyone approaching.

A regiment approached.

Sentry—Halt! Who goes there?

Answer—Royal Fusiliers.

Sentry—Pass, Royal Fusiliers, all's well.

Another regiment approached with the same challenge and satisfactory answers. Finally a third regiment passed along the road and was challenged in the usual manner, with the answer, "None of your darn business."

Sentry answered, "Pass Canadians, all's well."

This is very typical of the happy-go-lucky Canadians.

Bustard Camp, Jan. 20, 1915.

We have been organizing once more. This makes about the fifteenth time we have been organized. We are again put into the double company system, 227 men, instead of the single company of 120. The new formation has a major commanding. Major Colquhoun and Capt. Collins second in command, and four lieutenants, each commanding a platoon of 55 men, myself senior, Lieuts. Blakeley, Towers and Miller. We were in this formation when we landed but got changed to single company. It is peculiar that they should make this change now when we are on the point of going to the front.

To-morrow we are having Brigade manoeuvres and will be inspected by the General. We shall be out all day. Our Colonel—Labbatt—is in hospital and will hardly join us again. He seems to be generally run down. This may mean another shake up in the battalion.

Capt. Collins received a large box from the Parkdale Knitting Brigade, heavy socks, shirts, sleeping caps and wristlets and a tremendous supply of khaki handkerchiefs. We gave all to the men. If it had not been for these women we should not have got anything for our men. There are three Toronto ladies in connection with the Red Cross Society here, who receive supplies from Canada for troops and the Toronto Battalions get almost everything, and the girls are having a good time. Too much "society" about that Society. The people in Orangeville would have received more credit for their supplies had they sent their boxes to me for distribution. We have over a thousand men here in our battalion. Goodness knows where their stuff went after it reached Toronto. However, I guess we are not freezing, for when we leave for the front the men will have to leave a lot of stuff which we cannot carry.

BORN.

KIDNIE — In Orangeville on Wednesday, Feb. 10th, 1915, to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. G. Kidnie, a daughter.

DIED.

HILL & CO.

THE BIG STORE, ORANGEVILLE

Important Announcement

AS intimated in these columns some time ago, the various interests of HILL & Co., F. T. HILL & CO. and HILL BROS. have been taken over by F. T. HILL & CO., Limited, under which designation all future business will be consummated. During the past 9 years (our business career in Orangeville) we have been favored by the general public with a splendid patronage, so that from its inception our business has steadily grown, and to-day is surpassed by very few Retail Stores outside the larger cities. This to us is a very gratifying condition, and we take this opportunity of heartily and sincerely thanking all who in any way have contributed to our financial and material success. For our successors we bespeak the same kindly generosity and good will that has always characterized your dealings with us and we believe that a continued honest endeavor on the part of the new firm to merit your confidence can result only in a bigger and vastly improved business being built up. The firm of F. T. Hill & Co., Limited, will assume all financial obligations incurred by Hill & Co., and all notes, book debts or other liabilities due Hill & Co. are on and after February 11th, 1915, payable to F. T. Hill & Co., Limited. Again thanking you for all past courtesies and favors,

We are, yours faithfully,
HILL & CO.

F. T. Hill & Co., Limited

THE BIG STORE, ORANGEVILLE.

AS successors to HILL & CO. we make our debut to the buying public of Orangeville and vicinity, soliciting a continuation of the patronage and good-will with which this store has always been favored. By our recently acquired charter, our financial position is not only improved and strengthened, but we are permitted to engage in various new lines of industry and occupation, which will be to the benefit of all with whom we do business and which we trust will be mutually profitable to all concerned. By the consolidation of our six stores our buying power will be placed on the best possible basis; we will have sufficient output to enable us to buy direct in large quantities from manufacturers at first cost. This will enable us to sell at the lowest possible prices, as at least one profit will be eliminated. During the present week we are busy taking inventory of the stock on hand. In doing so we find many lines broken, and occasionally some sizes missing. These lines are being put on CLEARING BARGAIN TABLES as quickly as we come to them, and present buying opportunities not often met with by those economically inclined. From week to week as the season advances, we will have dependable lines of goods at less than regular retail prices, and we ask you if not already a customer, to get in touch with the values we are in a position to offer. It will pay you.

Wanted, unlimited quantities of Produce at highest prices

Wanted, two or three bright girls as Millinery apprentices

Mr. R. Curliss, of Keenansville, has moved to his new home in Mr. S. Ward's woods.

How are the Melville Cross girls?

Cheer up Bob, Easter will soon be here.

Messrs. R. McCulloch and R. Lee visited at Mr. Wm. Atkinson's on evening last week.

A very nice dance, which was attended by about twenty-five couples was held at Wm. Guest's last Friday night. The floor was in perfect condition and first-class music was provided by Messrs. Welwood, Holmes, Woodfellow, Lee and Carey. After a dainty lunch was served the dancing was continued until about two o'clock, when all started for home well pleased with the evening's enjoyment.

MELANCTHON VILLAGE

(Too late for last week.)

The last report we heard about the Melancthon coal mine was to the effect that the industry was to be resumed again and new drilling operations commenced. This was to have taken place ere the region in question was enveloped in the present heavy blanket of snow. MONO EAST PARISH

Services will be conducted in this Parish on Sunday next by the Rev. J. H. Kerr as follows:—St. Paul's Church at 11 a.m.; St. John's, Mono, at 3 p.m.; St. John's, Mono Mills, at 7 p.m.

ROSEMONT.

We do not hear any persons saying that we have not enough snow for sleighing. Many of the roads are so high that they have to be ploughed out.

Grain has gotten to be such a high price that we don't think there is any chance of any of our farmers overfeeding their hogs this winter.

Farmers in these parts who bought their seed early got in right for once as oats are now over sixty cents a bushel in Alliston.

Our new skating rink has made things lively in the village this winter. The attendance is good and there has been excellent skating. The proprietor, Mr. Bancroft, has purchased a gas plant and is furnishing light to the whole village.

We are sorry to state that Rev. G. L. Grey's horse, which was down with a bad attack of distemper, is not expected to get better.

Miss Fleming, who has spent the past few weeks with her sister, Mrs. Grey, has returned to her home in Brampton.

Miss Geneva Morrison, of Cookstown, is visiting the Misses Bertha and Ethel Little.

Mr. G. McNabb lost a valuable horse last week.

Mr. Oswald Armstrong intends taking in the Orangeville fair this week.

MONO CENTRE.

The Mono Centre Literary Society will hold a Valentine Social on Saturday night. The programme will be of a patriotic character and will include addresses on the different nations by Messrs W. A. Henry, J. E. Arthur, Norman Rayfield, J. A. Marshall, Herman Forsythe and J. A. McFadden. A good musical programme will be furnished.

An immense crowd attended the bailiff's sale of Peter Cooper's effects on Monday. Many of those present were from a distance and some were undoubtedly drawn by curiosity due to recent developments in the oat stealing cases.

Mr. J. A. McFadden, our general merchant, has engaged the services of a new clerk in the person of Mr. Norman Rayfield.

James Forsythe and family have moved into our village and are now occupying the premises recently vacated by Mr. Lawson.

Appreciated the Scout.

Orangeville Boy Scouts have received the following letter from Lieut. H. B. McGuire, of the First Canadian Contingent:—

4th Battalion, 1st Brigade,
Bustard Camp,
Salisbury Plains.
Jan. 19th, 1915.

Rev. G. W. Tebbs and Scouts.

It is with great pleasure that I acknowledge receipt of No. 1 copy of the Orangeville Scout. Your interesting paper reached me on Christmas Day and with great pride I showed it to our Colonel and other officers of the Mess. The items in the Scout were very interesting and I enjoyed reading them and then passed the paper along to four chaps who came from Dufferin. The Endacott, Lewis and Clarke boys I have been unable to see for some time, so am unable to pass the paper to them yet. I shall keep this first copy as a treasured token.

I have always taken an admiring interest in the Boy Scouts and am sorry I have never been able to take an active part in the work of the organization, though some day perhaps I will.

During my trip to London I saw many Scouts acting in different capacities and making themselves very useful, particularly as despatch riders, messengers and helping wounded soldiers from the front.

I will be glad to receive future numbers of the Scout and hope we are upon the firing line when I get the next issue. We are all very keen to get across the Channel and into action.

Lieut. McGuire closes his letter by sending his best wishes to Rev. Mr. Tebbs and all the Orangeville Scouts."

SERVIAN VICTORY.

Result of Pleading of Committee of Private Soldiers.

According to letters received in London recently, the sudden Servian right-about-face, which transformed seeming defeat and rout into victory and the recapturing of Belgrade, was ordered by the Servian staff as a result of the pleading of a committee of private soldiers.

"When the Servian retreat began in November," writes an officer who was present at the recapture of Belgrade, "and we had to abandon town after town before the vastly superior forces of the Austrians, there was great discontent throughout the rank and file of the army. When the heart of Shumadia was reached, several regiments were actually on the brink of mutiny.

"Then one regiment sent a deputation of private soldiers to the commander to urge the retreating tactics be abandoned. They argued and pleaded at great length with the general staff. 'These are our homes,' they insisted, 'and we must defend them. If the Austrians are to take these, let it be over our dead bodies. We cannot retreat any further.'

"Before they left headquarters the, had prevailed, and they returned to their regiment with the assurance that the retreat would be stopped at once. That very night the fighting began. No quarter was asked or given, and the toll of dead both Austrian and Servian, were terrible. Worst of all, the fighting, despite all our efforts, was indecisive.

"Then it was that Prince Alexander and General Putnik decided to put into execution a plan they had conceived some time before. Unexpectedly old King Peter appeared in the trenches. He spoke to the soldiers as if they were children; he told them stories of Servian prowess in the days of old; he declared his intention of fighting by their side.

"'Here, my children,' he said, 'we must defend our country, our homes, our fields. He who cannot or will not fight to the utmost should leave the ranks and throw away his gun. He has my permission to return home. Here in these trenches every man must be the bravest. Our lives are nothing, but let us sell them dearly.'

"The quiet eloquence of the old king always created great enthusiasm. Not a man but was stirred, and when the order came to advance, the Servians threw themselves upon the Austrians fiercely. A few moments before the battle was to begin the soldiers were praying fervently. Then they advanced, singing and cheering, and the Austrians gave way before that onslaught."

SOUVENIRS OF RAID.

Two of the Hartlepool Shells Which Failed to Explode.

In addition to the death list and the ruined buildings which remain after the raid of the baby-killers upon Scarborough, Whitby and the Hartlepools, those towns possess other and perhaps more interesting souvenirs of the notorious raid, in the form of shells which did not explode. Several such missiles have been unearthed and two of them found at Hartlepool are shown in the accompanying picture. They are 12-inch shells and are probably from the big guns of the Blucher, which led the raid. From reports along the front, a large proportion of German shells have failed recently to explode and the Hartlepool specimens are tangible proof that the quality of German ammunition is deteriorating.

Brothers Meet as Prisoners.

Two sailors from the little village of Fourcrosses, near Pwllheli, Wales, David Hughes and Griffith Jones, were on board the Emden when she was run to earth by the Australian cruiser Sydney. They were in separate ships sunk by the Emden, and met for the first time for years as prisoners of war on board the German warship. A cablegram has been received announcing that they are both safe.

Union Wages Forgotten.

It may be estimated safely that 400,000 trade unionists are in the trenches in France and Flanders or training with the new army or Territorials at home, and never a word has been said about "trade union rates of wages."

Cost of Aeroplanes.

A military aeroplane costs between £800 and £1,200, according to whether it is a speedy scouting monoplane or a big passenger-carrying machine for cross-country flying.

Japanese Nurses at Front Are Repaying A Debt to the West

THE Japanese Red Cross contingent, which crossed this continent from Japan some time ago, was composed of 18 trim little blue-uniformed nurses, not one more than 5 feet 2 inches tall, and three surgeons. Dr. Jero-Suziki is in charge of the party and he and the two other doctors were educated in Germany.

Theirs is a humane mission—to go among the dying on the firing line and save with their adept and Japanese methods, those who have been mangled by shot and shell.

They hold a special commission from the Emperor of Japan and on their arrival at Southampton were assigned for duty on the continent. They came across the Pacific Ocean and covered more than half the distance around the world to reach the front.

The party is made up of the pick of the Japanese Red Cross, and efficient enough to excite the envy of any nation in the world.

The coming of the Japanese nurses into the west establishes a precedent and repays a debt the Nipponese believe they owe western civilization. In the Russo-Japanese war the occident sent its skilled nurses into the Orient and now the Orient repays.

The Japanese Red Cross possesses the originality and daring characteristic of the race. The surgeons are taught to believe their place is the firing line, and in war there they remain, prepared to instantly attend the victim of a bullet. Close by are the nurses, closer than generals of any other country will permit the women to get.

The earnest-looking women, each carrying her small kit, have been trained for years in their work, because in Japan almost every woman, from the Empress down, is affiliated with the Red Cross. Of course, all of them do not get to the front, but thousands are required to make the quaint, little, triangular bandage that is part of the equipment of every Japanese soldier.

By tests, measurements and various other scientific activities, the surgeons of the War Department have found this bandage will cover more likely wounds on the human body than one of any other design.

The bandage is made of medicated cotton and gauze. Each side is 12 inches in length, and at each corner is a cord. The soldier, when shot, applies the first aid himself, and it is frequently a lifesaver.

The greatest use of the triangular bandage, and one that had a bearing on its design, is on the arms and legs. It is assumed that most of the soldiers shot in the body are killed instantly, anyway, and those shot in the limbs must be saved from blood poisoning to fight again.

Bridges For Rhine.

It is stated as a positive fact that 10,000 artisans are employed at Creusot's hastily building light transportable iron bridges, which will be thrown across the Rhine for the French army to pass over the river.

It is also learned from a creditable military source, that the French are making a heavy siege gun which will eclipse Krupp's famous seventeen inch mortar. Its caliber is given as twenty inches, and it fires a ton and a half of explosives and metal with every shot.

In addition to this gigantic death dealer and other heavy guns of smaller calibre, Creusot is making thousands of six inch Rimailhos, so-called after their inventor, a lieutenant colonel now serving in the army.

Chose Dinner Hour.

Admiration is expressed in Paris for the fact, which has just become known, that Commander Briggs' raid upon the Zeppelin factory at Friedrichshafen was especially timed so that the airmen should arrive over the works in the dinner hour, and thus run no danger of killing or wounding civilians and inoffensive workmen.

Prohibits Transfer of British Ships.

An order in council has been issued prohibiting the transfer of British ships to foreign register unless a license for the purpose is obtained from the British Board of Trade.

"The Savings Bank."

General Joffre has been nicknamed "The Savings Bank" by German soldiers because of his enormous reserves of men and munitions.

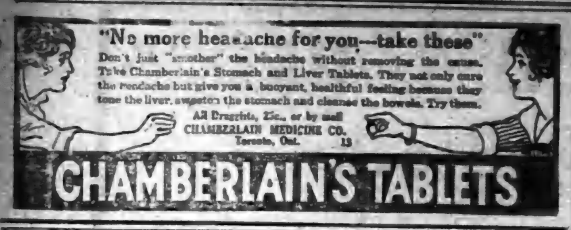
DRINK MUST GO.



All Are Agreed That Alcohol Does Positive Harm.

The Editors of the Technical World say, "Emperors, businessmen, social reformers, are all agreed upon one thing; alcoholic drinks work positive harm. A single glass of beer lessens a man's efficiency seven per cent. Imagine then what larger quantities of wine, gin or whiskey will do. The up-to-date employer will not keep men who drink even in moderation. The Secretary of the Navy will not allow them on our warships; every commander in the field to-day in Europe is leading a sober army. Everywhere the brains of the world recognize that alcoholic liquors weaken both muscle and mind power."

For many years the people have been demanding of the Provincial Government that the use of alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes be prohibited, but so far without any result worth mentioning from either political parties. Local prohibition wherever it has been given a fair trial has proved to be a great blessing to the community, but is handicapped by some wet municipality close at hand. But even under those adverse circumstances it has been such a benefit that the people would not go back to licenses except in a very few exceptional cases. Even in Toronto Junction and other places where liquor can be had by crossing the street it has worked great good. This shows that if a bunch of men have to go round a block for it only the old chronic drinkers will do so.

War Review of the Week

WHEN a few weeks ago Grand Admiral von Tirpitz in an interview, declared that the German fleet would begin a war on British merchant vessels, few persons could believe that he spoke seriously. Few thought that the German Government would commit so flagrant a breach of the rules of war as signed by the Hague convention. Sunday's despatches showed that the baby-killers of Scarborough care little for rules or traditions and that the threat was a serious one. On Saturday, the U-21, the newest of the German submarines appeared in the Irish Sea, stopped the steamer Ben Cruachan, ordered the crew into the boats, placed a shell in the interior of the vessel and blew her to pieces. The crew landed safely at Fleetwood later in the morning, having been picked up by a fishing smack. An hour afterward the crew of the Linda Blanche, a smaller vessel, which had been destroyed in the same way, were landed at Fleetwood. The steamer Kilcoan was sunk farther out at sea, and her crew were landed on the Isle of Man. The Kilcoan was a small coaster of 456 tons.

The operations of the U-21 may have involved a great tragedy. The captain of the steamer Niblick says that when five miles west of Fleetwood he saw a large ship blown up. He waited in the hope of rescuing some of the crew, but none appeared. He picked up 400 lifebelts, showing that the ship lost was a large one.

In the Channel, off Havre, the British steamer Tokomaru, en route from New Zealand to Great Britain with a cargo of 97,000 carcasses of mutton and a quantity of clothing for the destitute of Belgium, was torpedoed by an unknown submarine. In this case no warning was given, and had the crew of 57 men not been rescued by the trawler Hooper the sinking of the Tokomaru would have involved the murder of all her crew. The British ship Icaria was torpedoed in the same locality without any warning being given to her crew. This is the second occasion upon which such a flagrant violation of the laws of maritime warfare has been reported, the first that of the Admiral Ganteaume, laden with Belgian refugees.

The destruction of peaceful merchant ships without warning is as dastardly a violation of all recognized means of carrying on warfare as the bombing of peaceful and undefended towns by Zeppelins.

The warfare on merchant vessels will be hard to meet, but Britain will probably stop all traffic between Germany and Scandinavia by the same method. One suggestion is that the British vessels be transferred to another flag.

The week-end despatches disclosed a big Russian army that has penetrated several days' march into Hungary, and will force the Germans and Austrians to decide the fate of their country on their own soil. This big force is full fighting strength, is turned parallel to the flanks of the German and Austrian troops, which had been collected with much heralding to advance into Galicia, and relieve the siege of Przymsl. Now these armies have to fight the huge Russian force for their life, or withdraw southward, leaving a whole country open to fire and sword. The Russian bear moves ponderously, but he is mighty hard to move. He set his foot down in Galicia, and the united strength of the German and Austrian hosts was unable to move him back. Von Hindenburg's drive into central Poland appears to have been a costly mistake. The Russians are now able to hold him here while they are beginning the process of cleaning the Germans out of East Prussia, and the Austrians of East Hungary.

Sunday's advices said the Russian advance was proceeding at every point from Tilsit on the north to Bukowina on the south.

The Russians began to develop a forward movement in the Mazurian Lake region early last week and progressed towards Koenigsberg, the principal city and fortress in East Prussia. The fighting on the centre in front of Warsaw was steady with the Russians on the offensive.

The Austrians, having collected a big army of a half million men in Hungary, have begun a new offensive through the Carpathians. The Russians withdrew so as to concentrate their forces to meet the advance, and on Thursday at Vaslisk Pass they crushed in the head of the advancing Austrian column inflicting large and encouraging loses. This is the third time that the Austrians have begun an offensive from the south in this way, and twice before they have failed signally in the enterprise.

The Russian Government has notified the Shah of Persia that Russian troops must enter his country to drive out the Turks who have invaded the Russian sphere of influence.

In the western field the big event of the week was the attempt of the German armies to celebrate the Kaiser's birthday by attacks in force at La Basse, Soissons and elsewhere. The movements were defeated everywhere with losses estimated in the three days of fighting, culminating Wednesday, at 20,000 men. The British forces at La Bassee had 900 men killed, wounded or missing. The Germans left 400 dead alone on the road from La Bassee to Bethune. At Ypres the French defeated a heavy German attack. At La Creuse the firing of heavy shells caused a landslide to a quarry, and two French companies were cut off. They held out for many hours before surrendering. This success forced the French to evacuate the Foulon Wood which they later recaptured in a series of brilliant counter-attacks.

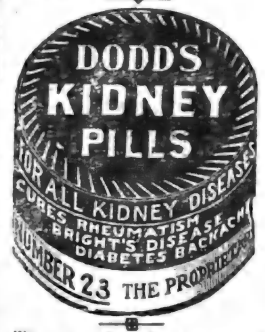
"It is a pleasure to me to inform you that after suffering from Chronic Constipation for 2½ years, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". While I was a student at Berthier College, I became so ill I was forced to leave the the college. Severe pains across the intestines continually tortured me and it came to a point when I could not stoop down at all, and my Digestion became paralyzed. Some one advised me to take "Fruit-a-tives" and at once I felt a great improvement. After I had taken four or five boxes, I realized that I was completely cured and what made me glad, also, was that they were acting gently, causing no pain whatever to the bowels. All those who suffer with Chronic Constipation should follow my example and take "Fruit-a-tives" for they are the medicine that cures".

MAGLOIRE PAQUIN



"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

A NEW OIL TANK FIRE EXTINGUISHER.

Modern chemists have found a way to fight fierce oil-tank fires to a finish. If a big tank containing more than two million gallons of oil should be struck by lightning it can be readily imagined what a terrific heat would be generated. Naturally the valuable tank would be destroyed as well as its contents.

In a demonstration recently made in subduing a petroleum fire a tank twenty-six feet in diameter was used. The test was made with burning gasoline, the most inflammable of petroleum products. Hardly had the black smoke began to roll up when one of a number of fusible links suspended across the top of the tank separated. This link cable operated triggers controlling acid containers at the top of four standpipes filled with a chemical solution. Instantly the thick foam was discharged from the standpipes upon the surface of the burning oil. Within twelve seconds after the standpipes were brought into action, the fire was completely extinguished. It had been smothered under a blanket of foam fourteen inches thick.

The protection afforded by the new extinguisher is so efficient that the cost of installation is proportionately small.

When a number of cases containing oil of lemon shipped from Italy to N. C. Polson & Company, Kingston, arrived, it was found that they had been tampered with. The copper in the cans had been removed.

At the last shoot which the Erin-East Garafraxa rifle club held in Hillsburg the following scores were made:—With rest—1st, John Price, 190; 2nd, Ross McKay, 188; 3rd, Chas. and H. Dyer, 187; 4th, Norman Reid, Joe Dyer, Robt. Nodwell, 186. Off-hand—1st, John Price, 176; 2nd, Ross McKay and Joe Dyer, 173; 3rd, Norman Reid and Jas. Johnston, 168; 4th, H. A. Carmichael and E. M. Good, 164. The range at which the shooting was done was 50 yards.

CHRISTMAS AT GRONINGEN.

Interned British Soldiers and Sailors Had a Merry Time.

The following is a letter from Signalman J. O. Aird, R.N.V.R., who is at present interned at Groningen, Holland, telling how he spent Christmas:

Sailors are said to be a merry set of men, so we had to do our best to uphold our reputation this Christmas and I think we succeeded.

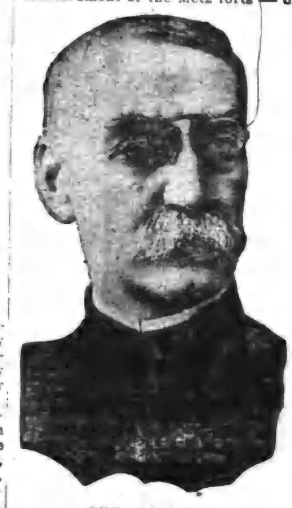
Christmas Eve was spent in decorating "ship" and erecting and dressing the giant Christmas tree in the mess room, the novelties on which are to be given to the Belgian refugee children here.

The feature of the evening was the concert, during which the entry of masqueraders caused great fun, especially when the "Clown Prince, the Kaiser's last hope" (for so he was labelled), decorated with the iron cross, entered the mess room on his pantomime horse and attended by two Indian chiefs in their full finery of soot and gaudy blankets.

The evening finished late with the "carollers" serenading the officers' and men's quarters with songs, ably supported by a lustily blown cornet and various tin whistles.

When we awoke on Christmas morning everything around the kazerene (barracks was white in the grip of frost, and with a bright but not strong sun the morning was almost ideal for winter. Although a few of us adhered to the custom of hanging our socks on our beds, Santa Claus did not visit us, as, I suppose, he visits this country on St. Nicholas Day, December 5.

Later in the day he was kinder to us, for after the Christmas service, held in the mess room, cigarettes from Her Majesty the Queen were issued, also cigars, tobacco, and a blotter each from the Missions to Seamen.



The dinner—well, it was a proper Christmas dinner — turkey, ham, vegetables, pudding, fruit, nuts and sweets. Our cooks worked hard and splendidly. After the inspection of the decorated tables—and, by the way, we had tablecloths for the first time since being here—we "fell to" with a will and did ample justice to all the good things and relieved the table of great weight. When the teatime came we had little room left for the mince pies and cake.

TO DRIVE TO RHINE.

Gallieni Will Command French Invaders In the South.

The invasion of upper Alsace, combined with a south to north movement along the Rhine, it is learned on the most trustworthy authority, is the foremost feature of the French plan to carry the war into Germany, says a London correspondent.

The present French activity in upper Alsace and the Vosges and the bombardment of the Metz forts — of which nothing has been said officially —are the first steps in the great scheme, but the general offensive will come soon, when the French armament makers have given the army a clear superiority in heavy guns.

Gen. Gallieni, the present military governor of Paris, will command the forces which will make the attempt and which will be called the army of the Rhine.

If he succeeds Gallieni will be made a marshal of France, not because his work will necessarily be finer than that already accomplished by Generals Foch, De Castelnau, Dubail and others, but because he will have fulfilled the tacitly formulated army regulation which came into force after the 1879 war that future French marshals must fish up their batons in the Rhine.

Simultaneously the same dignity—a marshalship is a dignity, not a rank —would be conferred on Joffre.

Metric System Adopted.

Our French allies are immensely gratified by the latest edition, issued a few days back, of the British Pharmacopoeia, the standard work for the preparation of drugs and making up of prescriptions. The new edition adopts, in lieu of the traditional British system of weights and measures, the French metric system.

Exit English Terms.

English sporting terms formerly in general use in Austria are now prohibited. Steeplechase has become "jaydrennen," handicap "anggleichsrennen," and spring meeting "frublingsrennen."

More Still To Bury.

Although 4,000 men have been engaged in burial work, bodies of the dead still litter the plains of Vregny, where losses on both sides were enormous.

TONGUE FROZEN TO WIRE.

As Mr. John Gamble, a Sullivan farmer, was driving to Owen Sound Thursday of last week, one of the coldest days this winter, he noticed a little boy standing beside a wire on the Garafraxa road, just inside the town limits, and crying if in distress. Mr. Gamble got out of the cutter, and going over to where the boy was standing, found that the child's tongue was frozen fast to one of the wires of the fence holding him there. Mr. Gamble worked his hand along the wire until the heat of his hand released the boy's tongue, which was bleeding and sore at the end. As soon as he was released he ran off home before Mr. Gamble did not know the little fellow's name. He had evidently stuck out his tongue and touched the wire, and in a moment was secured fast to the wire. Had Mr. Gamble not happened by just at the time he did, the boy might have perished, as it was a bitterly cold day. It is safe to say, that one small boy, at least, with not experience with frosty wires again for a while.—Owen Sound Sun.

The members of Beeton Methodist church presented Mrs. Lambert with a purse in recognition of her services as organist.

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. Cook, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

MUST PRODUCE MORE.

For the last two years the railway builders and the money borrowers, those who have brought to Canada approximately $2,500,000,000, have been anxiously looking to the soil to produce more. We are not pointing this out in a critical sense. The man who homesteaded and lived on the farm has been the most pressing borrower and it is on his behalf that most of the money has been obtained. The distribution of the borrowed money has helped, no doubt, to make business active. The after effects of all the borrowing many say it is over-borrowing—have been adequately dealt with hitherto and we need not go further into that matter now. At the commencement of the past year the leaders of the nation were urging more production. On the other hand a very large number of brainy and imaginative Canadians were boosting real estate and "blowing" about what could be done rather than of what they were actually doing. This class still enthused by large profits which had been made had not entirely disappeared. But all the "horn-blowing" for which the necessary wind could be raised would not induce the wheat to grow or induce more people to come to the land to make good the promise of real estate speculators. Circumstances, and the Kaiser, combined to finally eliminate the speculator and enthroned the idea that to make good real estate had to be used and cultivated.

Mr. and Mrs. James McClure, of Brampton, announce the marriage of their daughter, Mary Ethel, to Mr. Walter Karl Giffen, Mayfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Giffen, Brampton.

Engineer E. A. Hodgins, of Palmerston, got a broken leg, and fireman C. S. Sleeman had his spine injured when the snow-plow they were working jumped the track with the three engines driving it, near Listowel.

With the modest sum of $600 as their objective, residents of the Township of Dereham set out on a whirlwind campaign to collect that amount as a donation to the Oxford Patriotic Association. So keen were the canvassers and so generous the public that $7,321.25 was collected.

Princess Mary Has Done Arduous Work For Britons at War

It would be difficult to discover a more convincing proof of the country's affection for the royal children than the whole-hearted enthusiasm with which the charitable appeals set on foot by Princess Mary and the Prince of Wales have been supported by the British public. The great success of the Prince of Wales' Fund is well known, and now Princess Mary is running up lengthy subscription lists in connection with her fund for providing Christmas presents for soldiers and sailors.

The public hardly realize that Princess Mary has now merged from girlhood into womanhood, and is no longer the short-frocked little maid who used to romp so gaily with her brothers, now engaged in the more serious game of war.

If it had been possible Princess Mary would no doubt have delighted to see one of her brothers in the Royal Flying Corps. Aviators rank amongst her chief heroes, and her royal highness is credited with possessing framed pictures of all the great English, French, and American flying men. It was largely the princess's interest in aviation that inspired the imperial command to the late Gustav Hamel to loop the loop and fly upside down before the royal family at Windsor last year. Some time ago there was a discussion between the princess and her friends as to which profession furnished the bravest men. Some said soldiers, others doctors; but Princess Mary with much deliberation insisted that aviators carried all before them in this respect.

Queen Mary has always encouraged her daughter's interest in charity. Here is a story which shows the unselfish character of the princess. Learning that a charity was sorely in need of funds, her royal highness determined to earn by her own efforts a sum of money to contribute to its exchequer. She therefore secured a quantity of Venetian glass beads and settled down to make a number of pretty necklaces out of them. Altogether she made 210, in a wide variety of designs and styles. These she sold to her friends at prices ranging from 2s. to 6s., according to size and shape. The total reached £42, and this sum she forwarded to the grateful charity.

Princess Mary must sadly miss her brothers, for in the more peaceful days of the past they were her inseparable companions. At the time when the princes were drilled on the East Terrace of Windsor by a former sergeant of the Scots Guards the princess was very disappointed that she was not allowed to join with her brothers in this strenuous occupation. However, as compensation she was given a series of dancing lessons in Highland reels and flings and strathspeys. She revelled in them, and soon became an accomplished dancer.

"Fifteens" of the Past.

When the New Year witnesses the crushing defeat of Germany, it will form the most memorable addition to the list of eventful '15's. In 1215 King John signed the Magna Charta; in 1415 the Battle of Agincourt took place; in 1715 the Jacobite rebellion occurred; and in 1815, "as every child can tell," the Battle of Waterloo was fought.

Gun-Sticks In East Prussia.

The Russian troops in East Prussia have found many civilians provided with gun-sticks, outwardly resembling ordinary walking-sticks. Hitherto it has been somewhat of a mystery why the Russians marching through villages have frequently been shot in the back without the culprits being discovered.

Secret Hoard For Germany.

The Russian Government has ordered the confiscation of the Warsaw Works, which belong to a German company. The city officials in searching the company's safe found 900,000 roubles (about $450,000) in gold, which had evidently been stored up to send to Germany.

AN IMPORTANT CONTRIBUTION

University of Toronto Gives Largely to the Empire's Armies

Though the military organizations of the Canadian Colleges were in a much more rudimentary condition than those of the British Universities, a large contribution has already been made to the Army for the present war from their graduates and undergraduates.

The following is an account of what has been done by the University of Toronto.

First Contingent.—

Officers—Lt.-Col. C. H. Mitchell, B.A.Sc., member of the Board of Governors; Lt.-Col. R. D. Rudolf, Professor of Therapeutics; Lt.-Col. W. A. Scott, Associate in Surgery; Major P. Goldsmith, Demonstrator in Oto-Laryngology; Captain G. R. Philip, Demonstrator in Anatomy; Captain P. K. Menzies, Assistant in Clinical Surgery; Captain G. A. Cline, Instructor in University Schools; Captain C. E. Cole, Demonstrator in Therapeutics; Dr. B. E. Clutterbuck, Assistant in Gynaecology; Dr. A. J. Mackenzie, Demonstrator in Medicine, and Mr. E. Owen, Lecturer in German.

According to our most recent information there are, besides the members of the staff, 134 graduates and 86 undergraduates, and of these 137 are officers and 83 privates. The chief electrician and several of the laboratory assistants are also on service, and their places are being kept for them. Professor de Champ, and Messrs. Balbaud and Bibet of the Department of French in University College have been serving with the French Army since the beginning of the war.

Second Contingent—

Officers—Lt.-Col. Fotheringham, Associate-Professor of Clinical Medicine, is Chief Medical Officer. Other members of the staff who have been giving their time in preparing for its mobilization are: Captain J. A. Amyot, Professor of Hygiene; Lt.-Col. J. A. Roberts, Demonstrator in Clinical Surgery; Lt. G. B. Strathy, Demonstrator in Clinical Medicine; Lieut. Bruce Robertson, Assistant in Pathology.

At present our information is quite incomplete, but we have the names of 53 graduates and 63 undergraduates who have been accepted.

Action of the Senate and Faculties—

At the opening of the session the Caput, Senate and the Faculty Councils passed regulations to provide that standing should be granted to those who by reason of enlisting had been unable to take their September supplementals; also, that those who had enlisted or who would do so, should be shown the utmost consideration at the end of the session that the University's duty to the public in maintaining professional standards will allow.

It was further decided to discontinue all teaching and laboratory work after four o'clock in the afternoon in order to enable students to take the courses of drill and instruction required by the regulations of the Officers' Training Corps.

The Officers' Training Corps.—

In view of the probable establishment of an Officers' Training Corps in the University, a score of junior members of the staff began about September 15th to take drill and instruction to qualify themselves to become officers in the new corps. About October 20th authorization was received from the Militia Department. Dr. W. R. Lang, Professor of Chemistry, who with the concurrence of the Board of Governors had volunteered for active service but was appointed Instructor for this Military Division, was made Colonel of the new corps. Messrs. C. S. McVicar, A.D. Le Pan, G. N. Bramfitt, C. H. C. Wright, R. H. Hopkins, G. H. Needler, F. C. A. Jeanneret, L. Gilchrist, M. W. Wallace, G. O. Smith, C. N. Cochrane, C. V. Massey, G. M. Smith, E. J. Kylie, G. S. Brett, E. S. Ryerson, A. F. Coventry, G. Gallie, W. F. McPhedran, R. G. Armour, D. Graham, G. R. Young, D. G. Hagarty, A. M. Thomas, A. W. McConnell, W. M. Treadgold, B. M. Morris, H. H. Madill, J. R. Cockburn, J. R. Mitchener, V. E. Henderson, H. R. Hopkins, A. R. Leggo, W. S. Wallace, H. G. Manning, all except three being members of the staff, have been appointed officers. The students enrolled enthusiastically, and though the strength authorized as yet is only 1000, over 1800 have been taking drill.

On Friday, January 22nd, 1500 students with their officers were reviewed by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught. He addressed them in part as follows: "I wish to express to you my great satisfaction with the splendid turnout you have given me this evening. When I looked at you and saw how you stood to attention and the admirable way in which you marched past, I saw that your work since you were formed, a very few months ago, has been performed with a will, and I can honestly say that I have never seen better results than you have shown me to-day.

"What pleases me still more is the splendid example you young gentlemen are showing to the whole of Canada. You have come forward at a moment when every man that is able to do anything to help the Empire in a time of stress is needed, and you have done so readily and in a most efficient manner.

"As an old soldier and as Governor-General of Canada, I wish to say that no parade that I have seen—and I have seen many lately—has given me more satisfaction than your parade this evening."

The Women Students—

At the same time the women students of the University have shown their determination to be of service by occupying the hours from four to six in the afternoon, when there is instruction given in the University, with sewing and other work for the Red Cross Society.

Cured of Piles and Eczema

By Using Three Boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Abram [illegible], Hepburn, Sask., writes:—"I want to say I was troubled with eczema and suffered greatly from itching, burning sensations. These annoying ailments I was free sample of Dr. Chase's Ointment did me such good I bought three more boxes of it and they cured me of the itching same way and piles."

This is the kind of testimony constantly from people cured of these troubles by the use of this ointment. No matter how severe they be, you could not for many days suffer that Dr. Chase's Ointment doubtedly the most certain cure for piles.

If you have a sample box and by use of a free sample was convinced of its merits treatment. For sale at Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

PEEL MUTUAL

Has Reserve Fund of Over $25,000.

Despite Fact that Losses Last Year were Heaviest in Company's History.

The annual meeting of the Peel County Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company was held in the Concert Hall, on Saturday afternoon last.

John Gardhouse, Esq., President, presiding. The attendance was not large, which was an evidence of the confidence and satisfaction felt by the policy holders in the management by the Directors of the affairs of the Company.

The handsome reserve fund of over $25,000.00, notwithstanding there was paid in losses for the past year $23,460.00, is unquestionably a source of satisfaction to every policyholder.

The three retiring Directors were Moses Johnston, for Toronto township; J. A. McBride, for Caledon township; Thos. McCartney, for Albion township. All three were re-elected by acclamation. J. H. Watson was elected auditor after which the meeting adjourned.

Below we give the report of the Directors:

To the members of the Peel Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company.

Gentlemen:

It is with much pleasure that the Board of Directors of this Company once more meet the Policy Holders in annual meeting assembled. We beg to submit for your approval this the Thirty-Eighth Annual Report of the Company which shows the general business transacted for the year 1914, also giving the financial standing of the Company at the close of the year.

Your Company has had a very favorable year to report, notwithstanding the fact that our business for the year shows a loss of $4,187.20, in that the insurance has exceeded the year 1913 by over half a million dollars. We have issued 107 more policies in 1914 than in 1913, notwithstanding the fact that there were nearly 100 policies combined and re-written into 47 policies.

Our losses for the past year were the largest in the history of the Company, amounting to $23,460.08, exceeding the losses of 1913 by nearly $11,000.00, and this accounts for the business of the year showing a loss of some $4000.00. Were it not for the accumulation of surplus during the past years the Company would be in a more unfavorable position. The Company's losses for the four previous years averaged $11,000.00, a phenomenally small loss per year when you take into consideration the fact that we have been carrying risks to the amount of $8,000,000.00.

It is a pleasure for your Directors to be able to report a surplus of $35,605.46 at the close of the year; consisting of $12,005.46 cash in bank and $23,600.00 secured by first mortgages on farm property. We had at the close of the year 3739 policies in force covering an insurance of $8,804,060.75, with a total premium note capital of $278,564.00.

Your Directors have endeavored, during the past year to be equal to the responsibility resting on their shoulders in the discharge of their duties to Policy Holders, and we feel that the great body of members recognize the fact, for which the Board is thankful. We therefore wish to tender the thanks of the Directorate to the members, believing that the one great essential to the success of a Mutual Company is that a cordial feeling should exist between the members of the company and the Board of Directors.

The Directors have much pleasure in certifying to the continual good work of the Secretary in that the [illegible] insurance under [illegible] and for [illegible] last amount [illegible] Wm. Foster the history [illegible] has due [illegible]

TRENCH PERISCOPES.

Boxes With Two Mirrors Are Used To Spy Into Enemy's Positions.

British and German methods of employing periscopes and other methods of trench warfare are described by an officer of the Royal Engineers, who, writing to his wife, says: "In the lines the Germans have a very large periscope. As their trenches are only 100 or 150 yards from ours we can see, by looking through field glasses, the face of the German who is using it reflected in the top glass. Yesterday we could distinctly see the face of the observer. He was an officer, clean-shaven, and with a red cap. Unfortunately, his shoulders were not "in the picture," and we couldn't tell his regiment. But we could see him exchanging jokes with someone over his shoulder and laughing and smiling. We have orders not to fire at it, and perhaps the Germans are wondering why we are unable to hit so large a mark at so short a range. It is too useful a peephole into their trenches for us to damage. Our own periscopes consist of a box of wood 4 inches wide and two feet long, with little squares of looking glass four inches square at either end. When you look into the lower glass you can see reflected a piece of the landscape in front, and so can get a good, steady look at the country in front of your trench while keeping your head in perfect safety under the parapet. The only drawback is that, the top mirror and the end of the wooden box showing above the parapet, they are liable to be hit by a bullet and knocked out of your hands. This actually happened to a fellow the other day, and he had his face covered with tiny cuts and got some powdered glass in his eye.

Since the last few days' rain parts of the trenches are over three feet deep in water, and one has to wade through the very cold water to get to the next platoon. We are getting pumps to work, but it is a difficult business. The Germans have a bomb-thrower called a "Winysfelminer," which throws a bomb about a couple of hundred yards. Their bombs explode on striking the ground, and consequently any that do not actually fall in the trench explode harmlessly. We, or rather an officer in the corps, have rigged up an iron drain pipe as a gun, which throws hand bombs to that distance. These bombs are fitted with time fuses, and most of them explode in the air about 12 feet above the ground. Consequently they are more likely to do damage to the occupants of the trench, as these weapons are not very accurate at the best of times, and it is impossible to make sure of getting within five yards of the object aimed at.

UNDER FIRE.

British Officer Tells How the Passive Party Takes It.

A British officer gives the following account of his impressions under fire:

"There is a good deal of rot talked of heroism at present. If it is all true there are many millions of heroes in Europe just now, and I leave that to you. I've found it harder to go straight in life than go under fire. I don't think men find it hard to go under fire. First of all, there is a mass suggestion and the tradition of your people to give you a bias to bravery. Then when you are in the thick of it you forget psychology after awhile and get interested in the explosions.

"When thoroughly warmed up you care nothing about your own skin—you forget you've got a skin—but you are very hot about damaging the hides of the ruffians who are the cause of that fiendish noise. You want to hurt them badly and make them feel infernally sorry. When you do get cold feet is before you've started for a hot place. When you are at the base your imagination is far worse than shrapnel.

"Certainly when you do come under fire for the first time you feel sure you cannot survive. 'I shall never live through this,' you keep saying to yourself. The noises are abrupt, erratic and shockingly violent and the mess made is very nasty, but when you recognize your number is certainly up you sort of congeal—you lose recollection of your body and become only a clear and observant point of intelligence, doing your job subconsciously but surely, like a man dead in everything but his eyes. When you are out of it you 'come to,' so to speak, and can hardly believe you are still really in one piece. Then you find yourself very pleased, smiling all over and shaking a little for a long time afterward.'

Trace Airships In Fog.

Tests over London proved that searchlights can detect a Zeppelin even in foggy weather.

A British airship which has been making experimental flights over London by day and by night for the past fortnight made her appearance at dusk and sailed over the city for several hours. Searchlights were trained from several strategic points, and they managed to follow her wherever she went. Most of the time there were two shafts playing upon the big brown sausage shaped craft, and they kept her in sight when she dropped down near the roofs of high buildings and followed her upward course and her sudden descendings and windings.

Aeroplanes fully equipped for fighting are kept in readiness and could be launched like flash engines on the stroke of the bell to give an alarm of an approaching Zeppelin were sent out.

Knapsacks Lighter.

The French knapsack now weighs forty-nine pounds, which is much less than the weight of the knapsacks of the war of 1870.

Turkos Climb Trees.

When the Turkos are hard pressed during hand to hand fighting they climb trees like monkeys and hide in the leaves.

DEADLY ANAEMIA

Nine Woman and Girls Out of Every Ten Are Afflicted With This Trouble.

It is an unfortunate fact that nine women and girls out of every ten are afflicted with anaemia—which means bloodlessness—in one form or another. The girl in her teens, the wife, the mother and the matron of middle age all know its miseries. To be anaemic means to be pallid, with dark marks under the eyes. You are breathless after slight exertion. You feel worn out and depressed all day. You have no desire for food and often cannot digest what little you do take. Headaches, backaches and sideaches make life miserable. If you sleep at night you do not feel refreshed in the morning and are utterly unfit for the day's duties. If neglected, anaemia almost surely leads to deadly consumption. Renewed health can only be obtained through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—the most reliable blood enricher ever discovered. These pills actually make new, rich blood; they bring brightness to the eyes, and the glow of health to pale cheeks. They have literally saved thousands of women and growing girls from the grave, and what they have done for others they can do for you if given a fair trial. Here is the proof. Mrs. Wm. Kierman, Watrous, Sask., says: "I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with wonderful results. I suffered for upwards of two years with anaemia in a severe form, and was doctoring all the time with no benefit. I suffered from severe headaches and at times from backaches that were almost unbearable. The trouble affected my digestion, and this caused additional discomfort. Finally through the persuasions of a friend I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and shall ever be grateful that I did so, as after using nine boxes I was fully restored to health. I would earnestly urge all anaemic women and girls to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for I feel confident from my own experience that they will renew their health."

These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DUFFERIN L. O. L.

Largely Attended and Harmonious Meeting on Monday

County Master Duke's Address a Weighty and Comprehensive Deliverance.

The annual meeting of the Dufferin County Loyal Orange Lodge was held in L.O.L. 635 hall on Monday. About 100 members were present and the proceedings were characterized by the utmost harmony and brotherly feeling. County Master H. A. Duke's address to the Lodge was of a comprehensive nature and discussed so many matters that are of interest to the Order that we have decided to publish it in full,

Orangeville, Feb. 2nd, 1915.
To the Members of Dufferin County L. O. L.
Brethren :

We are assembled at our annual County meeting for the transaction of the business for this W. Co. Lodge and I trust that our deliberations may be both profitable and harmonious and that we may be guided by the spirit of love in all business that may come before us.

Some of our brethren who listened to our last annual report are absent from our midst.

While we are looking over the work just completed and congratulating ourselves on the progress made let us not forget to make ample provision for a continuation of the same during the year opening before us.

Never in the history of this country, or in fact, the whole British Empire, have such questions arisen as during the last year. The Home Rule Bill, which was of vital interest to every true Orangeman in this and the old land, loomed larger on the political horizon for the greater part of the year, but faded away as if by magic when the present crisis arose, which has practically thrown the whole world into conflict. It is a war of barbarism against civilization, brutality against justice, and the attempt of the Kaiser to throw militarism upon the whole world. Napoleon tried to conquer the world but was foiled in the attempt by Britain and we believe without the shadow of a doubt that the same Britain, but greater, shall stop the attempt of a madman to establish a world power. It behooves us therefore as true Orangemen to do all in our power to strengthen the hands of those who are fighting our battles at the front.

The present great conflict has its redeeming features. It has united the British Empire as nothing else could have done and has settled for a time at least the attempt to force Rome rule on the Protestants of Ireland.

Having had the privilege of attending the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Ontario West, which met in Guelph on Wednesday, the 11th day of March, I feel it my duty to lay before you a summary of what was done at that meeting.

The Lodge opened at 2 o'clock, p. m., on Wednesday, in the City Hall, which was fitted up for the occasion with plenty of bunting, and the following mottoes over the platform:—"One Marriage Law for Canada," and "Defence not Defiance." There were no amendments recommended to be made to the Constitution, though it was proposed that all Masters of Primary Lodges shall be members of the Royal Scarlet. This caused a good deal of discussion, but was eventually voted down. The only real work done on the first day was the appointing of the various committees and the presentation of the report of the Committee on Credentials, which gave the number of delegates present at the opening of the Lodge as 542. A subsequent report of the Committee gave an additional 73, making a total of 615 qualified voters.

A very large open meeting was held that evening at which the principal speakers were Lieut. Col. Judge Scott, H. C. Hocken, Mayor of Toronto, Bro. Essery, and Rev. Mr. Fish, Grand Organizer. Among the audience were many ladies who, with the rest of the large audience, seemed delighted with the proceedings. Various Committees, which had been appointed the previous day, had been busy all morning preparing reports and were ready when Lodge met at 9 o'clock to present the same. Under the head of Petitions and Appeals we had one case from Dufferin, that of A. H. McGhee, of Melancthon. As we had some experience in Committee with this matter, I took some interest in the outcome, and was pleased to find that the Grand Lodge took just the same view as the Committee of the County Lodge did last January and sent the whole case back to the Primary Lodge for adjustment.

The Committee on Suspensions and Expulsions presented a full report of all matters in this Committee. There was one expulsion for marrying a Roman Catholic, a number for being drunk and disorderly on the 12th of July; one for joining the Roman Catholic Church. When this case came up Canon Walsh remarked "I bet he was not an Irishman." A brother rose and said, "I know him well, he was no good. He was an Englishman." These remarks were greeted with cheers, which had scarcely ceased when a brother rose and demanded that these brethren should withdraw what they had said about the English. He said his father was English, and had bled for his country, while in his own veins flowed as good Protestant blood as flowed in the veins of any brother in the audience. The Grand Master assured the brother that Bro. Walsh had only spoken in jest and that none who knew him would take him seriously as none respected the English more than he. The matter then dropped. One case created some discussion. It was a brother who had been initiated into the Order in 1905. In 1909 he purchased a hotel, secured a license and went into the hotel business and for this he was expelled by the Primary Lodge, to which he belonged. He appealed to the Grand Lodge against this expulsion. The Grand Lodge took the ground that this man went into the hotel business with his eyes open, knowing that he was violating the obligation and the rules laid down in the Constitution, and he should therefore abide by the consequences. This ruling I may say was almost unanimously sustained by the Lodge, and the brother's appeal for reinstatement thrown out. This of itself shows that the Orange Order has no use for the booze or the boozer. The report of the Finance Committee was an interesting one. It showed the Lodge to be in a good, healthy condition financially. It recommended the following grants to each of the following churches. It recommended $200 each to the Anglican, Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist churches to assist them in evangelizing the Province of Quebec and to the Salvation Army, $50. This was raised to $200 on motion of a brother, who remarked that we must not go back on a body that lifts a fellow out of the mud and tries to make a man of him. $150 was voted to send The Sentinel to ministers not receiving it. The sum of $500 was placed at the disposal of the Grand Master to be forwarded to Sir Edward Carson to assist our brethren in Ulster to resist Home Rule and save them from the curse of an Irish Parliament. One of the most interesting reports was that of the Legislative Committee. It showed that the Committee had not shirked its duties, it had waited upon the Government and had drawn its attention to the fact that the regulations regarding bi-lingual schools had not been carried out. That the Government had receded from its position formerly taken and had placed in the hands of the head School Inspector the power to permit the teaching of French in other forms than the first. It urged upon the Grand Lodge the necessity of taking a firm stand upon this question and seeing that the regulations as to the teaching of French in the first form alone be strictly adhered to. The Grand Master urged upon the brethren to keep a strict guard upon the doors of their Lodge Room and see that none who would be a detriment to the Society be admitted. Remember, said he, it is not quantity that we want in our ranks but quality. There was a time when a candidate needed little more than the price of his initiation, but with pleasure, I can say that that day has gone. In conclusion I wish to say that among the great number attending this Grand Lodge meeting I did not see one wearing a delegate's badge, who did not show by his sobriety and conduct that he was what every true Orangeman should be—a gentleman.

One of the most successful celebrations of the Battle of the Boyne was held in the village of Shelburne on Monday, July 13th, and was a credit to the Order. The number and enthusiasm exceeded any ever held before and certainly showed the public a little of the strength of the Order. Notwithstanding the very wet forenoon, the village was fairly well packed with Orangemen and their followers. The line of march was well directed by Co. Director Gabriel and his committee in charge. It passed off without a hitch and every man in line conducted himself in a manner that was a credit to the Order. This is the way brethren that we make public the principles for which we stand and it behooves every Orangeman to see that he is in the ranks on the 12th of July and help us to remember the Battle of the Boyne, the battle that procured for us the civil and religious liberties and other rights that we so dearly prize.

I cannot pass without a word for The Sentinel. We rejoice because we have an official organ whose policy no party or individual can control. It is neither bigoted nor afraid and holds steadfastly to the principles of Protestantism. Let us remember that upon every Orangeman rests the responsibility of helping to extend its circulation and in that way help to extend the influence of our beloved Order.

The organization work of our Order has made great progress under the present Prov. Grand Organizer, Rev. Bro. Fish. He is a man not only able to do the ordinary business and degree work of the Lodge, but is well qualified to explain and defend the principles of our Order and is able to tell the public the reason that the Orange Order is in existence. Bro. Fish also proved himself useful in watching the interest of our Order and Protestantism in general and we should see to it that every assistance is given to him in his work.

I regret that I have not been able to attend many Lodge meetings in the County during my term of office, but I am pleased to be able to say that those I have attended show that a steady spirit of progress prevails in the ranks. Orangemen sometimes are charged with taking a too active part in politics. Let the charge stand, we do not deny it. In fighting a vast political organization like the Church of Rome it becomes necessary for us to enter politics. Both Liberal and Conservative should know that we stand for certain definite principles, such as constitutional government, freedom from oppression, complete civil and religious liberties and the integrity of the Empire. The party that will support these principles both in public and in private as well as on the public platform should have the support of the Orange Association. As Imperialists we were sorely disappointed at the action of the Senate in turning down the Navy Bill, whereby Canada would be enabled to pay a small part of the obligation which we owe to the mother land. Some of our brethren are now at the front and many are prepared to go. This is as it should be and we who remain at home should be prepared to make some sacrifice by helping those who have been left behind. We wish our soldier Brothers God Speed and may they be spared to return to their homes and loved ones.

And now as I return the emblem of authority I wish to thank you for the honor you conferred on me a year ago in electing me as your County Master, an honor I highly prize, and may I hope that my term of office has not been a failure. I wish to thank the brethren for the willing support they gave during the year, and may I ask for the same loyal support for my successor. Thanking you again, I am

Yours Fraternally,
H. A. DUKE,
Co. Master.

The statistical reports showed a net gain of 45 in membership. There were 122 initiations during the year and the 27 lodges within the jurisdiction now have a membership of 1359. Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows :—

Jos. J. Hiley Dead.

Jos. J. Hiley, an old resident of the town, died at his residence on Mill St. on Saturday, at the age of 75 years and 10 months. The funeral was held to the Forest Lawn cemetery on Tuesday afternoon. An extended obituary notice will appear next week.

Late Joseph Taylor.

Joseph Taylor, one of East Garafraxa's oldest residents, passed away Friday morning after an illness of about two years. Born in Wigton, Cumberlandshire, England, he came to Canada when 17 years of age, working near Guelph for a time before locating on his place on the 11th concession, where he has lived for 61 years. Three years afterwards he married Margaret Young, who proved a faithful, devoted and helpful partner sharing the burden of pioneer discouragements and hardships, and enjoying the fulfillment of that success which patient toil and honest endeavor brought. Mr. Taylor was a quiet man of few words, but fine regard for a promise given. He was a splendid farmer, and had one of the tidiest places in the district. In religion he was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, and in politics, a Reformer. To Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were born twelve children, and his death is the first break in the family circle. The family are James, in Winnipeg; Robert, in East Garafraxa; William, in East Luther; George, at Medicine Hat; Addison, at Yorkton; Thomas, at Innisfree; Fred, in West Garafraxa, and Art, on the homestead; Mrs. John Gerrie, of Belwood; Mrs. Wm. Sanderson, of Amaranth; Mrs. Geo. Felker, of Galt, and Miss Ethel at home. The funeral was very largely attended to McKee's cemetery on Monday.—Star & Vidette.

The Late Robert Duke.

Robert Duke, who died at 2138 Gerrard St. recently in his 63rd year was born near Orangeville. At an early age he started as an engineer, and later on was identified with the Grey & Bruce Railway. A few years after he moved to Toronto, and lived at the corner of Queen and Peter streets, then surrounded by orchards. He guided for a number of years, as engineer, the passenger train on the Toronto Belleville run. Just prior to his illness some three years ago, Mr. Duke had charge of the Pilot engine between Toronto and Scarboro Junction. He was an extremely careful man, and during his forty years on the line never had a mishap. He is survived by his widow, four sons, Robert, of Philadelphia; Charles, of Toronto; Gordon and Norman at home, and three daughters, Alice, Sara and May, of St. Albans, and Myrtle, living at home.

Death of "Dime" Stewart

Mr. M. F. Stewart, popularly known as "Dime" Stewart, died at the residence of his sister, Mrs. H. H. O'Reilly, of Oakville, on Tuesday. Deceased was the younger son of the late F. C. Stewart, an Orangeville merchant and one-time representative of Dufferin County in the Ontario Legislature. Deceased, who was in his 43rd year, was off-hand and jovial in his manner and was exceedingly popular wherever he went. He knew and was known by almost everybody in Orangeville and the surrounding district. Deceased served with the Strathcona Horse during the South African war. He had the misfortune to get badly injured in the Horseshoe wreck in September 1907 and never recovered fully from the effects of his injuries. Some years ago Mr. Stewart went west and engaged in farming and horse ranching. He was an enthusiastic horseman and an excellent judge of horses. Mr. Stewart is survived by three sisters—Mrs. Folgambe Awty, of Newmarket, Mrs. Frederick Thompson, of Mitchell, and Mrs. H. H. O'Reilly, of Oakville. Mr. Harry Stewart, of Vancouver, is the only brother. The remains reached Orangeville last night and were taken to St. Mark's Church. The funeral will be held from St. Mark's to Greenwood cemetery at 2 o'clock this (Thursday) afternoon.

Esquesing Agricultural Society fixed October 6 and 7 as the dates of the 1915 Fall Fair.

The Spear Bros., of Trafalgar, have purchased Mr. Jno. Barnes 100 acre farm in Erin Township.

Bolton Public School Board has re-engaged Mr. Jno. McDonald as secretary at a salary of $40 a year.

General Foch is a Young Man Yet, But A Brilliant Officer

WHEN the Germans began their movement against Dunkirk and Calais in order to obtain control of the French coast of the English Channel a new French army was organized and placed under the command of Gen. Ferdinand Foch, an officer who had the full confidence of Gen. Joffre.

Gen. Foch co-operated with Gen. Sir John French of the British forces in throwing a barrier of soldiers across all the roads leading to Dunkirk and Calais. The French commander was charged with the responsibility of holding back the Germans along the Belgian frontier and around Arras. Always keeping on the defensive, he succeeded in stopping the enemy. Since the middle of September Gen. Foch has demonstrated that his ability is as great on the aggressive as in defensive warfare.

An advocate of big guns, Gen. Foch believes that, other conditions being equal, the larger cannon will win. Gen. Foch's tactics have been to hold his infantry under shelter until the enemy's first line of fortifications has been rendered untenable.

Gen. Foch, although one of the younger of the French commanders, is considered one of the ablest. For his services in protecting the English Channel he received grateful recognition from King George, who on Dec. 7 conferred on him the decoration of the Order of the Bath.

Ambushed!

A letter from an English corporal who was wounded in France on Oct. 23 has just been received by a friend. The corporal writes:

"Well, we were through the thickest of the fighting between Ypres and Lille. We had twelve days in the trenches, two days together without any food or water. The ration party could not get near us, the fighting was so heavy.

"About the third night we were in the trench we found we were surrounded by a much larger force than we were. The enemy opened fire, and we replied. Then it came from the rear. They were in a wood, where there was a lot of undergrowth, and they had a machine gun playing on us. We lost one officer and a few men, and then we were fired on from both sides—what they called enfiladed fire.

"One awful sight is to watch the Belgian people leaving their homes. Poor things! They just tie a few things in the tablecloth, catch up the child in their arms and run like the devil.

"I forgot to tell you while we were lying in a French hospital in Boulogne we were visited by Queen Amelia of Portugal, and a very nice lady she is. I made her laugh. She came to my bed. I put my hand out and shook hands. She asked how I was, and I forgot myself for the time and said, 'Very well, thank you, your majesty.' She said, 'Very well?" and burst out laughing and said, 'I'm afraid you're not, but you soon will be. You have a very good spirit. That's what makes the British Tommy.' She spoke a few words of encouragement and bade us good-bye."

Newspaper vs. Bayonet.

So great a respect have the German infantry for "Tommy" and his bayonet that they make for themselves thick paddings of straw and newspapers and such things with a view to lessening the distance by which the bayonet can piece them. The Belgians, who at the outset of the fighting had very short bayonets, were the first against whom the Germans tried their new "chest protectors."

A Biplane's Capacity.

A large biplane can only carry a weight of some 150 pounds, with its aviator, and though seven or eight bombs of 20 pounds weight can do some damage, they are not very effective against fortifications and big ships.

Most Torpedoes Miss.

The calculation has been made that for every successful hit by a torpedo from a German submarine there must have been over ninety misses.

War Review of the Week

WITH operations on the western front virtually at a standstill so far as movements in one direction or another are concerned, the interest of critics of the war is focussed on the eastern arena. The news from the east this week is better than at any time since October. The Russians won a great victory against Von Hindenburg's best troops when they repulsed the Germans and crossed the Bzura on Friday morning. In spite of German counter-attacks of the utmost violence, and of a constant artillery fire more intense than any hitherto experienced, the Russians have not only maintained the ground won on Friday morning, but have undertaken a further offensive movement. The victory corresponds to that of the allies in the west when they finally drove the Germans back from the line of the Yser. The Russians for the better part of two months have been holding a somewhat irregular defensive battlefront along the course of the Bzura and Rawka rivers, roughly speaking, twenty-five miles west of Warsaw. The Germans have been trying to cross the rivers and advance upon the Polish capital. In late December they did secure a temporary lodgment on the east bank of the Bzura, but were unable to maintain it. Now the Russians, after clearing northern Poland on the right bank of the Vistula almost to the gates of Thorn, have crossed the Bzura near the point where it joins the Vistula, and are beginning to sweep back the German main invading army on the left bank of the Vistula.

While this great battle, involving some 300,000 men, is being fought in central Poland, a still greater is in progress far to the south on the Hungarian slope of the Carpathians. The Russian official report does not minimize the severity of this desperate struggle which is being waged for the command of the passes. If the Russians have to give them up and retire northward into Galicia, the Austro-German army, believed to number over half a million men, will be poured through the Dukla, Besked and Uszok Passes in an attempt to relieve Przemysl, the beleaguered Galician fortress, some 45 miles north of the Uszok Pass. The Russians in the Carpathians are at present content to hold what they have.

In East Prussia the Muscovites are gradually winning more German territory. Their battle-line extends from a point near Tilsit, in the north, to Johannisburg, in the south—over a hundred miles—and in this area the German people are themselves experiencing the horrors of war. The Kaiser's boast that the conflict was being waged entirely on hostile soil becomes more ridiculous daily as the Russians advance in East Prussia.

In the west there has been relatively little activity since early last week, when the Germans made an attack at La Bassee, only to be repulsed again by the British. Small advances on the part of the allies have been reported day by day, but the allied offensive is more in the nature of pressure on the German line than a serious effort to advance. It is improbable that any great attempt to press forward will be made until the ground is dry enough for the movement of the new French artillery to the front. The French War Office has little to say regarding the operations in Alsace, where the French troops have reached a point less than fifteen miles from the Rhine. Fighting in this area differs from that on the northern section of the line in that the opposing forces are not heavily entrenched, but rely upon field operations permitting great mobility of forces. Many critics believe that the Alsatian conflict is the crucial one in the campaign and that a strong allied force there will bring about the retreat of the entire German line in Belgium and France.

The much-vaunted invasion of Egypt by the Turks has met with prompt disaster Monday's despatches say the enemy's vanguard is in full retreat.

The Turks made their first attempt and cross the Suez Canal Tuesday and invade Egypt proper on Monday, and were disastrously defeated, for they were attacked by the British troops just as they attempted to set up their bridging material in position. Under the fire of the British troops the enemy fled in disorder, leaving all the material behind. This flight took place at Toussoum, 36 miles from Suez. Forty miles south of Port Said on the El-Kantara front the Turks also attacked the British forces at daylight Thursday, and were easily repulsed.

An outstanding event of the past week is the controversy which has begun over the use by the Cunard liner Lusitania of the United States flag, in order to pass safely through the area threatened by German submarines. The general disposition to justify the measure because of the presence of many Americans and representatives of other neutral nations on board the liner, are likely to bring the submarine menace before the diplomats of the world in a form which will compel discussion. If all British ships approaching and leaving their home ports fly the flag of some nation with which Germany is not at war it will greatly increase the danger to neutral shipping after Feb. 18, or else force the Germans to come to the surface and investigate the nationality of every vessel they propose to sink. They must either be prepared to launch a death-dealing torpedo against every ship that comes within range, irrespective of the flag she flies, or they must discover what ships are rightly flying neutral flags, and thus learn what vessels to spare and what to destroy.

Norseman's Glory May Be Revived by Proposed Alliance

THE recent meeting of the Kings of Sweden, Norway, and Denmark, to form an alliance of protection against the dangers, military, naval, and commercial, which threaten their countries in consequence of the war, was the registration by royalty of the commands of the people.

Each king is upon a throne by the suffrance of his subjects, Haakon was elected in Norway in 1905 after Norway had seceded from Sweden. The Norwegians gave Haakon small scope for initiative, and a year or so ago they took from him his only vestige of sovereignty, the right to confer decorations, a pleasure one might consider innocent enough for a king who is a figurehead.

Gustavus V. has been defied by the Swedish Parliament and threatened with compulsory abdication. Christian has to accept the co-operation of a Radical Danish Parliament, almost Socialistic, which has abolished the ministerial uniform for members of the Cabinet, has decreed that they shall no longer be addressed as "Your Excellency," but only as "Mr. Minister," and which has opened the highest Government offices to men who formerly were laborers. Christian has been upon the throne of Denmark less than two years.

The Scandinavians are among the hardiest, most industrious, most intelligent of people. They have a glorious record, military and naval. The old Vikings were the pirates of the sea, but also the pioneers in national expansion.

Scandinavia inspired Shakespeare to write "Hamlet." It has given Swendenborg to religion, Linnaeus to botany, and Ericsson to naval invention, Thorwaldsen to sculpture, Ibsen and Bjornson to literature, and Edward Grieg, Jenny Lind, and Christine Nilsson to music. From Scandinavia come the Nobel prizes each year for those who have made the most important discoveries in the field of science, who have written the most valuable literary work, or performed the most useful service in promoting peace among their fellow men.

Sweden's manufacturing specialty, the cream separators imported throughout the United States and Canada by the thousands, go to Russian farmers in even larger numbers.

Norway, not a manufacturing nor an agricultural country, has a source of national wealth in the Rjukan Falls, where the greatest water power plant in the world is located, to make hydrogen from the air and then convert it into saltpetre to be used as a fertilizer and in the manufacture of ammunition. The company is capitalized at $50,000,000 [illegible] has an enormous output. And most of it goes to Russia.

Denmark has not such productions to send to Russia, but she manufactures butter which epicures in distant parts of the world will buy in their shops at a dollar a pound, and Denmark needs peace with Russia and peace throughout Europe. The temptations of war a hundred years ago brought about her ruin. That was her golden period of prosperity, when the great powers were arrayed for and against Napoleon, making Denmark, a neutral country, the principal trading nation to the ports of the Baltic and the North Sea.

The King of Denmark and the King of Norway are brothers. Their mother is the first cousin of the King of Sweden. Bonds of relationship among the monarchs of those Scandinavian countries were in existence as early as 830 A. D. and continued through centuries. They made each king feel that he had an inherent right to the throne of either of the other two if there was any weakness in the succession and this bond of relationship has been the cause of most of Scandinavia's woes. It furnished an easy excuse for one king to invade the territory of either neighbor, each sovereign acting upon the ancient royal policy of his family that one king should control all three nations. To carry out this policy the people were forced to shed their blood in building up the personal power of royalty, defeating their own real interests and engendering hatred from generation to generation to divide them.

Beaver in Troubled Waters.

The Beaver after being published for over thirty years without a stain on its fair reputation has got "in wrong" at last. Last week we received notice from a legal firm in Toronto that a firm of picture dealers there had taken action against us for libel for publishing an article under the heading "Picture Fakers" in our issue of Jan. 14th, which article we reproduced from the Wiarton Record. We had thought that our cognomen would protect us from all this sort of thing as it is a well known fact that the beaver is one of the best protected animals in our fair Dominion, and, if in its zeal for work, it does cause damage it is overlooked. We might say that the firm which has sent us notice have a different name from the ones who were in the toils in Wiarton, and that when we published the article we had no idea that it would cause anyone any harm. Knowing our esteemed brother of the Record as well as we do, we doubt if he would publish anything not authentic and whether damages can be taken off ye editor of the Beaver for an article he did not write remains to be seen.—Hillsburg Beaver.

5000 Facts About Canada.

"Know Canada! make Canada known!" is a striking sentence in the War Year edition for 1915 of that popular booklet "5000 Facts About Canada," compiled by Frank Yeigh, of Toronto, who knows Canada as probably few Canadians do. It is true that he who would know Canada and its wonderful growth in any one year, will find this annual publication "worth its weight in Yukon gold or Cobalt silver," while as a means of making the Dominion known in other countries, it is no less valuable. Fifty chapters are devoted to such subjects as Agriculture, Area, Banking, Census, Immigration, Mining, Manufacturing, Trade, etc., and a page of Canadian War Facts show how up-to-date it is. Sketch Maps are included of the Dominion in 1867 and 1915. Copies may be had from progressive newsdealers, or by sending 25c. to the Canadian Facts Publishing Co., 588 Huron Street, Toronto, Canada.

Domestic Science Cooking Course.

The Women's Institute has made arrangements for a Domestic Science Cooking Course in the rooms over the Bank of Hamilton premises, commencing on Monday, Feb. 22nd. Classes will be held daily at 2.30 p.m. and will last 2½ hours. There will be 12 demonstrations and lectures on Foods and Cooking by Miss Gray, of Toronto, a graduate in Domestic Science and Art, who is sent out by the Institute Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The small sum of 50 cents covers the cost of the entire course. Any persons wishing to have any particular subjects discussed in the classes are invited to communicate with Mrs. J. A. Langford, the Secretary of the Orangeville Institute.

The Cooper Cases.

On Monday before P. M. Pattullo, Henry Cooper pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a robe from Miss Jennie McArthur and elected to be tried and sentenced by the magistrate. Mr. Pattullo deferred sentence until the trial of the other charges on which Copper was recently committed.

Cooper was also given preliminary hearing on the charge of stealing a collar, a wrench, some rolled oats, a Plymouth Rock rooster and 20 hens, the property of John Harshaw. The prisoner pleaded not guilty, but after hearing the evidence the magistrate decided to send him up for trial.

The two Coopers came up for election on Tuesday but on the advice of their counsel declined to state how they wished to be tried. We are informed that Harry Cooper is anxious to make a full confession, but the terms are not acceptable to the Crown. The matter will come up again on Friday.

The Rural Deanery of Peel will meet in Brampton on March 23 and 24.

St. Mark's Church Notes

On Sunday next services will be held to celebrate the 100 years peace that has existed between Canada and the United States. A special form of service will be used in the morning, and appropriate sermons preached by the Rector at both services. The subject at the morning service will be "The Christian Ideal of Peace as the highest expression of the life of humanity on earth." In the evening the subject will be, "The Christian Spirit of Peace at work in the World."

Presentations.

One night recently about twenty-six of their little friends presented Miss Ruth Ritchie with a pretty signet ring and Master Jack with a flashlight. The presentations were made at their home, where the gathering was pleasantly entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie. The Methodist Church Mission Band also presented Miss Ruth, who has held the office of Secretary for some time, with a large bouquet of carnations.

Orangeville Horticultural Society.

Tickets of membership are now ready, and the new Option Lists for 1915 can now be obtained. It is very necessary that subscriptions for this year should be taken up at once, as the Directors desire to place the orders early so as to obtain first choice of plants and trees from the growers, instead of leaving it until late when we have to be satisfied with second or third choice. The Society this year is well in hand with their work, and everything is promising for a banner year for the Orangeville Society. It is to be hoped that the membership will be at least 200. Join the Society. It pays to do so even if you have only a very small back garden. The membership fee is one dollar, and this is given back to you by your own choice of one dollar's worth of plants, etc., of your own selection from the Option List. In addition there is a free grant of bulbs in the Fall, as well as the opportunity of securing extra orders at wholesale.

Daughters of the Empire.

The annual meeting of Lord Dufferin Chapter of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire was held at the home of Mrs. Dahl, on Thursday, Feb. 4th. The election of officers resulted as follows:—

Hon.-Regent—Mrs. Dewar
Regent—Mrs. Hyland
1st Vice-Regent—Mrs. McKeown
2nd Vice-Regent—Mrs. W. E. Irvine
Recording Secretary — Mrs. Tom Brown
Corresponding Secretary — Miss Hulse
Treasurer—Mrs. Dahl
Standard Bearer—Mrs. W. G. Fisher
Secretary of Echoes—Miss A. L. Clark.

A pleasing event of the afternoon was the presentation of a very handsome mesh bag to Mrs. F. W. Ritchie, who is about to remove to Southern California. Mrs. Ritchie will be greatly missed as she has always been a most willing and faithful worker in the Chapter.

PEEL COUNTY COUNCIL

Large Increase in the Equalized Assessment.

Cost of Insurance of Soldiers was $42.14 each.

The county council completed its business on Saturday. The following extracts from reports presented contain the important items of the business transacted. The equalization of assessment is usually a matter which creates much discussion. This year there is an increase of $657,000, $489,000 of which is on Brampton alone.

The report of the Educational Committee recommended the payment of $3316 to the Brampton High School, $172 to Streetsville High School, $472.58 to Georgetown; $191.84 to Weston; $575 to Orangeville. J. G. Roberts was reappointed trustee of Brampton High School and Dr. Bowie of Streetsville High School for the next three years.

Charles Elliott, Reeve of Port Credit, presented the report of the Committee on Equalization, which was adopted in council. Mr. Milner and Mr. Beatty dissenting. The equalized assessment of the different municipalities for the year 1915 is as follows:—

	1915.	1914.
Albion	$1,693,000	$1,718,000
Caledon	2,033,000	2,127,000
Chinguacousy	4,252,000	4,203,000
Toronto Twp.	4,080,000	3,790,000
Toronto Gore	972,000	960,000
Brampton ...	1,449,000	960,000
Bolton	189,000	157,000
Port Credit ...	398,000	206,000
Streetsville ...	245,000	148,000
	$15,308,000	$14,651,000

The above figures show an increase in all of the municipalities with the exception of Albion and Caledon, which have slightly decreased.

The Finance Committee recommended the following payments:—Children's Aid Society of Peel County $200; Sick Children's Hospital $30; Malton Agricultural Society $35.

The report of the Good Roads Committee recommended that the claim of the Township of Albion for $400 paid out of their share of the Good Roads Fund to Patrick Keenaghan be refunded to the township; that the claim of Mr. McClelland for damages sustained while the road was being built be not entertained. After a long discussion, in which Mr. McCabe, reeve of Albion, made a strong plea on behalf of his township for the settlement of these claims and also the amount of the Slack indebtedness to the township, the matter was referred to a special committee, consisting of Messrs. Elliott, Quinn and McCaugherty, to meet with the council of Albion and arrange a settlement and report at the next meeting of the council. The committee also recommended that the council forward to the Ontario Legislature a memorial praying that the Provincial Highway Act be amended so as to provide that whenever in any county all roads have been constructed which were assumed under the County Good Roads System that the council of any such county may by by-law provide that thereafter each local municipality shall maintain such good roads as are within the particular limit of any such municipality and be liable therefor and respecting same as if such roads had never been assumed by such county, such local municipality to agree with the legislature to maintain such roads within its limits at the same standard as they have been constructed. The council refused to adopt this recommendation.

A. H. Milner presented the report of the Patriotic Fund Committee, showing that ninety-four of the soldiers of Peel County had been insured at a cost of $42.14 each. The list of dependents had not increased since the last report. For the month of February there were cheques issued to thirteen different families for amounts aggregating $194.

The report of the Committee on County Property, Roads and Bridges contained a reference to the re-covering of the bridge over the Etobicoke River on Dundas Street, and also an application for a new bridge spanning the River Credit at Port Credit. No action was taken.

Mr. Wheelock's report showed an expenditure on Good Roads for 1914 of $31,386.55.—Conservator.

'The Seven Mistakes of Life'

"The Seven Mistakes of Life" are, What is believed to be the seven fundamental mistakes we make as individuals; that affect our career most seriously—mistakes that short circuit our progress and seriously hinder the development of all men and women, consequently impeding the progress and advancement of the race.

1. The delusion that individual advancement is made by crushing others down.
2. The tendency to worry about things that cannot be changed or corrected.
3. Insisting that a thing is impossible because we ourselves cannot accomplish it.
4. Attempting to compel other men to believe and live as we do.
5. Neglect in developing and refining the mind by not acquiring the habit of reading fine literature.
6. Refusing to set aside trivial preferences, in order that important things may be accomplished.
7. The failure to establish the habit of saving money.

AMERICANS COMING.

Will be Large Influx of United States Farmers This Year.

Regina, Sask., Feb. 6th.—Much interest has been taken in the statements made by J. Bruce Walker, Dominion Commissioner of Immigration, to the effect that there will be a large influx of American farmers during the present year. The newspapers of Saskatchewan all agree that the United States farmer is a very welcome settler in Western Canada, and of considerably more value to the country than immigrants from European countries. It is pointed out that the American and English farmer is not only educated in the most advanced methods of farming but also has sufficient capital to finance his own operations, which makes him a very welcome acquisition to the settlers of Western Canada.

Hospital Notes

The Daughters of the Empire wish to announce that they have engaged Caledon Old Dramatic Club to give their new play, "The Danger Signal," in the Opera House on Feb. 26. The proceeds will be divided between the Red Cross fund and The Lord Dufferin Hospital. Watch for further particulars.

Dr. Groves, of Fergus, visited the Hospital on Monday. We are glad to report that all the patients are doing well.

PATRIOTISM and PRODUCTION

The Empire's Call to Farmers

"Approximately twenty million men have been mobilized in Europe. A large proportion of these have been withdrawn from the farms of the countries at war. Even in neutral countries large numbers of food producers have been called from the land to be ready for emergencies. It is difficult for us to realize what will be the effect on food production through the withdrawal of several million men from all the great agricultural countries of Europe. These millions cease to be producers, they have become consumers, —worse still, they have become destroyers of food."

HON. MARTIN BURRELL, Minister of Agriculture.

Britain must have food—food this year, and food next year. Britain is looking to Canada to supply most of that food. We are sending our surplus now, but we must prepare for a larger surplus this year and next year. Patriotism and Production must go hand in hand

Because of this need of the Empire for more food, and the call to Canada in that need, the Canadian Department of Agriculture has arranged for a series of Conferences throughout the Dominion with the object of giving suggestions as to the best ways of increasing production of the particular products needed at this time. At these conferences agricultural specialists, who have studied agricultural conditions and production throughout the world, and the best means of increasing agricultural production in Canada, will give valuable information and suggestions to the farmers, live-stock men, dairymen, poultrymen, vegetable growers, and other producers of this country. The Canadian Department of Agriculture urges you to attend as many of these Conferences as possible, also to watch for other information on the subject that will be given in other announcements in this newspaper.

Put Energy into Production of Staple Foods

The Government does not ask farmers to work harder, so much as it urges them to make their work more productive, and to produce those staple foods that the Empire most needs and that can be most easily stored and transported.

Europe, and particularly Britain, will need the following staple foods from Canada more than ever before:—

Wheat, oats, corn, beans, peas. Beef, mutton, bacon and ham. Cheese and butter. Poultry and eggs. Vegetables, such as potatoes, onions, and turnips.

The larger the yield of these staple food products, the greater the service to the Empire. Germany in the last ten years has doubled the average yield of the majority of her field crops largely through better seed, thorough cultivation and use of fertilizer. And while the Empire's armies are busy putting down German Militarism, let us at home appropriate the best of Germany's agricultural methods for the Empire's advantage.

The Government urges farmers, stockmen, dairymen and other producers to make a wider use of the Free Bulletins issued by the Canadian Department of Agriculture. Clip out, fill in and mail the coupon below and get a list of these bulletins. Then select the bulletins that will be of value to you. Mail your coupon right now. Do not put a stamp on the envelope. Your coupon will be "On His Majesty's Service."

CO-OPERATIVE EXPERIMENTS IN BEE-KEEPING.

541 Beekeepers Engaged in Experiments Under the Direction of the Experimental Union in 1914.

Many Benefits Were Derived.

During the season of 1914 instructions and material for conducting co-operative experiments in beekeeping were sent to 541 beekeepers by the Provincial Apiarist, Mr. Morley Pettit of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Ont., and while many failed to send formal reports it is quite evident from correspondence that great benefits have been derived which cannot well be tabulated.

The season of 1914 will go down in the history of Ontario beekeeping as one of the poorest for honey production ever known. Bees wintered better than usual and a better spring for building up could not be desired. In some sections clover bloomed profusely but there was very little honey anywhere. The average crop reported for the Province was about 16 lbs. per colony as opposed to an average of over 100 lbs. per colony in 1913. As usual the average crop reported by experimenters is much better than the general average, the experimenters reporting on their crops having a 35 lb. average. This will of course, be modified by the fact that many experimenters became discouraged and sent no report, but the fact remains that the careful beekeeper always secures better returns than his indifferent neighbor.

The effect of the general failure upon results from co-operative experiments is very marked as the honey flow is one of the greatest factors controlling the behaviour of bees.

The most popular experiment of the season was a new method of introducing laying queens to queenless colonies. It was quite natural that this experiment should attract wide attention because the spread of European Foul Brood requires wholesale requeening and gives increased prominence to the problem of queen introduction. The method tested, while not always successful, has proven its worth to stand in front rank of known methods for performing this operation.

The results obtained from Experiment No. 1, a method for the prevention of natural swarming in extracted honey production by holding the colony together, indicate that by this method swarming was reduced from 35 per cent. to 5 per cent.; the average honey crop per colony being increased.

Results from Experiment No. 2, the prevention of natural swarming in comb honey production, were very incomplete because the production of comb honey is always affected more by a poor season than that of extracted honey. It was demonstrated, however, that comb honey is always affected more by a poor season than that of extracted honey. It was demonstrated, however, that comb honey can be produced without natural swarming.

The results from Experiment No. 3, the prevention of natural swarming by manipulation of hives instead of combs, indicate that it is a great advantage to give the queen an extra brood chamber of empty combs for a week or two before the opening of clover flow, provided the colony is strong enough to need the extra space.

Those who tried Experiment No. 4, which is a method of spring management of bees, prove beyond question that it pays to give hives extra protection when they are taken out of the cellar early in the spring. The extra warmth so obtained is of great value to them in early brood rearing.

Experiment No. 7, which is the "smoke method" of introducing a queen to a full colony, proved entirely satisfactory with two-thirds of the experimenters. The system is as follows:—A colony to receive a queen has the entrance reduced to about a square inch, and then about three puffs of thick white smoke is blown in and the entrance closed. In from fifteen to twenty seconds the colony will be roaring. The small space at the entrance is now opened; the queen is run in, followed by a gentle puff of smoke, and the space again closed and left closed for about ten minutes, when it is re-opened and the bees are allowed to ventilate and quiet down. The full entrance is not given for an hour or more, or even until the next day. The theory of the cause of the success of this method is this:—Bees in distress, know no enemy or alien, and every one is turning to some other for help or food, and every bee which comes within the influence of the uproar of a distressed colony seems to be seized with the same emotion. In other words, when a queen is introduced to a hive under these conditions the bees do not know her from their own queen and she is accepted without question.

The Special Experiment on Races of Bees. Applications for this experiment were sent to beekeepers in counties where European Foul Brood, this much dreaded disease of bees is known to exist, also to members of the Experimental Union. The material sent is an untested queen of the Italian race purchased from some reliable queen breeder. The experimenter is asked to introduce this queen to some colony or nucleus and give her the best of care and report later on her value as a breeder and the value of her bees as resisters of European Foul Brood. One hundred and six beekeepers applied for this experiment and received one queen each. Later thirty of these reported that the queen had been successfully introduced and the colonies were going into winter quarters in good condition. The following is a sample of reports received on these queens. "The queen you sent me was introduced into my worst case of European Foul Brood and it is now one of my strongest colonies and free from disease. She certainly is a good queen as the colony did not gather over 10 lbs. of white honey." It is proven beyond a doubt that the best remedy for this disease is the use of vigorous Italian queens.

One hundred and forty-four applications were received for an experiment on wintering bees out-doors. Directions were sent to these experimenters and we shall hope to have reports from them early in the season of 1915.

There were 541 experimenters. These had in the spring of 1914, 15,490 colonies of bees, an average of 28.6 colonies each. Forty-five of these persons have kept bees for 25 years and over; 98 between 10 and 24 years; 93 between 5 and 9 years and 180 under 5 years. One hundred and thirty-five did not report the number of years they had kept bees. There is a great variety of hives kept, but experimenters have their bees in Langstroth hives.

In all there are 7,222 colonies of Italian bees, 5,422 crossed Italian bees, 5,422 crossed Italian and black bees, and the balance 2,846 are principally common black bees. This shows a marked gain in the number of Italian bees kept.

Kidney Disease in Every Symptom

Why Mrs. Mark Found Quick Relief in Dodds Kidney Pills.

New Brunswick Lady who Suffered for Six Years Tells How She Found a Speedy Cure.

Miscou Harbor, Gloucester Co., N. B. Feb. 8th (Special)—"For some five or six years I was troubled with backache. I tried many tonics, but kept growing steadily worse, until I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. They gave me almost immediate relief."

This is the statement of Mrs. A. Mark, well known and highly respected here. Asked to give more particulars in regard to her case, Mrs. Mark said:

"My trouble started with a cold, and gradually grew worse. I had stiffness in my joints and cramps in my muscles and suffered from neuralgia. I had heart flutterings and headaches, my sleep was broken and unrefreshing and I was always tired and nervous. I had dark circles under my eyes, I was irritable and often dizzy and had a bitter taste in my mouth in the mornings. I also had attacks of rheumatism.

"It just took three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills to fix me up."

Every symptom Mrs. Mark mentions spells kidney disease. That's why she found such quick relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

A TRYING EXPERIENCE IN 1870.

How a Canadian was Nearly Shot as a French Spy.

Dr. Geo. M. Warren, until recently surgeon-major of the 2nd Dragoons, went through the Franco-Prussian War 1870-1, as a member of one of the Bavarian ambulances. He had a number of interesting experiences, one of which was a narrow escape from being shot, after the battle of Sedan. The decisive battle had been fought and won and Dr. Warren's ambulance was immediately stationed in the Caserne D'Asfelte, a huge fortress at the back of and overlooking the town, which was completely surrounded by a wall of solid masonry.

This place soon filled with wounded and the work of the surgeons became very arduous, as Dr. Warren relates. "It was almost necessary to run out for a walk on the ramparts, to get a breath of fresh air, three or four times a day, and on one of these trips I noticed in the moat below, a very handsome sword with a rich gold belt and, although the whole country around was thickly strewn with swords, lances, rifles, etc., this one was so much better, that I decided to secure it as a souvenir, that evening. But, owing to an officer of the Imperial Guard having been shot the night before, by a sentry and the large number of spies prowling about, an order was issued from headquarters warning everyone to be inside the town gates before dark and the sentries were cautioned to be doubly alert. There appeared, however, to be plenty of time after the hospital work was done for me to go out and around the ramparts to where the sword was lying in the moat, and this I attempted. The sword was secured and after buckling it on and admiring it, I started on my return, highly elated and pleased with my find. I had not however, noticed a pair of keen eyes watching my every movement from a corner on the wall about fifty yards distant. I had only taken a few steps when I was stopped by a sentry who fairly roared, 'Halt.' I did not lose time halting. Then came the order to advance, which I also obeyed promptly but this did not seem to satisfy him. I called out who I was but he shouted back that I was a French spy. I tried to get closer to him but immediately heard the clicking of his needlegun as he opened the breach, slipped in a cartridge. Raising the rifle he took dead aim at me and without hesitation, fired. For an instant I was stunned. I had thought at first he was trying to frighten me but this showed me I could expect no mercy from him. He had missed me the first time but would not on the next shot. I then began to shout the names of some of our surgeons, hoping, by some chance they might hear me. In the meantime the sentry was struggling with his rifle to loosen the empty shell, which had stuck, a defect which occurred very frequently with the first lot of needle guns turned out by the Prussians. I had time to think of home and saw nothing but death for a few minutes. I knew what the sentry's instructions were, especially when darkness was settling down and I knew he was bound to shoot anyone out of place and have it approved of, but never to let one escape. I knew also that a hole in the bottom of the moat where I stood would be dug and, inside of thirty minutes, my body would be rolled into it and my relations never know. These thoughts passed quickly through my mind, though it seemed an hour, until the sound of footsteps running towards us on top of the wall caused me to turn quickly. I saw another sentry, who, on hearing the report of the rifle, had come up. The first sentry replied to his query: 'A Frenchman, a spy, shoot him.' I raised both hands and jumped towards him, shouting that I was a surgeon of the fortress and begging him to take me into the guardhouse. He gave the command, 'Right about march,' and with his finger on the trigger and muzzle of his rifle pointed directly at my head, he marched me to the next sentry and he to another, etc., until I was brought into the guardhouse, where, after some excited talking, I was allowed to go free. I left the sword in the moat. I never went back for it."

ALBION THREATENS COUNTY.

Trouble Over Road Funds—Township Talks Law.

Albion Township Council has instituted proceedings to recover $1,495 from the county in respect of road accounts paid by them. Reeve McCabe is making an effort to have the matter disposed of without going to law, and made a strong plea for a settlement before the County Council. A committee, composed of Reeve Elliott, of Port Credit, McCaugherty, of Toronto Township, and Quinn, of Caledon, was appointed to meet the Albion Township Council and, if possible, settle the matter.

The circumstances of the case are interesting. Some years ago Peel commenced the building of 100 miles of good roads, allotting certain roads in each township and dividing the money amongst the different municipalities. During the construction of the county road in the Township of Albion, a claim was made by Mr. McClelland, a miller at Palgrave, for $200 damages sustained by a stoppage of the entrance to his mill. This was paid by the county and charged to the Albion Good Roads account. A short time afterwards Patrick Keenahan was injured on the highway in the same township, and obtained damages amounting to $400, which was also paid by the county and charged against Albion Good Roads allowance. A further sum of $845 was charged for money paid to Joseph Shack, road commissioner of Albion Township, now deceased. This amount was also charged against the Township of Albion.

THRILLING ACTS OF HEROISM TAKEN FROM RECORDS OF WAR

Soldiers Who Fight With a Fine Disregard of Shot and Shell.

Graphic Side Lights on the Great Armed Conflict of the Nations.

DEEDS of dauntless courage, tragic episodes and remarkable incidents are found in the human interest stories from the fields of battle of the warring nations of Europe. Some of the best of these stories are told here.

Particulars have been received at Petrograd of the heroic action of Lieutenant Smirnoff in an engagement at Mazur lakes.

At the end of it his battery was flanked on the right by German infantry and on the left by machine guns. Behind him was a lake, cutting off retreat. Determined not to surrender, Lieutenant Smirnoff galloped full speed with his battery into the lake, in which every man and beast was drowned.

Smirnoff's father, learning of his son's action, expressed joy at his choice of death before surrender.

During an assault on the fortress of Ossowitz a German column got into a bog. The Russians shelled the bog and the single road crossing it. The Germans in trying to extricate themselves sank deeper and deeper into the mire, and hundreds were killed or wounded. Of the whole column there were only about forty survivors.

HAD TO CALL GUNNER OFF.

An incident of the courage of the British Royal Field Artillery is related by a soldier of the Twentieth Hussars.

A half battery in rather exposed position was galling the Germans by the accuracy of its aim. Finally the Germans concentrated several of their batteries on it. The result could only be one thing, as it was a David against a half dozen Goliaths. Finally all the guns were silenced but one. The men who had been manning them were lying dead and wounded around the ground.

One man was left. He went about his work with a doggedness that bespoke determination to stick there to the end. And the end would have come soon, as the Germans, who had stopped firing for a minute, were about to recommence to silence the lone gun. But an officer interfered calling the lone gunner away. An [illegible] regretfully.

DIGGING ZIG-ZAG TRENCHES.

[illegible]-SEVEN WOUNDS.

A French surgeon-major now in Paris hospital has ninety-seven officially counted wounds. He tells this story:

"After a hard day's fighting on Aug. 20 I bandaged my last case and was remounting my horse when I heard a sound like thunder, and a shell burst over my head. The horse was killed, and I was thrown violently to the ground. An orderly carried me a mile and a quarter, when he found a stretcher, on which he carried me three miles farther.

"No essential organ was touched. I lost an ear and the sense of hearing; the right side of my head was scarred; my left arm was ripped to the bone; my back was riddled like a colander; my loins were torn and my legs tattooed in highly inartistic designs, but I still live."

KISS FLAG, RUSH TO DIE.

The London News prints the following dispatch from Petrograd:

"It was necessary to take Orlau (in Austrian Silesia) at all costs," said a wounded Russian colonel. "I was in the centre vanguard, advancing under a hail of shrapnel; whole lines crumpled like corn before a hailstorm; still we advanced.

"Of my regiment few remained; the officers were nearly all killed or wounded, and the colors passed from hand to hand. Soon they were near me. The next moment I snatched them from a falling soldier.

"Soldiers near me kissed the blood stained and tattered colors and then rushed forward with their faces set to die for their country."

FRENCH HUSSAR AT FOURTEEN.

Paris Excelsior prints a photograph of France's youngest soldier. Albert Schuffrenkes, aged fourteen, attached to the Third Hussars, but for the present taking a course of training at the French cavalry school after playing a man's part in the fighting around Muelhausen.

The son of a forester near Belfort, he first acted as guide for French troops through the forests. Then he attached himself to the artillery, who gave him their smallest uniform and made him a regimental pet. When the force was reorganized Albert managed to join the Forty-Second infantry, doing odd jobs for the soldiers, but he did not think this branch of the service sufficiently active. One didn't see enough Prussians, he told an interviewer.

A NAP IN THE TRENCHES.

He won the favor of the color sergeant of the Third Hussars at Noailles, who allowed him to take a place in the ranks on a horse whose rider had been killed. He went through the battle of the Marne unhurt, capturing four Prussian horses and killing the uhlan who was leading them. As soon as his training is completed he will rejoin his regiment.

"ANYWHERE, BUT MUST FIGHT!"

A British sergeant of the Third Dragoon Guards at the British consulate was calling out the names of reservists who were applying for enlistment.

"Any one else to enlist?" he shouted.

"Here!" said a voice in the corner, and a short man stepped forward.

"What's your name?" said the sergeant.

"Heinrich Heine," came the prompt reply.

The sergeant's monocle dropped suddenly. "And you want to fight the Germans?" he said, with surprise.

"Sure; anything's good enough for me. I was born in Canada of German parentage, but both my father and mother are dead, so I won't be fighting against them. I don't care who I fight with as long as I fight."

GIVE THEM "BIFF, BIFF!"

Private Harman of the King's Royal Rifles, wounded at Mons, gives a graphic description of his experiences, one of which was to see a fight between aeroplanes.

"We did not like the order to retire at Mons. We knew we were doing better than the Germans and inflicting heavy losses on them.

"The officers knew we were disappointed because on the fifth day of retiring—we had three days at Mons before we began to retreat—our commanding officer came round and spoke to us saying:

"'Stick it, boys; stick it! To-morrow we shall go the other way and advance. Biff, biff!'

"The way he said 'Biff, biff!' delighted the men, and after that you could frequently hear the men shouting 'Biff, biff!'"

Crippled With Rheumatism

And Skeptical After Trying Many Medicines—Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Cured Him.

When the kidneys fail to purify the blood the poisons left in the system cause pain and suffering, such as backache, lumbago and rheumatism. See how this skeptic was cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. F. W. Brown, Kingsbury, Que., writes:—"I have been completely cured of backache and lame back by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I also recommended the pills to a man who was a cripple from rheumatism. He was skeptical, as he said that he had tried nearly everything on earth. Finally he consented to try them, and to his surprise was greatly benefited in the first week, and the pains left his legs until he was so supple he could walk without pain or difficulty. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have worked wonders in this place, and I think there is no medicine like them. CAUGHT BLUFFING.

Mrs. Pankhurst Calls Upon London Hooligan to Make Good.

Mrs. Pankhurst is reminding London men that last year, and the year before, when they were mobbing and in every possible way insulting the women who sought to speak for suffrage in Hyde Park and at other places, their bellowing cry then was that if war should come they would have to protect the women, and that women, unable to protect themselves, should not have an equal right of suffrage with those whose duty it may become, at any time, to protect them. "You did not then think," says Mrs. Pankhurst in flaying her verbal lash over the shoulders of the men of Eastcheap and Whitechapel, "that the time was so near at hand for you to come to our defence. The women can neither fight nor vote. You can do both. We call on you for that protection you promised to give us when you denied us the ballot. The German is at the gate. Will you protect us or must we protect ourselves?"

There has been a frightful mortality of officers in the British ranks since the British troops engaged the enemy, says the St. Louis Daily Globe-Democrat, editorially. That fact attests that the old British tradition have been maintained by the "thin line," recruited almost wholly outside of London. We took occasion to say, while women were being maltreated by London hooligans, that men good for such work were not likely to be good for anything else, and that London is not England, though it holds so many people. If anything could make the London cockney enlist, the scorn of Mrs. Pankhurst ought to do it. His bluff has been called, and he is caught bluffing. After the war he will be as ready as ever to charge women's meetings in Hyde Park with the cry that women are not fit for military service. Should conscription come many of this gentry will no doubt be seeking to prove that they are [illegible] more fit than women for active service.

Relic of the Lutine.

Another relic—a 12-pounder gun—recovered from the wreck of H.M. Majesty's ship Lutine, has been mounted outside the main entrance to Lloyd's, and is an object of much interest to visitors to the Royal Exchange, London. This is the fourth gun of the kind which has been raised from the wreck. Three other weapons were taken up about 20 years ago. One was presented by Lloyd's to Queen Victoria, one to Queen Wilhelmina, and the other in the Corporation of London. The one last named is at the Guildhall Museum. Many other interesting relics of the Lutine are to be seen at Lloyd's. The bell known of these is the Lutine bell, the tolling of which always indicates the receipt of news of the gravest importance to all interested in shipping. The Lutine, which was wrecked off the coast of Holland in 1799, carried a large amount of specie. As the result of salvage operations, which have been carried on from time to time, specie of the value of nearly $250,000 has been recovered.

A large number of Queen's students have volunteered for overseas medical service and twenty have been pieved out as dressers in the Duchess of Connaught Hospital at Cliveden, England.

Wm. Gott, sr., a highly respected pioneer of Proton township, passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. G. Nixon, of Artemesia, on Tuesday, February 2nd, aged 75 years.

A quiet home wedding took place at the residence of Mr. Robt. Dixon, Grand Valley, when his eldest daughter, Miss Margaret, became the bride of Mr. Leonard Bessey, of Kindersley, Sask.

The stable and summer kitchen in connection with Miss Maude McGill's residence in Erin Village were destroyed by fire a week ago Sunday evening. The house was saved by hard work.

The sheds of the Ontario Hotel at Bolton caved in the other day from the weight of snow on the roof. An old blacksmith shop, formerly owned by Geo. Cotes, came to grief in the same manner.

Mono Road has two representatives with the first Canadian Contingent. They are Norman Hutchinson and James Perdue. A third, Selwyn Judge, has enlisted for service with the 3rd Contingent.

Miss Kate Davey, of Mount Forest, formerly of Mono Mills, has been successful in passing her examination at the Toronto Conservatory of Music, taking honors in history and intermediate harmony.

Miss Mildred Muir, a Fergus High School student, fell on the steps of St. Andrew's Church and had her arm broken. Mrs. Ritchie sustained a fractured arm and two broken ribs in the same manner.

IN DREAD OF CROUP.

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses, at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

James Black, reeve of Eramosa township, died very suddenly following an operation in St. Joseph's hospital, Guelph. He was 58 years of age and leaves a widow and family of two sons and five daughters.

Mr. Arch. Filshie, sr., a prominent citizen of Mount Forest, died a week ago Friday. Deceased was born in Old Kirkpatrick near Glasgow, Scotland. He ran a large foundry in Mount Forest until a few years ago.

Mr. Morris Saxe, of Acton, has received a letter from his father who lives near Kiev, Russia, in which the writer says that a five pound loaf of bread costs one dollar and that bread is being sold on the street by the slice.

Samuel McMaster, of Utopia, got his clothing caught in the machinery of a chopping mill and had one leg broken. He was pulled over the shaft and under the hopper, the broken leg being horribly lacerated to within two inches of the knee.

Mr. Robert McDowell, of Owen Sound, has gone to New York, where he expects to purchase an aeroplane. Mr. McDowell was the first Owen Sound man to own a bicycle or an automobile and it is evident that he will be again the pioneer in exploiting an air craft.

W. J. Huston, of Sarawak, who went to the front with the Princess Patricias, died on January 25th, from wounds received in an engagement with the Germans. Deceased was a married man and leaves a widow and three or four children, who reside in Fort William.

American beauty roses will be at a premium in Brampton for some time. The heavy fall of snow caused the collapse of one of the largest American beauty houses at the Dale Green Houses. The green house, which was 350 feet long caved in throughout the entire length.

NOTHING CAN EQUAL BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. Alex. Butchard, Conn. Ont., writes:—"My daughter has used Baby's Own Tablets for her baby and thinks there is nothing to equal them for little ones. All mothers, who have used the Tablets, say the same thing. They break up colds, regulate the bowels and stomach and keep the little ones healthy and happy. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

James Laking has sold his farm in Mulmur township to Thos. Bates, jr., for $4000.

Edward Reid, of Perm, has bought E. A. Anderson's farm near Mansfield, paying $4500.

Mrs. Richard Horsley, lot 20, concession 2, Amaranth, fell on the kitchen floor and broke both bones of her left arm.

Mrs. John Kelley, of the 4th line, Melancthon, who has been ill since Christmas, has been taken to the Toronto General Hospital.

Edward Greer, one of the oldest residents of Mulmur township, died a week ago Saturday morning at the advanced age of 90 years.

Notwithstanding the heavy expenditure in establishing the rural route system in Canada, the Postmaster-General's report for 1914 shows a net surplus of $134,157.

The proposal to Vaughan Township to open up the town line between Vaughan and Etobicoke for traffic does not meet with much support, as Engineer Frank Barber says it would cost $20,000.

Miss Agnes Jamieson, formerly the owner of a grocery and confectionery business in Shelburne, died at the residence of Mr. Alex. Jamieson in Melancthon on Saturday, February 6th, in her 40th year. Deceased was a daughter of the late Andrew Jamieson, of Shrigley.

Geo. Laking, clerk of Mulmur township for many years, has resigned and Geo. E. Foster, of Honeywood, has been appointed to succeed him. Robt. Gallaugher, the treasurer, has also resigned and has been succeeded by Paul Gallaugher. Messrs. Laking and Robt. Gallaugher are now residents of Shelburne.

Patriotism and Production.

The attention of every reader is directed to the advertisement appearing in this issue announcing the Patriotism and Production Conference to be held in the Town Hall here, Feb. 26th next.

The British Empire has need of all the aid and support that everyone can give. Every Canadian has a duty to perform to help the Empire at the present time, and the Canadian farmer has a duty to perform. What is the duty of the farmer?

The Conferences are being held for the purpose of putting before the farmers the actual conditions and showing what the Empire needs and along what lines they should direct their production during the coming years.

The situation is a serious one, and every farmer is urged to attend the various sessions of the Conferences. Not only will the meetings be of value to farmers and their wives, but to business and professional men as well, and all are urged to make special efforts to be present.

The speakers, Messrs. Smith, Hon. Nelson Monteith and Farrell, have made a special study of the subject and are well prepared to give direct and definite information in the matter.

Make your plans to attend the meetings and find out how you may do YOUR DUTY TO THE EMPIRE.

Empire First.

(Written by Sergt. Major Stremble, C.A.S.C. Field Bakery, Exhibition Park, Toronto).

Shall we break the plight of youth,
And pledge us to an alien love?
No! We hold our faith and truth,
Trusting to God above.
Stand Canadians, firmly stand
Round the flag of Motherland.

Britain bore us in her flank,
Britain nursed us at our birth,
Britain reared us to our rank,
Mid the nations of the earth.
Stand Canadians, firmly stand
Round the flag of Motherland.

In the hour of pain and dread,
In the gathering of the storm,
Britain raised above our head
Her broad shield and sheltering arm.
Stand Canadians, firmly stand,
Round the flag of Motherland.

O triune kingdom of the brave,
O sea girt island of the free,
O Empire of the land and wave,
Our hearts, our hands are all for thee.
Stand Canadians, firmly stand,
Round the flag of Motherland.

Which Should Pay Most?

A Mono subscriber forwards the following communication under the caption "What Is My Share?"

Two men were trying to make up a deficiency in a minister's salary. Mr. A. said to Mr. B., "I think you ought to give a little more in view of your circumstances. Excuse me for being so plain with you."

"Yes, but to tell the truth, Mr. A," was the rejoinder, "I always thought the same of you. I felt like hiding behind you. I thought I had no right to give as much as you."

Let us look into the circumstances of these two men for a moment. Mr. A. had 200 acres of land. One farm was paid for and there was a small mortgage of $1000 or $1500 against the other. He had a good stock, everything around him that he needed and was doing well. He had seven children, mostly grown up, two of them being boys who were looking for a start in life. Mr. B. owned 100 acres of land, all paid for, and was worth about $5000. He had a good stock, everything he needed around the place and a few hundred dollars in the bank as well. Now which of these men do you think should give the most?"

I think Mr. B. should. Mr. A. will have to go into debt to give his boys a start in life. He will have to pay interest for many a day yet before he gets his family settled, while Mr. B. could retire at any time. Reader, what do you say?

An admission fee of 15c will be charged.

THE TOWN COUNCIL.

Special Committee finds that Dods Knitting Co. Has Spent $71,868.22 on Factory and Plant.

The Special Committee appointed to inspect the plant of The Dods Knitting Company for the purpose of ascertaining what security the town holds for its loan of $30,000 presented its report to the Town Council at Monday night's meeting. The report gave some interesting statistics relative to the size of the plant and the amount of the Company's investment. Up to the beginning of the present year the Company, says the report, has expended $71,868.22. Of this $44,468.87 was spent on the building and $26,399.35 upon machinery and equipment. 40 men and women are employed at present and additions are being made to the working force from time to time. The full text of the report follows:—

Your Committee, appointed to close the matter of the loan to the Dods Knitting Company of the Town of Orangeville, we beg to report:—

On examining invoices and accounts and vouchers in connection with the building of the plant of the said Company on Mill St., we find that up to the beginning of the year 1915, the amount of $71,868.22 had been expended, of which amount $44,468.87 was expended upon building and $26,399.35 upon machinery and equipment.

We find the building to be a four story brick building of modern mill construction plan, 165 ft. by 134 ft. 5 in., together with a two story and basement fire proof wing, 33 ft. 9 in. by 29 ft. 5 in., which more than allows for the 28,000 square feet of floor space required by the by-law. In fact the expert we employed to go over the plant reports that when complete it will be a six set mill. There are at present about 40 men and women employed and more are being added to the list from time to time.

The Company is installing a power plant of its own, which, when completed, will enable them to operate the entire factory.

Regarding security for our loan of $30,000 we hold a first mortgage on the entire plant and equipment, and also fire insurance on the place to the amount of $35,000. In addition to this all the insurance policies which total $90,000 (plant and stock) contain a clause making our claim preferable to any other upon any loss or damage to building or machinery.

These policies also contain a co-insurance clause which demands that the risk be insured within 90 per cent. of its full value at all times.

The building is fully equipped with an automatic sprinkler system for fire protection.

Payment of the following accounts was ordered:—Bell Telephone Co., $5 and $10.25; Fred Hill, $10; C. C. G. Hannah, $10; J. C. Dean, $2; Wm. Bracken, $1.23; Thos. Campbell $4.51; John Hammond, $2.80; Alfred Colley, $5.70; Sam. Street, $6.29; H. Hayward, $1; A. A. Hughson, $5; A. A. Hughson, $10.12; E. M. MacLachlan, $3.34; Frampton Bros., $1; John Harshaw, $1; C. V. Jeffers, $1.70; W. O. Thomas, $8.50; Josias McIlroy, $5.53; W. Horley, 68c.

Mayor Campbell was authorized to appoint a delegate in addition to himself to attend the approaching Hydro-Radial Union Convention in Toronto.

The Public Library Board submitted estimates for the current year as follows:—

Estimated Expenditure.
Books	$300.00
Magazines and Periodicals	110.00
Salaries	420.00
Printing	25.00
Insurance Premiums	55.00
Fuel	225.00
Book-binding	50.00
Miscellaneous	115.00
	$1300.00
Estimated Receipts.
Legislative Grant	200.00
Receipts from Sale of Magazines	35.00
Sale of Readers' Cards	25.00
Fines, etc.	10.00
	$270.00
Amount required from town	$1030.00

The Mayor and Chairman Irwin of the Streets Committee were appointed delegates to the Ontario Good Roads Convention in Toronto, March 22-26.

An application from Moody Bros. for rebate of taxes on the old woollen mill property was referred to the Court of Revision.

S. A. Stump, writing in behalf of the International Bible Association, made an offer to rent the old Council Chamber. The communication was referred to the Property Committee for report.

Rev. G. W. Tebbs and Rev. W. M. Morris made an appeal to the Council for aid to carry on the work of the local Relief Society. A grant of $50 was voted to the Society for charitable purposes.

Geo. E. Brown was appointed an auditor in the place of T. J. Bennett, who has resigned.

The sum of $10 was voted Mr. D. B. Brown for his services on the Special Committee appointed to report on the Dods Knitting Co. security.

The Fire & Water Committee was instructed to ask the captain of the Fire Brigade to furnish the Council with a quarterly report regarding the condition of the horse, the men and the fire fighting appliances.

The sum of $17 a month was voted to Orangeville Citizens' Band the grant to date from the New Year. Reeve Fairbairn and Councillors Johnston and Robbins were appointed a special Band Committee.

ROAD IMPROVEMENT.

Recent Good Roads Talk and Movements Reviewed by Mr. U. W. Christie.

Increased Weight of Loads Has Placed Greater Strain on Road Foundations and Bridges.

The following review of recent Good Roads discussion and movements will be found of interest and value. The article is from the pen of Mr. U. W. Christie, B.A.Sc., of the local firm of Wheelock & Christie, civil engineers. Mr. Christie, it is unnecessary to add, is well qualified to speak authoritatively on the subject of Good Roads.

At the present time there is a strong feeling in favor of road improvement throughout Canada and the United States, which will lead not only to more general construction, but to an improved type of construction and to sound methods of administration and finance. New demands are pressing; advanced methods of construction are needed; old systems of organization are inadequate; old abuses and prejudices are persistent; opportunity for reform and progress is abundant and urgent.

Within the last few years the weight of the loads has largely increased, placing a much greater demand on road foundations and on bridges; the use of roads has greatly increased, especially on highways carrying suburban and interuroan traffic. Road building is in a formative stage, and the annual accumulation of experience is steadily shedding new light on a very complex problem. The growing difficulties of road construction and maintenance are not without their reward. The increased use of the roads means their increased usefulness. Good roads were regarded, a few years ago, as solely of rural concern. Now urban centres, as well as Provincial and Federal governments, have become keenly alive to their value, and are willing to bear a fair proportion of the cost. The value of roads as means of travel and transportation has increased many fold. Instead of the farming population being expected to meet the entire cost, it is now fully conceded that as regards main roads, cities must share the burden as with any other department of transportation.

The status of knowledge respecting road construction in the next five years will largely depend on the care and thought with which we, at the present time, assemble and correlate obtainable facts. This is a matter which should receive the united attention of municipal bodies and their engineers, in order that experiment, test and the collection of data may be effectively carried out.

Roads should be built according to traffic and as road building is a slow process work should not be delayed. In Canada there are only about one hundred actual days in the year on which to depend. A mile a month for six months of the year is reasonable progress for one outfit of machinery. There are limitations as regards labor and material, which cannot be exceeded without greatly increasing the cost of the work. If the community needs a good system of roads to-day the work should have been commenced twenty years ago. If a system is needed twenty years hence it should be commenced now.

There is no such thing as a permanent road, but the term is used relatively and it may be considered good financing to regard as permanent, earthwork and certain drainage of an adequate kind, substantial concrete culverts and bridges and heavy road foundations. Traffic and natural disintegration will destroy any road surface that can be employed, so it is necessary to make adequate provision for repair and renewal of the surface.

To meet the immediate needs of traffic throughout the country a large amount of construction must be necessarily carried on that cannot be considered as permanent. A large part of the traffic can, for the present, be best served by roads of moderate cost, lightly surfaced with stone or gravel, but carefully graded and drained.

A fundamental necessity in creating a system of roads is that the cost shall be equitably levied on those who benefit. Failure to do this has done much to retard road building in the past. If the farmer feels that he is being asked to build roads for the motorists of the cities, he is naturally opposed to proposals for road development on such a basis. Out of this has grown much of the opposition in some localities to the construction of trunk roads. A close study from the farmers viewpoint will throw light on the road situation as a whole, and will indicate that a successful road policy should make provision for the improvement of at least those roads more directly serving farm traffic.

Trunk roads are a necessary adjunct to any system of roads and should be built. Certain roads must be selected for immediate improvement, others to take their turn later. A study of local traffic conditions will indicate the roads on which traffic seeks to concentrate, and, commencing with these, the general system can be developed from year to year.

Divergent views exist as to the method of paying for good roads. At one extreme are those who oppose all bonded debt for road construction, at the other extreme are those who advocate bonds maturing in forty or fifty years. The true solution is evidently a moderate middle course.

The primary construction of a great system of roads requires a large initial expenditure, which can only be procured by distributing the repayment over a number of years, but the time for the retiring of the bonds should not exceed the useful life of the work. It may be justifiable to issue long term bonds for certain portions of the work, such as an effective system of open and under drains, deep cuts, extensive fills with an adequate width of earthwork; a Telford concrete, or heavy foundation, and concrete or heavy steel bridges and culverts. The road surface of whatever material constructed has a comparatively short life and will seldom justify a debt of more than five and certainly never more than ten years' duration. Adequate maintenance is in all cases essential and should always be provided for in the annual appropriation.

By a Provincial scheme inaugurated in the year 1901 each County Council was empowered to take over from the township authorities within the county, for construction and maintenance, a system of main or market roads. Towards the cost of these the province contributes one third annually. The annual expenditure is now about one million dollars.

Last year the Provincial Government appointed a capable commission to go fully into the matter of roads. This Commission in its report points out the value of good main roads to cities; showing that cities are largely benefitted; and that they should share in the cost. It is also proposed that motorists and railway corporations should contribute to the expense. The motorist this year pays for his license from $6.00 to $25.00 according to the horsepower of his car, whereas last year he paid $4.00. From these sources the rural districts will be relieved from their present heavy charges for market and main roads. The Government contribution for county roads is to be increased to 40 per cent. and aid for maintenance will be given in the same proportion.

Township roads are also to be assisted so that they may be raised to a standard suited to the traffic over them. For these township roads a grant of 20 per cent. is to be given, while special grants are to be given to villages having a large area and to townships having an excessive number of bridges.

A plan of short term loans without interest to townships is recommended. This will enable progressive communities to finance substantial work with economy under a system of easy payments.

CONSERVATIVES CONVENE.

Connty Association Holds Annual Election of Officers

About 75 party stalwarts attended the annual meeting of the Dufferin County Liberal-Conservative Association in Shelburne last Friday afternoon. The retiring President, Mr. John A. Cornelius, opened the meeting and presided during the business proceedings. Officers were elected as follows:—

Hon.-President— J. A. Cornelius, East Garafraxa.
President—Harry White, Shelburne.
Vice-President—W. E. Reid, Melancthon.
Secretary-Treasurer — R. E. Mortimer, Honeywood.
Township Presidents — Amaranth, Thos. Reid; East Garafraxa, Trueman Hall; East Luther, J. P. Cunningham; Melancthon, Joshua Reid; Mulmur, John Reburn; Mono, H. T. Anderson; Orangeville, Walter Fairbairn; Shelburne, R. A. Raky; Grand Valley, T. C. Hamilton.

Speeches were delivered by John Best, M.P., and C. R. McKeown, M.P.P., the former speaking on the war as it affects Canada and the latter on the bi-lingual school question.

COOPER ELECTED

Will be Tried by Judge Fisher on Tuesday, Feb. 23rd.

Harry Cooper, who was recently committed for trial on a charge of stealing a quantity of oats and other grain from a barn on John Harshaw's farm on the Prince of Wales' Road, appeared before Judge Fisher on Friday for the purpose of making election for his trial. The prisoner elected to be tried in the County Judge's Criminal Court without a jury. The Judge fixed Tuesday, Feb. 23rd, as the date for the trial, but we understand it may be adjourned until a later date. Evidence will be taken on two charges. The first charge against the prisoner is that of stealing oats, buckwheat, chopped grain, a scoop shovel and a bag holder from Mr. Harshaw's premises on January 14th last. He will also stand trial on a charge of stealing a horse collar, some breeching straps, an alligator wrench, some rolled oats, a Plymouth Rock rooster and 20 hens from Mr. Harshaw's place in March 1914.

There are also three other charges pending against Cooper in the Magistrate's Court. One information charges him with stealing a grey steer from W. N. Baker, a farmer living on the Centre Road, Mono, in May, 1914. The animal, we understand, was afterwards brought to Orangeville and sold here. He is also charged with stealing a muley cow from H. L. Atkinson, a local cattle buyer, in June, 1914. Wm. Canning, a Mono farmer, is the complainant in the third count against young Cooper. He believes that the prisoner is responsible for the loss of a set of harrows and some whiffletrees which disappeared from his premises in a mysterious manner during August or September, 1912.

These charges will be ventilated before Police Magistrate Pattullo on Monday next at 10 a. m.

Inspector Liddy Injured.

While walking to the Station at Grand Valley on Monday night, P.S. Inspector W. R. Liddy was run down and rather seriously injured by a horse and cutter driven by a young man, who was evidently paying more attention to the girl who accompanied him than to the horse he was driving. The noise made by an engine shunting in the station yard prevented Mr. Liddy from hearing the approaching cutter. The Inspector had one of his thighs badly injured and received several bruises and scratches about the head and face.

SOMETHING PRACTICAL TOWARDS INCREASED PRODUCTION.

[illegible] farmers are told that it is their duty to increase production and must, under existing conditions, [illegible] they should. But [illegible] the producers in this country realised this ever since the fifth of last August? Yes, and even before that. The world at war [illegible], of course, to drive the real[illegible] home and the men on the [illegible] stand ready to do all they well to aid humanity over the ruts in which it has fallen. They are [illegible] to grow more than they ever [illegible] before if someone will only [illegible] them the necessary labor to [illegible] out their plans which had been [illegible] some time before the "Increase production" campaign now on was [illegible] in the minds of the authorities at Ottawa and Toronto. [illegible] is now little need of impressing upon farmers generally the reasons why bigger crops and more of [illegible] should be grown in 1915, but [illegible] is a great need of an increased effort on the part of our Government to place at the disposal of farmers who require men the services of these men and at the same time [illegible] work to the unemployed and improve conditions in our own cities. [illegible] all very well to say there is going to be more available labor this year than in the past few years; but [illegible] there? Not unless some effort is made on the part of the Government to turn idle city men into working farm hands. Many farms hired men [illegible] enlisted. The situation is growing even more acute and if production is to be increased men must be [illegible] to do the work at a fair [illegible]. The farmers of this county must get something of their representatives in the Dominion Parliament and in the Provincial Legislatures in Ontario. If it is imperative that [illegible] (the farmers) be told to increase production it is just as necessary that they be aided to get men to help bring about the increase.

Our Immigration offices have done good work in the past and are still doing good work but few are coming to our shores now. Let them turn their attention to the cities and do what they can to induce men out of work and particularly those who have had farm experience, to go on the farms. But there are not enough immigration officers to look after this properly. How would it do for a special appointment to be made in each county for the spring months to look after farm labor? Most of the cities in Ontario have District Representatives. These men are [illegible] busy and could not, for [illegible] reasons, be expected to do [illegible] work, but they all have offices in town and these offices could be utilized by the men who are engaged in getting men on the farms, or other help procured. PATRIOTISM and PRODUCTION

Complete Your Plans Now

The important thing now is to complete at once your plan for the year's work—for increased production. By planning well in advance, each month's operations can be carried through more effectively when the time comes. Delays later on, through neglect of this, will mean loss to you and to the Empire.

Use the Best Seed

This year, for the sake of the Empire, farmers should be exceptionally careful in the selection of seed. Cheap seed is often the dearest. If every Canadian farmer would use only the best varieties, and sow on properly cultivated soil, the grain output of Canadian farms would be doubled. Deal only with reliable seedsmen. Write at once to Canadian Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, and to your Provincial Agricultural Department for information as to the best varieties of seed to be used in your particular locality, and use no others.

ATTEND YOUR CONFERENCE

Clean Your Seed

All grain intended for seed should be thoroughly cleaned and selected to retain only the strong kernels. You can reap only what you sow. It does not pay to sow weeds. Clean seed means larger crops and helps to keep the land clean. When you have your seed grain ready, put it through the cleaner once more.

Test Your Seed

Test your seed for vitality, too. Seed is not always as good as it looks. For example, oats, quite normal in appearance and weight, may be so badly damaged by frost that their value for seed is completely destroyed. If you have any doubt as to the quality of your seed a sample may be sent free to the seed laboratory at Ottawa or Calgary, for test. But in most cases this simple test will prove sufficient:—

Take a saucer and two pieces of blotting paper. Place seed between blotting papers. Keep moist and in a warm place. In a few days, you will be able to see whether the vitality is there. Neglect to test your seed may mean the loss of crop.

The Farm Labour Problem

The Government suggests the forming of an active committee in every town and city, composed of town and country men and women. This committee would find out the sort of help the farmers of their locality need, and get a list of the unemployed in their town or city, who are suitable for farm labour. With this information, the committee would be in a good position to get the right man for the right place.

Councils, both rural and urban, Boards of Trade and other organizations could advantageously finance such work. Every unemployed man in the town or city who is placed on the farm becomes immediately a producer, instead of a mere consumer and a civic expense.

Increase Your Live Stock

Breeding stock are today Canada's most valuable asset. The one outstanding feature of the world's farming is that there will soon be a great shortage of meat supplies. Save your breeding stock. Plan to increase your live stock. Europe and the United States as well as Canada will pay higher prices for beef, mutton and bacon in the very near future. Do not sacrifice now. Remember that live stock is the only basis for prosperous agriculture. You are farming not speculating.

SOMETHING PRACTICAL TOWARDS INCREASED PRODUCTION.

Our farmers are told that it is their duty to increase production and no one, under existing conditions, can gainsay that they should. But are the producers in this country all realized this ever since the fifth day of last August? Yes, and even long before that. The world at war knows, of course, to drive the realization home and the men on the land stand ready to do all they well can to aid humanity over the ruts into which it has fallen. They are ready to grow more than they ever grew before if someone will only bring them the necessary labor to carry out their plans which had been for some time before the "Increase Production" campaign now on was conceived in the minds of the authorities at Ottawa and Toronto. There is now little need of impressing upon farmers generally the reasons why bigger crops and more of them should be grown in 1915, but there is a great need of an increased effort on the part of our Governments to place at the disposal of farmers who require men the services of these men and at the same time give work to the unemployed and improve conditions in our own cities. It is all very well to say there is going to be more available labor this year than in the past few years; but where there? Not unless some effort is made on the part of the Government to turn idle city men into working farm hands. Many farm hired men have enlisted. The situation is growing even more acute and if production is to be increased men must be supplied to do the work at a fair wage. The farmers of this county expect something of their representatives in the Dominion Parliament and in the Provincial Legislatures in this crisis. If it is imperative that they the farmers be told to increase production it is just as necessary that they be aided to get men to help them bring about the increase.

Our Immigration offices have done good work in the past and are still doing good work, but few are coming to our shores now. Let them turn their attention to the cities and do all they can to induce men out of work, and particularly those who have had farm experience, to go on the farms. But there are not enough immigration officers to look after this properly. How would it do for a special appointment to be made in each county for the spring months to look after farm labor? Most counties in Ontario have District Representatives. These men are already very busy and could not, for various reasons, be expected to do the work, but they all have offices in towns and these offices could be utilized by the men who are engaged in placing men on the farms, or other offices procured. The Representative gets in touch with many farmers desiring help and he could aid some in this respect. Let it be well advertised that these offices are open and that help available to fill the places when a farmer has ready for them. It is no soft job to be doled out on political pull but a real man's work for a man who is alive to the needs of the farming community and also of the working man. This may not be the best organization possible. If the Government has a better one let them put it into practice but at any rate let there be something more than platform oratory in this increase production campaign. With the proper organization spread broadcast over the country thousands of men should be placed on the farms and so something of a practical nature accomplished toward a bigger production the coming year. A man on the ground closely connected with the District Representative, but directly responsible for the work should accomplish something. He would soon know conditions, he could get in touch with the Immigration offices in the larger cities, which should be worked to the limit to hunt men willing to go to the country, and he could supply the right kind of men. The Government should understand that the farmers of Canada expect them to do a little towards increased production besides talk and they will welcome a practical move to bring them labor this spring. The cost of such a campaign would not be great if offices already established were used for the new men. It should not be loaded on to the District Representative. If the plan is feasible it is time to start; if not has the Government or anyone else a better one? Let us have some action. Get the right plan, then push. —Farmers' Advocate.

PEEL S. S. CONVENTION

County Association Held Its 57th Annual Meeting in Streetsville.

The 57th Annual Convention of the Peel County Sunday School Association was held in the Presbyterian Church, Streetsville, on Thursday and Friday, Feb. 11th and 12th. The president, Mr. J. F. McDonald, of Belfountain, occupied the chair. There was a large number of delegates present from the townships of Albion, Caledon, and Chinguacousy, besides those from the surrounding township of Toronto.

One of the outside speakers was Mr. Preston G. Orwig, Provincial Secondary Division Superintendent, who spoke more particularly of the "Developing Life" and the "Teen Age." He was also the teacher at the demonstration of the session of an Adult Bible Class on Friday morning. Another was J. C. Robertson, D.D., of Toronto, who spoke on "Graded Lessons," and "The Sunday School of the Future." Rev. J. C. Cameron, B.A., of Toronto, spoke on "Frontier Missions and the Foreigner." Rev. E. Baker, Huttonville, Rev. G. P. Duncan, Port Credit, Rev. H. E. Thornloe, Cheltenham, Rev. T. O. Curliss, Streetsville, and Rev. J. S. Humpreys, Cooksville, ministers of the county, gave addresses which were very helpful.

The outstanding feature of the programme was the large number of ladies and gentlemen, Sunday School workers of the County, who read papers and gave addresses which were practical and forceful, and which were much appreciated by those present. Among them were Mrs. C. R. Neelands, Mrs. Fenton B. McIntyre, Mr. C. D. Gordon and Mr. Russell Hewetson, of Brampton, Miss Kate Dracass, Mr. T. M. Edmundson, Mr. John Weylie, Mr. Wm. Kemp, B.A., and Mr. J. B. Ross, of Streetsville, Mrs. G. H. Purchase and Miss Wharram, of Mono Road, Mr. H. H. Shaver and Mr. W. Dunton, of Cooksville.

Solo, quartette and anthem music was rendered by a united choir under the leadership of Dr. T. I. Bowie, of Streetsville. The new President, Mr. W. J. McKinney, of Brampton, was introduced at the Friday evening meeting and gave an inspiring address. The retiring president, Mr. J. F. McDonald, gave a thoughtful summing up of the needs of the work in his closing remarks. Great credit should be given to Revs. J. F. Scott and G. T. Kitching, of Streetsville, for their work in arranging the programme, and the people of Streetsville generally for their hospitality.

The following officers were elected for the next year:—

President, W. J. McKinney, Brampton.
1st Vice-Pres., W. J. McKinley, Caledon East.
2nd Vice-Pres., Abram Block, Port Credit.
Secy-Treas., T. H. Graham, Inglewood.
Supt. Elementary Dept., Mrs. C. R. Neelands, Brampton.
Supt. Secondary Dept., Mr. H. A. Spratt, Inglewood.
Supt. Adult Bible Class Dept., T. J. Lundy, Brampton.
Supt. Home Dept., R. J. Walker, Port Credit.
Supt. Teacher Training Dept., Rev. H. E. Thornloe, Cheltenham.
Supt. Temperance Dept., Lorne Davidson, Meadowvale.
Supt. Missionary Dept., Mrs. G. H. Purchase, Mono Road.
Provincial Representative, Miss Kate Newhouse, Snelgrove.

The next place of meeting is to be Alton.

FIVE MISSIONARY PENNIES.

Five children came once to the missionary box, and they all brought a penny. Now, pennies are certainly all like each other, and yet they must have a very different value. The first child threw a penny carelessly into the box, never thinking of what it was intended for, and then went away. But an angel who stood behind the missionary box said, "That was a thoughtless tin penny; it is not worth much in the scales of God." The second child came, examined his penny, and looked around to see if anyone was watching. When he saw two eyes directed on him he threw the penny into the box. But the angel said, "This is a copper penny; it shines like gold, but is is given from vanity: it is worth nothing in God's scales." The third came and threw his penny in without love or heart, and sighed. "I must certainly give it." And the angel said "This is an iron penny; it certainly weighs something, but it is not much value." The fourth came and laid his penny without and said, "The poor people without Jesus, ah! I pity them." "That is a silver penny," said the angel; "that is, indeed, worth something." Now came the fifth child, put in his penny and said, "Oh, my dear Saviour, Thou art mine and I will be Thine, and all that I am or have shall belong to Thee." And the angel said, "That was a golden penny,"—Canadian Churchman.

DUFFERIN POULTRY SHOW.

First Annual Exhibition Was a Big Success.

400 Entries of Birds and Pet Stock—Mayor Campbell Won McKeown Medal.

The first Annual Poultry Show under the auspices of the recently formed Dufferin County Poultry Association held here last Fair Day was a complete success. The entry list comprised some 400 specimens of birds and pet stock and practically all the entries were on exhibition. Exhibitors were present from Owen Sound, Brampton, Durham, Flesherton, Mount Forest, Caledon, Alton, Shelburne, and there were a large number of local exhibitors. The birds on exhibition were on the whole of a superior class. Mr. Jos. Foster, of Brampton judged the exhibits to the satisfaction of all concerned, the bulk of the prize money going to A. G. H. Luxton, of Mount Forest, who had some 175 entries in the Show. The McKeown Medal, offered by C. R. McKeown, M.P.P., for the best bird in the show, was won by a Barred Plymouth Rock Cockerel, the property of Mayor Campbell of this town.

A special feature of the Show was the lecture on Thursday afternoon in the Auditorium on the subject of Poultry Management, by Miss M. Yates, of Port Credit. Miss Yates, who is a thoroughly expert poultry keeper, dealt very carefully with the ordinary problems arising in the care and management of the farm flock. In addition, she discussed the question of marketting fowl and gave a demonstration in killing and plucking a chicken, making it ready for market. The lecture was well attended and considerable interest was shown in discussing the various points brought out.

The officers and directors deserve a great deal of credit for their enterprise in putting on such a successful Show. Credit is especially due to Supt. Currie and his assistants for the manner in which the exhibition was arranged.

GRANDPA AND ME.

My grandpa says that he was once
A little boy like me.
I s'pose he was, and yet it does Seem queer to think that he Could ever get my jacket on,
Or shoes, or like to play
With games and toys and race with Duke,
As I do every day.

He's come to visit us, you see,
Nurse says I must be good
And mind my manners, as a child
With such a grandpa should.
For grandpa's very straight and tall
And very dignified;
He knows most all there is to know
And other things beside.

So, though my grandpa knows so much,
I thought that maybe boys
Were things he hadn't studied—
They make such an awful noise.
But at our dinner, when I begged
Another piece of pie
I thought I saw a twinkle
In the corner of his eye.

So yesterday, when they went out,
And left us two alone,
I was not very much surprised
To find how nice he'd grown.
You should have seen us romp and run;
My! now I almost see
That p'r'aps he was, long, long ago
A little boy like me.

This Store Is Headquarters

For All that Is New and Useful

WE keep abreast of the times. When you see anything new in our line advertised come to our store and you will find it here.

We test and try out the new things before we offer them for sale. They must have genuine merit and be all the makers claim before we recommend them.

And back of the maker's guarantee is our guarantee. We make good every promise.

We have seldom sold anything that gives more satisfaction than the O-Cedar Polish Mop. Every woman who has ever used one is enthusiastic in her praise. And no wonder, for it saves hard work, time and money.

You know the hard work of dusting, cleaning and polishing hardwood floors. It is easy, simple and quick with the O-Cedar Polish Mop. This mop is treated with the famous O-Cedar Polish and it collects all the dust and dirt from the floor, and at the same time gives it a hard, lasting polish. No hard rubbing, no stooping or bending. You just go over the floor once.

And with the same mop you can dust everywhere. All the hard-to-get-at places, the tops of doors, the molding, the stairs and banisters. Under the bed and radiators, in fact every place.

Guaranteed Satisfaction or Money Refunded.

The O-Cedar Polish Mop, complete, sells for $1.50 and with this distinct understanding, that you can try it for two days and at the end of that time, if you are not perfectly satisfied with it your money will be instantly refunded. We invite you to try one.

TOO MUCH FOR THE LAWYER.

A young foreigner was being tried in court, says the Public Ledger, and the questioning by the lawyer on the opposite side began.

"Now Laszky, what do you do?"

"Ven?" asked Laszvy.

"When you work, of course," said the lawyer.

"Vy vork—"

"I know," said the lawyer, "but what at?"

"At a bench."

"Oh!" groaned the lawyer. "Where do you work at a bench?"

"In a factory."

"What kind of a factory?"

"Brick."

"You make bricks?"

"No, de factory is made uv bricks."

"Now, Laszky, listen," said the lawyer. "What do you make in that factory?"

"Eight dollars a week."

"No, no! What does the factory make?"j

"I dunno; a lot off money, I tink."

"Now, listen! What kind of goods does the factory produce?"

"Oh," said Laszky, "good goods."

"I know, but what kind of good goods?"

"The best."

"The best of what?"

"The best there is."

"Of what?"

"Of dose goods."

"Your honor," said the lawyer, "I give up."

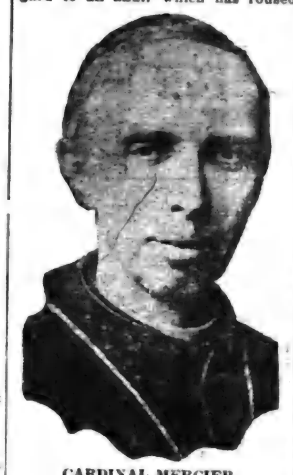
THE BEARDED SOLDIER.

Trim Guardsman In One Week Becomes the Rudimentary Man.



It is reported from the eastern theatre of war, comments an English publication, that the Russian soldiers refuse to be shaved or to trim their long beards, on the ground that they frighten the Germans much more effectually if they come at them all shaggy from the trenches. As a matter of fact very few untraveled Englishmen conceive the Russian as a person acquainted with the use of the razor. The cartoonists have had a good deal to do with this, for Russia, when not typified by the bear, is generally shown as a bearded moujik, according to need. The fondness of the Czars for beards gives some warrant for this, to say nothing of the extreme shagginess in old age of Tolstoy, best known of Russians outside Russia. Yet most of the photographs of Russian soldiers which appear in the papers nowadays show him as shaven.

On the other hand, it is very rarely that an artist shows a French or a German soldier with a beard. Yet in point of fact, and apart from the trenches, both armies have many beards, and some French sergeants are particularly luxuriant in this respect. But undoubtedly the Russian soldiers have judged well. If you see a number of bearded soldiers on the march away from the battle line, the effect on an English observer is of something unsoldierly and very far from awe-inspiring. But get near the trenches and see a whole regiment which has not had a chance at a razor for a week and the difference is apparent at once. Here is an untrimmed something which moves one to fear. The trim guardsman on duty at a palace gate is merely a fine machine, but give him a week's beard and the dirt of the trenches and he is the essential rudimentary man. If you met him at dusk in a quiet lane you would have to hold yourself very well in hand lest you turn and run from—what? Fear. Fear bearded.

INDIGNATION WIDESPREAD.

Mercier Arrest Has Evoked Universal Condemnation.

Although little has been said for some days concerning the forcible detention in his palace of His Eminence Cardinal Mercier by the German military officials in Belgium, the last word has not been uttered with regard to an affair which has roused great indignation among Roman Catholics in neutral countries.

CARDINAL MERCIER.

Cardinal Mercier was in Rome attending the election of Pope Benedict XV. when word came of the destruction of Louvain and the atrocities committed upon the Belgian clergy. On his return to his diocese, Cardinal Mercier set about the work of caring for his flock and relieving their sufferings. His Christmas pastoral letter which caused offence to the German military governor, Gen. von Bissing, was a record of his efforts and of the suffering he had witnessed. It told of the atrocities in no uncertain terms and finally called upon Belgians to remember their nationality and their duty to their own monarch rather than the invader. For this the Huns ordered his virtual arrest in his palace.

More Ammunition Now.

In Napoleon's wars a bullet seldom hit an enemy more than 200 yards distant. A marksman with the Lee-Enfield or Lebel rifle can bring down man after man at 1,000 or even 2,000 yards under favorable conditions—but the conditions seldom are favorable. Napoleons's Old Guard considered twenty-five cartridges a reasonable equipment for a whole campaign. In 1870-71 the German average consumption was sixty-five per man for the entire war. Many German soldiers fired 4,000 cartridges apiece in the first month of this war.

Lodz.

Lodz is the Manchester of Poland, and in population it equals the Lancashire city. The textile industry is the most important, and as in the English Manchester, Germans bulk largely in the population. They also own a large portion of the capital employed in the industries of the place, so that if Lodz be destroyed in the course of the present conflict the greater share of the loss will fall on Germans.

Gave Up Cabins.

A characteristically British act of kindness was performed by the officers of the Australian cruiser Sydney towards Captain Mueller and the officers who were saved and taken prisoners from the Emden. The British officers gave up their own cabins for the use and comfort of their prisoners.

MIRACULOUS CURE OF ASTHMA

Suffered Terribly for 15 Years Until He Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

D. A. WHITE, Esq.

21 WALLACE AVE., TORONTO,

Dec. 22nd. 1913.

"Having been a great sufferer from Asthma for a period of fifteen years (sometimes having to sit up at night for weeks at a time) I began the use of "Fruit-a-tives". These wonderful tablets relieved me of Indigestion, and through the continued use of same, I am no longer distressed with that terrible disease, Asthma, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives" which are worth their weight in gold to anyone suffering as I did. I would heartily recommend them to all sufferers from Asthma, which I believe is caused or aggravated by Indigestion".

India and the War.

Contributions by ruling princes of India to the war expense of Great Britain now amount to $4,000,000.

This sum includes $2,000,000 from the Nizam of Hyderabad and $1,650,000 from the Maharaja of Mysore. Besides this amount $950,000 has been subscribed to the Prince of Wales relief fund and the Indian relief fund.

A further sum of nearly $150,000 has been given by the chiefs in the form of heavy motorcycles, telescopes and kindred equipment, and $120,000 has been given by Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior, who has also presented a motor ambulance consisting of 41 automobiles for the use of the troops in Europe and is arranging for the establishment of a convalescent home in East Africa.

In addition to these gifts many of the chiefs have presented numerous horses, mules and camels and even their private automobiles. A hospital ship which is splendidly equipped is another of their donations.

First Cantilever Bridge.

The first cantilever railroad bridge is the one across the Firth of Forth at Queens Ferry, Scotland. It is nearly one and a half miles in length. Fifty-one thousand tons of steel were used in its construction, employing as many as 5,000 men at one time. It cost $16,000,000 and fifty-six lives. The workmen began at either end and worked toward the centre. When they met and undertook the last connection it was found that the two ends lacked a small fraction of an inch of reaching far enough to allow the the insertion of the bolts that were to complete the span. For a time this was a puzzle, but was finally solved by an ingenious workman who suggested expansion by artificial heat, and it was forthwith supplied by means of burning kerosene oil under the steel girder.

"Got a Smoke?"

It was three o'clock in the morning and the steamer Ansonia, steaming from Liverpool to New York, was nearing mid-ocean. She seemed to have the entire ocean to herself when a dazzling beam of light suddenly shot out from the darkness and illuminated her decks. A moment later she halted. Presently the dim outline of a British man-of-war could be seen in the shadows.

"Got any smoking tobacco?" came from the warship.

The reply was in the affirmative. Cigarettes and tobacco in goodly quantities were placed in a water-tight receptable and passed over the side. A boat from the warship picked them up. Soon the voice in the darkness bellowed its thanks, the warship steamed away and the Ansonia continued her voyage.

CUTTING OUT FRILLS.

Khaki Suits and Convict Haircuts the Proper Thing in London.

That armies during war times set the fashions not only for women, but for their husbands, sons and lovers, scoff as they may at the very idea that the word "fashion" enters into their scheme of life, is being demonstrated abroad very forcibly. For instance, patent leather boots and gaitors, to which the London man of affairs for years has been proverbially devoted, have given way to heavy uncompromising, soldierly footgear, much to the anguish of the manufacturers of "high-class" boots. Khaki is the "thing" in business suits and, though barbers moan and gnash their teeth, men no longer look upon their locks as adjuncts to beauty, to be nicely trimmed, and effectively arranged. They simply have their hair cut as short as it is possible with drawing blood and let it go at that. The tendency of the British army to-day is toward serviceableness rather than showiness in dress and in every English community of any size it is very evident that this idea is having its effect on the people.

We do not usually associate trousers exclusively with warriors, and yet we owe both their introduction and reintroduction to military fashions. Originally worn by the ancient Britons, they were for a long time looked upon in polite Roman circles as a badge of barbarism. Indeed, Cicero is said to have once taunted a man with having sprung from "trousered" ancestors.

In A. D. 69, however, we read of a Roman general creating a great scandal by going to war in trousers, and shortly after they became part of the recognized military costume. Thence the fashion spread to the civil community, and we find the fact recorded that Alexander Severus made an innovation by affecting white trousers, previous emperors having all worn crimson ones.

Exactly when trousers disappeared from the legs of the male community is not known, but there is no doubt that their revival was once more due to military fashions. Introduced into the army by the Duke of Wellington during the peninsular war, and at first known as "Wellington's trousers," their general adoption excited tremendous opposition. The clergy and the fashionable world combined to oppose the innovation. An original trust deed, executed in 1820, of a Nonconformist chapel contains a clause providing that "under no circumstances shall a preacher be allowed to occupy the pulpit who wears trousers."

The universities were equally firm in their opposition. In 1812 the authorities of Trinity and St. John's Colleges, Cambridge, decreed that "students appearing in hall or chapel in pantaloons or trousers should be considered absent," while Almack's, the most fashionable of the London clubs, refused to admit anyone so attired. On one occasion the duke himself was denied admission because he was wearing his favorite trousers, and the victor on a hundred fields found himself compelled to beat a retreat before the onslaughts of a fashionable clique.

But the reverse was only a temporary one. Trousers had come to stay, and the duke before long had the satisfaction of seeing this innovation forced on the legs of the fashionable world—surely his most striking triumph. It may be, however, that as knee breeches, acting under military orders, gave way to trousers, so trousers may in their turn give place to puttees or some other covering for male legs. "Our legs, as well as our lives," comments a facetious Londoner, "are in the hands of the army.

Bulls.

As the late Mr. Plowden, the police magistrate, was famous for his Plowdenisms, so was Serjeant Arabin, who sat as a judge in the Old Bailey in the thirties, noted for his sayings, which were collected in a little volume and called "Arabina."

Many of them savored of Sir Boyle Roche, such as—"If ever there was a case of clearer evidence than this case, this case is that case." And on another occasion he delivered himself of this extraordinary dictum: "If the learned counsel for the defence can show precisely at what moment the offence was committed, and that the prisoner was not there when he did it, he could not have done it. We cannot divest ourselves of common-sense even in courts of justice."

Thirty Million Cartridges.

How much ammunition does a modern army use? We shall not know until after the war what the Germans and the allied forces have been expending; but we know what the Germans used in 1870-1. The total for rifles was 30,000,000 cartridges; for field artillery, 362,000 rounds. It is worth noting that battles are much less costly in ammunition than sieges. The siege of Strasburg alone cost, weight for weight, three times the amount of ammunition used in all the decisive battles and actions throughout the whole war. Of course, these figures are a mere bagatelle compared with those of the present struggle, with its millions of soldiers and its quick-firing guns and its battles lasting for several weeks.

The Sickle of the Sphinx.

The oldest piece of wrought iron in existence is believed to be a roughly fashioned sickle blade found by Belzoni in Karmas, near Thebes. It was imbedded in mortar under the base of the sphinx and on that account is known as "the sickle of the sphinx." It is now in the British Museum and is believed to be nearly 4,000 years old.

Ivory For Britain.

The tusks of an ordinary elephant weigh 120 pounds and are worth $300. It requires 12,000 elephants to supply 650 tons of ivory to the English market. Sheffield takes one-third.

THE CHARM OF MOTHERHOOD

Enhanced By Perfect Physical Health.

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes where childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

SNIPING LIKE MURDER

OXFORD PROFESSOR FIGHTING IN TRENCHES FINDS IT SO.

New German Shell Is Called the Minenwerfer and Is Two Feet Long—It Smashes the Earthworks and Blows Men to Bits, Stupefying and Poisoning Others—Shot From Distance of 300 Yards.

Oxford University has responded with great enthusiasm to Britain's call for men. Two-thirds of the members of the university are either in active service at the front or training that they may be sent on. No class has responded better than the Oxford dons. All of them up to the age of sixty are in training, the younger for commissions, the older for home defence should need arise.

Professors and students in the medical department (or that part of it not in France with the Royal Army Medical corps) are getting degrees by curing the wounded at home. The examination schools, the Masonic building and the town hall are military hospitals. Many of the college gardens have been turned over to the Red Cross for the exclusive use of convalescents. It was found necessary to keep the Germans, of whom there are some 250, in a place apart.

One very interesting description of fighting in Belgium comes from a Balliol professor of Latin and Greek, who writes back to his junior dean and has evidently found things of more importance than sentence or paragraph structure. He has been a master of scouts since the outbreak of the war and writes from somewhere near Ypres, though the names of towns and units were carefully excised by the censor in France. The letter follows:

"This is the thirteenth day in the trenches, at least I think so, but I can hardly tell, and I have experienced everything but a bayonet charge and a wash. We have been holding trenches in a pine wood—at least it was a pine wood, now it is match wood, soaked, splintered, spattered with wet and blood. There has been no hand to hand fighting. It has all been done by the shell and rifle fire, with pneumatic bombs. The Germans' main trench runs in a line, whose nearest point is 500 and farthest 1,300 yards from us. But in between they have been burrowing up, and in the last few days, when I have been scoutmaster, I have discovered subsidiary trenches, pits and dugouts from within 100 to 30 yards of our line. You can't see them because of the tangled woods, but you can hear the men digging and hacking as soon as you get five yards out. I myself have constantly within the last few days been within thirty yards. This morning I shot at four men in a pit at a range of five yards in the weird light of a damp and frozen winter dawn. It was all like a dream seeing the phantom spade rising and falling behind a mound of damp earth, creeping up pistol in hand through broken and small tree trunks, peeping down into a six foot pit, sighting four ghostly, blue-gray figures and punctuating the whole gray unreality with four red pistol flashes.

"I didn't wait long. I may have hit one or two, but the others had rifles in their hands by this time, and their main line of dugouts was only twenty yards in front of me. I turned, called upon the two scouts who were with me and fled. (I am going to tell you what a brave man I am, because I don't know when I shall be hit, though somehow I feel confident I shall come through, and I want to leave a testimony. You'll think I'm a savage. Sniping is little better than murder.)

"No one who hasn't seen this can realize what it is like. The Germans have a terrible machine which has been brought into play against our trenches in the last three days. Shot from a distance of 300 yards, a two foot long projectile, which one can watch at all points in its flight, goes high into the air and comes down almost plumb at the point aimed at. It is called, I believe, a Minenwerfer—200 pounds of shell. A special corner of our line—not our company section, thank God—has been their special aim. They put these infernal bombs into a circle of thirty yards radius. They smash in the trenches, blow men to bits and stupefy and poison others.

"I had the escape of my life yesterday afternoon. I had reconnoitered all the German positions in front of us, going out daily at dawn and dusk and nearly always coming within thirty yards of our enemy—I and my four scouts. I reckon we have shot some Germans, though I am a rotten marksman, and the twilight and the pine wood are no help to scoring. In consequence I think I have a certain fame at battalion headquarters. We had nothing of the kind before—a great mistake, for now the enemy do not let us move an eyelid above our trenches."

Strong Motives.

An English school teacher recently gave his pupils a lecture on patriotism. He pointed out the high motives which moved the Territorials to leave their homes and fight for their country. The school teacher noticed that one boy did not pay attention to the instruction, and as a test question he asked him:

"What motives took the Territorials to the war?"

The boy was puzzled for a moment, then, remembering the public "send-off" to the local regiment at the railway station, he replied:

"Locomotives, sir."

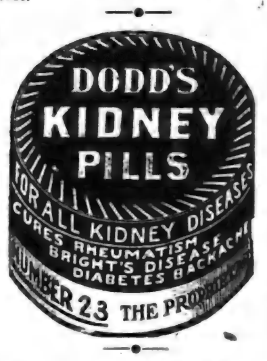
Below the Peg.

The phase "take down a peg" sprung into life with King Edgar. He made it a law to cure the Saxons of their intemperate habits. He had marks, or "pegs," put in their huge drinking cups, above which they dared not pour their liquor under a heavy penalty. So the expression was to lessen a man's self esteem just as the liquor was kept down by a peg.

When the Liver Gets Torpid

There is Nothing Like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to Set it Right.

Mrs. C. L. Cook, 248 Tenth street, Brandon, Man., writes:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for the last four years for liver trouble, and can say that I have had great satisfaction and help from them. I find that I do not need any doctor if I use them when the liver gets torpid, and believe that they are exactly suited for my case. My husband has used them for kidney trouble with good results, and my daughter in Winnipeg has been helped a great deal by the use of these pills. We say we can't keep house without them, and have cheated the doctors here out of a good many visits. I think Dr. Chase's medicines are just the thing and have recommended them to many people who have used them with good results."



By keeping the liver active and the bowels regular Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills prevent and cure such disorders as biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and headache. One pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

SQUIRREL WISDOM.

Man's superiority over the wild animals is in some respects more imaginary than real, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. The squirrel, for instance, knows better than to depend on luck from day to day to bring him his food in the season when that food is to be found only in storage. Man invented the plan of letting seasons of plenty go by without preparations for seasons of scarcity.

This is the time of year when the squirrel has a lesson to teach his proud but shorter sighted brother of the human race. All the fall the little bushy-tailed fellow, what time he could spare from eluding the guns of the hunters licensed by law, gathered nuts from tree and ground and put them away safely for the winter use. He knew, somehow, that a long season was at hand when nuts could not be found, when it would be impossible to roam at large in search of provender, and when, unless he stocked his larder in advance, hunger was likely to claim him a victim.

Meanwhile, man lets the season of fruit and vegetable plenty go by, living on what the grocer's boy brings to the door from day to day, subject to every rise in price, and every fluctuation in quality that the market may produce, artificially or naturally. He is a creature of circumstances over which he has no control.

The town council of Orillia presented Reeve McLeod with $500 in consideration of the way he had looked after municipal public works during the past year.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Scott, of Toronto, formerly of Grand Valley, announce the engagement of their second daughter, Ethel, to Mr. Ralph Sullivan, of Porcupine.

About 30 of the girl employees of the Barber-Ellis Co. at Brantford are on strike as a protest against having their names stamped on the bottom of envelope boxes.

The Durham Chronicle says: "A girl with a pair of natural rosy cheeks and a couple of dimples can get nearly any old thing she wants." This might not sound so significant if the editor of the Chronicle was not a widower.

SISTER CITIES.

English and French Towns Have Conducted an Interesting Experiment.

The cities of Puteaux and Suresnes in France, on the one hand, and Keighley in Yorkshire, England, on the other, call themselves "Sister Cities." Their sisterhood has been manifested for some ten years in a most interesting way.

It came about like this, Sir Thomas Barclay, a distinguished English jurist, who had lived some thirty years in France, was talking one day with friends about the Entente Cordiale, which had just been concluded.

"Do you know," he said, "why we like one another, believe one another to be good fellows, and enjoy sincere friendship? It is because we know each other well. Why could not the masses of one nation know well the masses of another?"

"Let us begin!" exclaimed M. Huillard, one of the company present. "I am mayor of Suresnes and member of a lot of societies in Puteaux, the neighboring town."

"And I," replied Sir Thomas, "have a bit of influence in Keighley. Let us get the citizens of Keighley and those of Suresnes and Puteaux into personal relations."

It was done. Keighley had about 45,000 inhabitants. The French cities had about the same number. There was a basis of equality.

The English moved first. In 1905 some thirty workmen of Keighley visited their brothers in Suresnes-Puteaux; they were entertained hospitably. By dint of gestures and loud tones they made themselves understood. They had a gorgeous time, and returned home enthusiastic.

The following September thirty French workingmen made a visit to Keighley. The custom grew. Each year English and French went to see each other. At first the men only made the voyage; then they began taking their wives, and finally they exchanged children. English little ones went to Suresnes-Puteaux to learn French, and French boys and girls came to Keighley to learn English.

They exchanged gifts upon occasions. Suresnes-Puteaux sent to Keighley a work of art; the latter responded with a loving cup.

When the floods came in France, and the streets of Suresnes-Puteaux were inundated, the workers of Keighley raised a relief fund of a thousand dollars for their "brothers." The bonds of fellowship were cemented.

The whole affair is marked by the utmost sincerity. "Why," said a Puteaux man on his return from one of these visits, "upon our arrival our English friends took our train by assault. We were overwhelmed by their cordiality. And they say the English are cold and phlegmatic! Where did they get that? Provencals could not have been more hearty."

"I used to have the most stupid ideas about Frenchmen," said a Keighley workman. "I didn't know them, you see. I could kick myself for my ignorance."

What was done by these two cities might be done on a larger scale. If a thousand towns in Germany had paired with a thousand towns in England and learned to know each other there would have been no war.

We hate people simply because we do not understand them. Hate is a bye-product of ignorance.

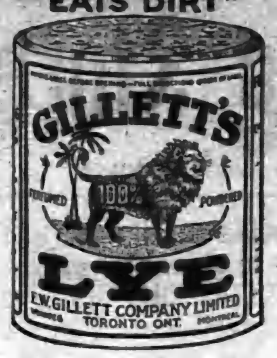
War Banishes Ragtime.

One of the most noticeable effects of the war on London's life and habits is the practical banishment of ragtime, more particularly the erratic "coon song" type, which seemed to have taken hold of the English people with the unshakeable tenacity of a plague. Up until August 1, it was a veritable outbreak of insanity in the theatres and music halls, hotels and restaurants, clubs and banquets rooms, and in every home. Even the boys on the street whistled it day and night.

Now all is changed and ragtime is forgotten. Since the war began the ear is greeted with two incessant melodies. One of these is Tommy Atkins' marching song, Tipperary, and the other, the national anthem, God Save the King. At the close of the performances in the music hall the audience is expected to stand for quite 20 minutes while the orchestra plays successively the national hymns of the allied countries fighting against Germany.

Taking Care of Him.

A good story is told of Mr. Birrell, the Secretary for Ireland. He is having a fairly busy time just now. Some time ago he arrived at a public banquet rather late, and as he slipped into his place at the table next to a well-known humorist he remarked by way of apology, "I've been so busy to-day. I'm sure I don't know how I managed to get here at all." A few minutes later, when the humorist rose to make a speech, he began, "Mr. Birrell has just said he does not know how he got here. Well, he hasn't had anything"—he leaned over and looked anxiously into Mr Birrell's wine glasses — "had any more since he came, and anyway, I'm sure that some of us will see that he gets home safely."



Burns' Favorite Word.

A contributor has had the curiosity to look up Mr. J. B. Reid's "Burns Concordance" and measure the amount of space devoted to certain words. In the result he found that Burns uses the word "heart" more than any other, the quotations under this word filling no fewer than six of the closely printed columns. "Lass" "friend" and "heaven" come next, each having about two columns.—Glasgow News.

Long Delayed Medal.

Mr. W. G. Miller, a Rothesay veteran of the Crimea and Indian Mutiny, has just been presented by the War Office with his medal for the latter campaign. He has waited fifty-six years for the decoration, which had been overlooked by the authorities.

GILLETT'S LYE EATS DIRT"

GOT YOU?

The Ghurkas—the Terrible Little Men From the Himalaya State.

It was at the military manoeuvres in India a year or two ago. A famous British regiment, which has since distinguished itself against the Germans, was resting at night, after a hard day's marching and countermarching. Sentries were posted round the camp, and the rest of the tired soldiers were soon sleeping under the wide, velvet-blue Indian night sky.

Above, the stars shone with tropical brilliancy, and in the wide, dim plain, strange faint animal cries were heard at intervals. The English sentries—men from one of our Home Counties—kept a fairly alert look out, but they saw nothing unusual.

Suddenly, in every English tent some small, dark figures arose, each with a big knife in hand. With smiling faces they struck a light, awakened the soldiers, and asked them—in a mixture of English and Hindustani—how they liked the situation. At the same time, every unsuspicious sentry received a friendly tap on the back, and, turning with a start, found a smiling, dark figure beside him.

It was a Ghurka night surprise attack, and the extraordinary success of it was the grand feature of the manoeuvres for the year. Everyone admitted, including the victims themselves, that had it been serious fighting the entire English regiment would have been knifed to a man—without a sound being heard.

When the Ghurkas work at night they leave their rifles and ammunition, take off their boots, and with their big knife held between their teeth, and a series of small knives carried in their uniform, they creep on all fours through the grass so silently and stealthily that their approach cannot be observed. They signal to each other by some animal's or bird's cry, and they are not seen until they strike.

They are the most terrible fighters in the world, and when they attack in the darkness, in their peculiar way, nothing can stop them—not even electrified wire entanglements. When they unsheath their big curved knife it must be wet with the blood of the enemy before it is returned to its case. The British officers of the Ghurka regiments never put one of their men in prison, or punish him like an ordinary British soldier if he has done anything wrong. A Ghurka is punished by being commanded to give up his big knife. After that he will never be seen in public. He will imprison himself, sitting night and day in the tent or barracks, and never showing himself. For, having lost his knife, he has, according to the Ghurka ideas, lost his honor. If his knife were kept away from him for more than a day or two he would commit suicide.

Spies and Blotters.

Every Foreign Office of Europe acts on the theory that an army of spies is constantly on the alert to steal its secrets, and infinite precautions are taken to baffle their efforts. The revelations regarding German espionage seem to show that this theory is not so ill-founded.

Very shortly after the first use of blotting paper it was discovered that it was quite possible to cause a blotting pad to give up jealously-guarded secrets by simply holding it in front of a mirror. Long after all the commercial world had forgotten the existence of such a thing, the British Foreign Office used a sand-shaker to dry its important documents.

Then specially manufactured black blotting paper was used, but this was not found to be absolutely spy-proof, and a return to the sand-shaker was contemplated, when someone suggested the simple expedient of a small absorbent roller. These rollers have since been used for drying diplomatic documents. When such a roller has been run up and down and across a document once or twice, the cleverest spy in the world is at liberty to try his hand at deciphering the impressions.

About fifty Alliston ladies spent three afternoons and two evenings making up hospital supplies for the Red Cross Society.

A ROBUST BREAKFAST.

When Old England Started the Day on Beer and Boar's Head.

The breakfast appetite of the English-speaking race is not as stout and hearty as it once was. Time was, though of course it was long ago, when the British forbears of a large number of Canadians did not dally with tea and toast, a pat of butter, a dash of marmalade and an egg. The English, German, Scotch and Irish ancestors of Canadians did not think much of eggs as food, but when they ate them considered them as trifles in the nature of an entree, and would eat two or three or four eggs as a man nowadays daintily nibbles a pickled olive or a bit of celery.

Before tea and coffee entered Europe to modify the breakfast, strong ale or beer was the early morning drink to wash the cobwebs of sleep from the throat and lighten the lids of the eyes. Men and women took their morning draft of ale or beer, and it was usually a long drink instead of a short one. A quart of ale at breakfast was an ordinary amount. The virtues of a glass of cool water after getting out of bed were not then highly esteemed by so many persons as now.

If a woman, frail and delicate, chanced to feel that the copious morning draft of strong and bitter ale, home brewed, of course, would be a trifle heavy for her on any particular morning, she, her husband, or her serving maid, would prepare for her a most mild and soothing drink, which was a tankard of small beer touched by the flavor of rosemary. That was about the limit as a mollycoodle breakfast drink. Then, instead of toast and butter, there might be a boar's head and brawn, a baron or buttock of beef and venison pasties, with large quantities of honey, and in addition deep potations of wine. From memoranda which have survived since the fifteenth century it is clear that 6 o'clock was the breakfast hour in the highest class English families.

It was during the Elizabethan period that tea and coffee came into fashion in England as the breakfast rivals of strong ale, and a little later chocolate came upon the breakfast table. Eggs began to be understood, and in their natural combination with bacon or broiled ham, began to supplant boar's head, barons of beef and venison pasties.

A Sixty-Pound Dream.

On Sunday morning before the Derby of 1873 a coster named Timson was awakened by his wife singing out lustily in her sleep. "The boy in yaller wins the day" — an old-time popular song. Timson gave Sal a thump and told her to shut up, and, both being now wide awake, asked what all the row meant.

"I dreamt I was on Epsom Downs," she said, "and saw a jockey in yaller pass all the others, while the crowd shouted, 'The boy in yaller wins the day.' If there's a jockey in yaller on Derby Day, Ned, I'd put a bit on him if I was you."

Ned again advised her to keep a still tongue, but the dream had its effect on him. On the great day he saw during the preliminary canter that the jockey riding Doncaster was in yellow—Mr. Merry's colors—so he put all the money he had (thirty shillings) on the "yellow boy," and pocketed sixty golden sovereigns for his pluck.

It was the making of him. He bought a new horse and cart and christened the former Yellow Boy, while Sal had reason to exult about her dream.

The Beresford Brothers.

Several good stories are related by Lord Charles Beresford in his Memoirs, recently published. One refers to the memorable election to York City, when he had for opponent Sir Christopher Furness (afterwards Lord Furness), and his brothers, Lords William and Marcus Beresford, went down to help him in what proved to be a very fierce contest.

"Lord Marcus accompanied me to a meeting," writes Lord Charles, "and I told him that he must make a speech. 'I can't,' he said; 'I don't know what to say.' I told him to begin, because he was sure to be interrupted, and then, being an Irishman, he would certainly find something to say. Lord Marcus thereupon rose to his feet, and voice immediately shouted, 'Who are ye?' It was enough. The fire kindled. 'Who are we?' cried Lord Marcus. 'I'll tell you who we are. We are three brothers, and our names are Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. And we have come here to put out the burning fiery Furness!'"

They did, but only just, for Sir Christopher Furness lost by only 11 votes.

For Distinguished Service.

A new medal for the navy has been approved by His Majesty. It is to be called the Distinguished Service Medal, and awarded to chief petty officers, petty officers, men and boys of all branches of the royal navy, to non-commissioned officers and men of the Royal Marines, and to all other persons holding corresponding positions in his Majesty's service afloat, for distinguished conduct in war in cases where the award of the Conspicuous Gallantry Medal would not be applicable. His Majesty has further approved of the award of the Conspicuous Service Cross (to be designated in future the Distinguished Service Cross) to all officers below the rank of lieut.-commander, in addition to the officers previously eligible for this decoration.

British War Lottery.

The British Government lottery for the benefit of the wounded and relatives of slain soldiers has opened. The lottery is based on that which proved so successful in 1803. Tickets are $2.50 each, divided in five identically numbered portions. The poorer classes may buy a fifth part of one ticket. The prizes range from $50,000 down. The lottery will produce $10,000,000 clear for the charity.

THE ACUTE PAIN FROM NEURALGIA

Permanehtly Cured Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Neuralgia is not a disease—it is only a symptom, but a most painful one. It is the surest sign that your blood is weak, watery and impure, and that for this reason your nerves are literally starving. Bad blood is the sole cause of the piercing pains of neuralgia—good rich blood is the only cure. In this you have the reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure neuralgia. They are the only medicine that contain in the correct proportions the elements needed to make rich, red blood. This rich blood reaches the root of the trouble, soothes the jangled nerves, drives away the nagging, stabbing pain and braces up your health in other ways as well. Here is proof:—Mr. C. J. Lee, Vatchell, Ont., says:—"For several years I was troubled at intervals with neuralgia in the head and chest. The pain I suffered at times was most intense. I was continually doctoring for the trouble, but found nothing to give me permanent relief until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Thanks to this medicine my blood has been restored to a healthy condition and every symptom of the trouble has disappeared. I can therefore, with confidence recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all who suffer from the fierce pains of neuralgia."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mrs. Irwin Little, of Chinguacousy, celebrated her 90th birthday on February 16th. She has 10 children, 47 grandchildren, 35 great grandchildren and one great great grandchild.

A PRESENTATION PARTY.

Erin and East Garry Friends and Neighbors Show Their Esteem for the Dyer Bros.

About 225 of their Erin and East Garafraxa neighbors assembled at a big farewell presentation party at the home of the Dyer Bros., lot 2, 16th line, East Garafraxa, on Friday evening. After Mr. James Brown had been voted to the chair, the following appreciative address was read by Mr. P. G. Coulson, one of the Dyer Bros close neighbors:—

To the Messrs. Dyer and Miss Awrey.

Dear Friends,—

A number of your neighbors and friends have assembled here this evening for the purpose of giving expression to the high esteem in which you are held by this neighborhood and of voicing the deep regret with which the whole community has learned of your decision to break up your present home. During your long residence here you have won the goodwill and esteem of everybody with whom you have come in contact. The musical gifts with which you have been so generously endowed have made you well-nigh indispensable at our social gatherings, where your services have always been eagerly sought and generously given. The generous spirit which you have invariably shown when called upon to assist in this capacity will always be gratefully remembered and we have no hesitancy in assuring you that you will be missed from our parties and other social affairs more than words can tell. By those who have been privileged to enroll you in the circle of their friends the sense of loss caused by your departure will be poignant indeed. The life of the neighborhood has been better and richer because of the lives you have lived and it will be poorer by reason of your removal. We all feel that your departure will create a vacancy that neither time nor the changes that the passing years bring will have power to efface from our memories.

And now, dear friends, we would ask you to accept these small gifts as tokens of our regard and mementoes that will serve to recall happy memories of your neighbors and friends in East Garafraxa. You, Josiah, we wish to accept this watch, you, Miss Lawretta, this necklet and you, Herbert, this watch. With them we tender our sincere wishes for happiness, health and an overflowing measure of the good things of this life wherever your lot may be cast.

Signed on behalf of your neighbors and friends.

(Signed)

Philip G. Coulson
Malcolm McCormick } Committee

Feb. 12th, 1915.

The presentations to the two brothers were made by Mr. Malcolm McCormick and that to Miss Awrey by Miss Laura Coulson. The Dyer Bros. made brief and feeling responses on their own behalf and also replied for their niece, Miss Awrey. Short speeches were afterwards given by Messrs. James Milloy, Leban Boggs, Ross McKay, Chas. Hall, Gilbert Smith, Geo. Fletcher, Thos. Smith, Archie Reid, Mac McCormick and others. Refreshments were served afterwards and the remainder of the night was then happily spent in dancing, games and other social amusements. There were no less than ten violinists present and there was an abundance of first-class music for the dancing.

The Dyer Bros. are excellent violinists and their services were in great demand at dances and school and church entertainments for miles around. Apart from their musical gifts, they are men of the finest type and will be greatly missed by the people of their neighborhood. They were both born in East Garafraxa, their father, the late Ephriam Dyer, having been one of the pioneer settlers in that township. The Banner understands they will settle in the West, where Herbert has been spending the summer months for some years.

CALEDON EAST

Mr. Isaac Bowles, of Toronto, formerly of Mono Road, was the guest of his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Thos McCartney, 3rd line Albion, last week.

A new rural mail route from the Caledon East post office was started on February 1st, across to the 5th line, down to the base road, thence to the 4th and up to No. 20, then to the 5th and home to Caledon East. Mr. Geo. Atkinson, of Shelwick is the contractor and moved into the village prior to commencing his duties.

The scholars attending the Methodist S S. along with their teachers and other friends had a sleigh ride to Bolton on Saturday and spent the major part of the day in the spacious skating rink.

A sleighing party from Sand Hill came up on Friday afternoon and spent the time on the rink here.

The religious quarterly meeting of this circuit took place in the Methodist church on Sunday morning, when there was a satisfactory attendance. Rev. J. H. More, the pastor, preached a very appropriate sermon, at the close of which the usual love feast was held and communion dispensed.

Several of the young men in the immediate vicinity of the village are on the sick list, some suffering from muscular rheumatism, diabetes and other ailments.

The A. Y. P. A. of St. James' Church entertained nearly three hundred guests from Sand Hill, Tullamore and Campbell's Cross congregations on Wednesday evening. A very pleasant evening was spent by all.

Mrs. G. W. Berney is on a pleasure trip among friends at Caledon, Orangeville and other points north.

A travelling photographer struck town on Wednesday and took snap shots of several places in the village.

Next Tuesday being pancake Tuesday the members of the A. Y. P. A. of St. James' church will treat the people of this village and vicinity to a delightful pancake social and entertainment in Hanton's Hall in the evening. Hot pancakes will be served in the latest style from 6 to 8 o'clock after which Rev. G. W. Tebbs, Orangeville, will give an illustrated lecture with vivid scenes of the war. There will also be instrumental and vocal selections during the evening. The admission will be the low price of 10 and 20 cts. God save the King.

The members of the hockey club thank the public for turning out so well to their dramatic play thus making it possible for the team to get a new hockey outfit which was much needed.—Enterprise.

THE MAPLES.

The Maples Branch of the Women's Institute entertained their husbands and families at the home of Mrs. W. Brown last Thursday evening, Feb. 4th.

A short address of welcome was given by Mrs. J. W. Hoare, vice-president. Then a full report of the Institute work since the organization of the Branch last May was read by the secretary. Mr. Nelson Black acted as chairman and a short programme of instrumental music, solos, duets and recitations was given. The ladies served a bountiful lunch and the remainder of the evening was spent in music, games and other amusements.

The regular meeting of The Maples Institute will be held on Thursday, Feb. 18th, at the home of Mrs. W. H. Hunter. The Maples.

BLOUNT.

Dear Editor:—Would you allow me a little space for a few news items in your paper.

The roads are in fine condition at the present in this vicinity.

Mr. Wm. Dodds is busy getting out logs for a yard.

Mr. and Mrs. R. McKim entertained a number of friends to a fowl supper one evening last week.

Miss Etta Rowley, of Palgrave, visited her cousin, Mrs. Geo. Woods.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Woods last Wednesday night when they entertained about one hundred of their friends and neighbors to a dance. Excellent music was furnished by Messrs. Jackson, Elliott, Holmes and Norsworthy. The floor was capably managed by Messrs. Jackson, Sutton and Holmes. After lunch had been served the floor was again cleared and the dance was continued until the wee hours of the morning, when all departed to their homes with the kindliest feelings for their host and hostess for the very pleasant night they had spent.

What we would like to know:

How R. L. got home from the dance?

When W. A. is going back to Whittington?

If J. W. goes South yet?

WEST MONO.

Divine service will be held (D.V.) on Sunday next, February 21st, (first Sunday in Lent), at St. Andrew's, 11 a.m.; St. George's, 3 p.m.; Herald Angel, 7 p.m.

During the season of Lent will be given Meditations on the 51st Psalm. Will the Lord's people please pray that these Meditations may be a blessing and help both to preacher and hearers.

CONNOR.

Well, here I am once more. After having been absent for about a year I felt that I would like to renew old acquaintances so thought I would visit around Connor once more. On my way into the village I overtook Ray and Jos. Legett, who said they were both going to call at William Carey's. On my arrival at McCulloch's I thought I would call and see the boys. I found they were still unmarried and had given up hope of ever having a chance to join the army of benedicts.

When I arrived at Connor I made a call on my old friend, Mr. Carey, who told me business was fairly good considering the war times. While I was there a gentleman called whom Mr. Carey said was John Hogg. I was unable to recognize him owing to the fact that he had shaved his upper lip. While I was talking to him he invited me to stay over night with him. I willingly accepted the invitation. When I arrived at the house I found Connor school teacher boarding there, but I failed to get a sight of my old friend Robert Lee.

After spending the night with Mr. Hogg I resumed my journey westward. The first person met was Hugh Lee, with whom I had a lengthy chat. He wanted me to trade pipes with him as he said his was rather large. While I was talking to him Ben Carey overtook us. He said he was undecided whether to go to Melville Cross or not as the walking was not very good. As I was passing Robt. Lee's I noticed Mr. Jas. Williams coming across the fields, but I did not stop to find out where he was going. As I had now met most all my old friends I decided to proceed westward and continue my journey to Orangeville, where I intend to spend a few days. — Traveller.

CARDWELL.

Mr. D. Holmes, of Mono Mills, was the guest of Miss Gertrude Jackson over Sunday.

Miss Gertrude and Mr. Franklin Jackson entertained a number of young people from Mono Mills, Orangeville and Whittington at their home on Monday evening. Messrs. J. Jackson, of Whittington, and W. Jenkins, of Cardwell, furnished the music in their usual acceptable manner. Messrs. Jos. and Reginald Jackson proved capable floor managers. The guests returned to their homes during the small hours of the morning, carrying happy recollections of the pleasant night they had spent.

ALTON.

Mr. Richard Page, who underwent an operation a short time ago in Guelph Hospital, is home and is able to go around town again. Mr. Page, we are glad to learn, is rapidly recovering from the effects of the operation.

We are sorry to learn of the illness of Mr. John Clarke. Mr. Clarke has been confined to his bed for some time.

Mrs. P. V. Lemon has been on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. R. B. Hawkins, London. The latter has been ill, but is now recovering. Mrs. Lemon returned home during the last week.

Mrs. McKitrick, from near Edmonton, is in Alton visiting at the home of her father, Mr. H. C. Russell. Mrs. McKitrick has been residing with her brother in the West for a number of years.

Mrs. Geo. Morris, of Alton, has been critically ill. All of her children were called home to her bedside as it was thought she could not recover. However, a turn for the better occurred and she is now apparently on the way toward recovery.

Mr. Wm. Hawkins has been confined to the house for the past three weeks suffering from an attack of acute rheumatism. He is now a little better.

One of the best sporting events of the season will be the hockey match between the Alton team and the Orangeville High School on Alton skating rink on Friday evening, February 19th. The game will commence at 8 o'clock sharp. A fast, keen contest is expected as there is considerable rivalry between these two teams and they are both out to win the game. Admission 15 cents.

CALEDON.

We are pleased to note that Mrs. Griffith, who was taken ill while visiting her daughter, Mrs. W. McCartney, is on the road to recovery.

Mr. John Nesbitt has returned home after spending a few days in Toronto.

The condition of Mrs. J. Hillyard, who was suddenly taken ill last Sunday, is slightly improved.

Miss E. M. Scarland, of this village, spent Saturday and Sunday last with her sister, Miss Myrtle, of Nashville.

The Bonstelle Dramatic Club, which gave the popular play "Ten Nights in a Barroom" in Inglewood on Feb. 8th, had a large and appreciative audience. Many members of the club took in this Play at Hillsburg on Monday night last, when Price's Corners Dramatic Club gave an enjoyable performance.

We are sorry to hear that Mr. John Ferguson of our village is ill.

Tobogganing seems to be the favorite pastime among the young people of our village just at present.

The Lawrie Bros. and their "wee bit sister" are coming to the town hall on Friday night next.

Amaranth, is spending a few days in the Queen City as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Thompson, of Bathurst St.

Miss Nellie McLeod, of Toronto, formerly of this place, is spending a few holidays with her parents on Queen St.

Mr. Jos. Rayfield, of North Amaranth, and Miss May Tait, of East Garafraxa, spent Sunday afternoon as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Tait.

Mr. Robt. Irvine, of East Garafraxa, gave the young people of the neighborhood a rousing big party on Friday evening of last week.

We have been informed that there has been another cur dog or more added to the population of our village. We have had enough of these nuisances in the past and do not wish to be infested with such pests any longer. We hope when the assessor comes around he will make a thorough investigation and see to it that none of these useless animals escape his notice.

A Presentation.

On Tuesday evening, February 9th, about seventy-five of the friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Barnhardt met at their home near Whittington under the mask of a surprise party and presented them with a pair of handsome easy chairs and their daughters, the Misses Ruby and Pearl, with a beautiful ring each. The presentations were accompanied by an appreciative address, which was read by Mr. Atkinson White. The presentations were made by Mr. W. J. Hamilton. Mr. Barnhardt made a happy response on behalf of his family and himself, thanking his friends and neighbors for their kindly expression of their good wishes and speaking appreciatively of the gifts they had offered as further tokens of these good wishes. In unmistakeable terms he voiced the deep regret every member of his family felt at leaving a community so sociable and so possessed of the kindly and helpful spirit that makes life pleasant in a neighborhood. Mrs. Barnhardt also responded in a modest way, thanking the many friends from the fulness of her heart for their unvarying kindness. A very pleasant and enjoyable evening was afterwards spent by everybody.

The address read as follows:—

Rich Hill, Feb. 9th, 1915.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Barnhardt and Family.

Dear Friends,—

On learning that you are about to leave our community, we, your friends and neighbors, have gathered at your home and now take this opportunity of bidding you farewell. We regret that you are leaving us. You have always been kind and neighborly, willing to help in all things which tend to make a community prosper morally and socially. During the time of your sojourn with us you have proved yourself very trustworthy and obliging. By your genial manner you all have made a large circle of friends whose memory of you will be lasting. We realize that our loss will be others' gain. May divine guidance be given you in making your lives a blessing to the community in which you are about to reside and in the formation of new friendships. Our hope is that prosperity, health and happiness may be granted to all in the future wherever your lot in life may be cast.

As a token of respect and esteem and as a bond of friendship we will ask you, Mr. and Mrs. Barnhardt, to accept these chairs; and to you, Miss Ruby and Pearl, we give these rings, hoping that all may be spared to enjoy them.

Signed on behalf of your friends,
W. J. Hamilton,
Atkinson White.

AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

Belgian Consul Thanks County Council for Grant to Relief Fund.

At its meeting in January Dufferin County Council voted a grant of $1200 for patriotic purposes. $500 of the grant was apportioned to the Belgian Relief Fund. County Treasurer C. R. Wheelock, who promptly forwarded a cheque to the Belgian Consul in Montreal, who is acting as Honorary-Treasurer of the Fund, has just received the following acknowledgment of the donation :—

Montreal, Feb. 15, 1915

C. R. Wheelock,
Treasurer County of Dufferin.

Dear Mr. Wheelock,

We are in receipt of your letter of the 12th inst. and also of the cheque for $500 enclosed therewith, being the amount granted by the Council of the County of Dufferin for the Belgian Relief Fund.

We are exceedingly grateful for this splendid contribution. Will you kindly thank the residents of the County of Dufferin as well as the members of the Council very heartily in our name.

With many thanks to yourself, I am

Yours Faithfully,
H. PRUDHOMME,
Hon.-Treasurer

These three races will be run in heats of one and a half miles, best two in three. Shelburne Citizens' Band will furnish music. Admission 25c.; children 15c.

Bowlers' Presentation.

A number of the members of the Orangeville Lawn Bowling Club surprised Mr. F. W. Ritchie late on Tuesday afternoon by presenting him with a handsome gold ring and gold piece, accompanied by the following address :—

Orangeville, February 16, 1915.

Mr. Fred W. Ritchie :

Having learned with sincere regret of your approaching departure from Orangeville, we, your fellow bowlers, take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation of your worth, not only as a bowler but as a citizen of our town. In every sphere of activity, whether municipal, fraternal, or social, you have been energetic, agreeable, and enthusiastic. Your advice and assistance, which was at all times ours to command, has been always freely and generously given.

We would ask you to accept as a slight memento of the happy days spent with your fellow bowlers, this ring and gold piece. May they ever remind you of the many sincere friends you have in the Orangeville Bowling Club. With these small tokens we also tender our heartiest wishes for the happiness and success of yourself and family in your new life. May you always take "the right width" and "be well up" is the hope and wish of every member of the Orangeville Lawn Bowling Club.

Signed on behalf of the Club.
T. A. Carson, President,
A. D. McKitrick, Secretary.

Mr. Ritchie made a feeling and appreciative reply, after which short addresses were made by nearly every one present. All spoke highly of Mr. Ritchie as a citizen and an all round good fellow and expressed sincere regret at his removal from town. The presentation took place in the office of Mr. A. E. Annis.

BARN DESTROYED.

Mono Farmer Meets with a Severe Loss.

The fine bank barn of Mr. John M. Still, of Glencross, was destroyed by fire on Tuesday morning, together with the contents, including 5 horses, 22 head of cattle, a number of fowl, farm implements, 300 bushels of wheat, quantities of oats, barley, rye, hay, etc. The fire was discovered by Mrs. Still, who was awakened by the crackling of the flames. When first noticed the upper part of the barn was in flames. Mr. Still and members of his family rushed to the doomed building and made an effort to rescue the stock, but everything had been suffocated by the dense smoke and heat.

The origin of the fire is unknown. The only theory advanced to account for the conflagration is that it was the work of a tramp who had sought shelter in the building during the night. It is thought too that the building may have been set on fire by thieves in an effort to cover up their work.

Profound sympathy is felt for Mr. Still in the very serious loss he has sustained. Conservatives estimates place the total loss at $6000. The only insurance was $1300 on the building and contents in the Peel Mutual. The barn was a fine bank structure, 50 by 60, with modern stabling underneath.

A CANADIAN CLUB.

Movement Under Way to Organize in Orangeville.

The following communication is self-explanatory :—

Editor of The Orangeville Banner.

Dear Sir,—

In accordance with the requests of many gentlemen in the town, may I ask you to announce in your next issue, that a meeting will be held in the Auditorium of the Public Library on Friday evening next, Feb. 19th, to consider the formation of a Canadian Club.

The essential purpose of the Canadian Club is to foster a broad and enlightened patriotism by encouraging the discussion and study of the History, Institutions, Arts, Literature, Resources and Problems of all countries in which Canadians are or should be interested. The Club therefore invites speakers of authoritative knowledge on such subjects to freely address it. The Canadian Club extends in its organization from the Atlantic to the Pacific, there being local clubs in practically every Canadian city and in many of the towns.

It is thus in its efforts to create an informed, balanced and patriotic public opinion, accomplishing a work in value not unlike that of a University.

I hope there will be a real effort on the part of every one interested to be present on Friday evening.

Yours Faithfully,
GEO. W. TEBBS.

Concert at Relessey

Relessey Epworth League will give a Concert in the Methodist Church at that place on Friday night, Feb. 26th. The programme will include a Play entitled, "A Perplexing Situation," by amateur talent, music, recitations, etc. Admission 25c and 15c.

Women's Institute Briefs.

The production of "The Deacon" in the Opera House realized the handsome sum of $101.50.

One of the most interesting meetings the Institute has held for the past year or longer took place at the home of Mrs. J. D. Torrie on Tuesday afternoon. Twenty-four members were present and an excellent demonstration of electrical and modern household conveniences was given by Mrs. J. E. Smith, Mrs. Torrie and Mrs. Gillespie. Mrs. Smith also gave a practical and well-prepared essay on up-to-date house labor-saving contrivances. Music was furnished by Miss King.

Workers having yarn or socks called in on or about Feb. 15th will kindly return promptly as the Institute desires to send these to the Red Cross headquarters.

Domestic Science Course.

The Domestic Science (Cooking) Course, for which the Women's Institute has arranged, will commence in the rooms over the Bank of Hamilton (entrance off First St.) on Monday next, Feb. 22nd. at 2.30 p. m. Miss G. Gray, a graduate in Domestic Science, who is sent out under the auspices of the Institutes Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, will demonstrate in cooking daily for two weeks. The following is the list of subjects :—

1. Fruit—Typical methods of cooking ; combinations ; different ways of serving fresh fruit.
2. Vegetables—Fresh, starchy and dried.
3. Milk—Soups, puddings, and combinations with especial relation to infant, children and invalid diet.
4. Cereals and Cheese — Various methods of cooking ; their high food value compared with other more expensive foods.
5. Eggs—Correct methods of cooking ; variations in methods, storage.
6. Meats—Tender meats; roasting and broiling. Tough meats—braised dishes, stews and soups. Food values, and methods of cooking the different cuts.
7. Baking powder, breads and fancy yeast breads.
8. Cake and little cakes.
9. Pudding and desserts.
10. Salads—Preparation of the ingredients, dressing, etc.

Ladies taking the course will find it advisable to bring note book and pencil. Suggestions as to special subjects should be forwarded to Mrs. J. A. Langford, Secretary of the local Institute.

Mrs. John Gough.

Orangeville lost another of its old residents last week in the person of Mrs. John Gough, whose death occurred at her residence on East Broadway, on Wednesday Feb. 10th. Deceased, who was 72 years of age, is survived by her husband, two sons, James and William, of Orangeville, and a daughter, Mrs. T. A. Beckett, of Winnipeg. The bereaved husband and family have the sympathy of many friends in their loss. The departed woman was a daughter of the late Stephen Mills, one of the early settlers of Mono Township. She was born on the 6th line, Mono, but has resided in Orangeville for forty years or longer. Former Town Engineer Wm. Martin is a brother and Mrs. James Monds, Hamilton, Miss Annie Martin, Cincinnatti, and Miss Mary Martin, Orangeville, are sisters. Rev. G. W. Tebbs, rector of St. Mark's, conducted the services at the funeral, which was held to the Forest Lawn Cemetery on Friday afternoon. The remains were borne to their last resting place by Messrs. Wm. Lambe, Robt. Watson, Geo. Harrison, Ed. French, John Clarke and Thos. Presley.

Joseph Hiley's Death.

The late Jos. J. Hiley, whose death at his home on Mill St., was briefly noted in last week's issue of The Banner, was born in Kent County, England, 76 years ago. He spent several years in military service and when about 22 years of age came to Canada with his regiment, the 7th Royal Fusiliers, which was stationed at Quebec. While at Quebec Mr. Hiley, who had formed a high opinion of Canada and the opportunities it offered, bought his discharge and started railroading. About 1868 he married Miss Annie Townsend, moving shortly afterwards from Quebec to Brantford. He subsequently moved to Toronto and entering the employ of the old Toronto, Grey & Bruce Company came to Orangeville 44 years ago about the time the railway was built through this place to Owen Sound. Mr. Hiley had been a sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism for several years before his death and was unable to walk without the aid of crutches. He bore his affliction bravely and was always bright and cheery. Of a family of fourteen children only five survive. These are Albert, of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Mrs. Carbeno, of Brockville, Joseph, of Keokuk, Iowa, George, of St. Paul, Minn., and Mrs. Geo. Price, of Orangeville. Mrs. Hiley is still living. The funeral was held from his late home to the Forest Lawn Cemetery on Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 9th. Rev. G. W. Tebbs conducted the services. The pallbearers were Messrs. A. W. McGillivray, S. Mossop, Thos. Peavoy, George Price, Joseph Hiley and William Lambe.

Mrs. Thos. Guest's Death.

Mrs. Anne Barkley Guest, widow of the late Thos. Guest, died at her home near Ballycroy on Thursday night after a very short illness. The deceased lady sustained a severe stroke Wednesday afternoon and sank very rapidly, death intervening on the following night. Mrs. Guest, who was 60 years of age, is survived by one son, James Guest, of Ballycroy, and two daughters, Mrs. Stinson and Mrs. Reid, living in the West. Her husband, who was a widely known Adjala farmer, died about six years ago. Deceased, whose maiden name was Mason, was a sister of Dr. R. M. Mason, M.P.P., of Fenelon Falls, Messrs. Stuart, Thos. and Jos. Mason, Mono Mills, and Mrs. Tench, Newmarket. We understand that her death makes the first break in the Mason family. The late Mrs. Guest was a sincere Christian woman and a consistent member of Adjala Presbyterian Church. She occupied the office of President of the Women's Auxiliary last year. There was a large attendance at the funeral, which was held to Sloan's cemetery, Adjala, on Tuesday afternoon. Rev. J. A. Black, of Mono Mills, conducted services at the home and grave.

—A grand masquerade carnival will be held on the Alton Skating Rink, on Wednesday night, Feb. 24th. See posters for prizes and full particulars.

"THE DEACON."

Local Amateurs Play to a Capacity House.

Successful Production of a Live Comedy Drama in Opera House.

A capacity house witnessed the production of "The Deacon," a five act comedy drama, by local amateurs in the Opera House on Wednesday night of last week. The Play was presented under the auspices of the Orangeville Branch of the Women's Institute and was given under the direction of Mrs. Oscar Banks, who had charge of the rehearsal work. Mrs. Banks also sustained one of the leading roles in a most acceptable manner.

The production was a big success and demonstrated beyond question the existence of any amount of latent talent among the young people of the town. The parts were all well sustained and several of the actors made distinct hits with the audience. This was notably the case with Mr. Ewart MacPherson as "Pete," the colored boy, whose chief aim in life seemed to be "keepin' up de spectability ob our family" and Mr. Jimmie Dawson, who appeared in the highly humorous role of "Billy," the Deacon's boy.

It is of course impossible to make adequate comment upon the work of all who took part in the performance as the whole cast was exceptionally good. A brief mention of each of the characters will, therefore, have to serve. No particular mention need be made of Mrs. Banks, who took the role of Mrs. Darrah or of Mr. Banks, who appeared in the part of "The Deacon." The abilities of Mr. and Mrs. Banks as actors are widely known and it is sufficient to state that they fully sustained the high reputation they have long enjoyed. In the part of Helen Thornton, Miss Hazel Patterson made a pretty bride and displayed a good deal of natural aptitude and talent. Miss Ruth McGuire essayed the role of Mrs. Thornton, the widowed sister-in-law of The Deacon, in a very acceptable manner. Miss Hazel Banks also appeared to advantage as Miss Amelia, Mrs. Thornton's widowed sister. Both young ladies are deserving of praise for the realism of their acting. The part of Daisy, the maid, Parson Brownlow and Pedro, the organ grinder, were presented in an admirable manner by Miss Beatrice Banks, Walter Dahl and Stewart Lawson. Trueman Kellie made a dashing and good looking hero, playing the part of George Graef, Mrs. Thornton's nephew with the air of a stage veteran. Roy McClellan acquitted himself with ability in the difficult part of Matt Wheeler, alias Geo. Darrah, the villian of the play, and with the assistance of his accomplice, James Read, succeeded in some of his nefarious schemes. The latter character was cleverly taken by Alan Irwin, who also appeared in the role of policeman in the final act. Miss Myrtle Bruce looked exceedingly pretty and acted well in the role of Nellie, The Deacon's granddaughter.

The story of the play may be told briefly as follows : George Darrah marries the daughter of Deacon Thornton against her father's wishes. When she is turned out of her home Darrah vows vengeance on her father and relatives. Leaving his wife he begins a courtship with Helen, his father-in-law's niece. He is of course unknown to her and her mother, with whom lives George Graef, a nephew of Mrs. Thornton's. Darrah steals valuable diamonds from the house and manages to cast suspicion on George, who is obliged to leave home. Eventually with the aid of Pete, the colored boy, Graef succeeds in proving his innocence. James Read meets The Deacon on the stage coach and acting on the instructions of Darrah gets him drunk. An accidental meeting takes place between Darrah and his wife and the latter is discovered fainting on the street by Pete, who by a lucky accident takes her to Graef's lodgings where she is recognized by her cousin. Graef interrupts the wedding of Darrah and Helen Thornton as the bride and groom are about to be made man and wife. He produces the proofs of his own innocence, brands Darrah as the thief and secures forgiveness for his wife and himself from The Deacon.

The large audience gave every evidence of delight with the performance and showed its pleasure by frequent and vigorous applause. St. Andrew's S. S. orchestra provided excellent music and contributed materially to the enjoyable character of the entertainment. This organization, which consists mainly of young players, is making splendid progress under the capable tuition of Mr. Thos. Presley and is fast rounding into a really good orchestra. The evening's proceeds amounted to slightly over $100 and the Women's Institute will have nearly $70 to the good after paying all expenses.

Marshall-Toal.

The home of Dr. Wm. C. Heggie, Dovercourt Road, Toronto, was the scene of a quiet wedding on Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 10th, at 3.30 o'clock, when Miss Edith Toal, of Palisades Park, N.J., was united in marriage to Mr. Howard G. Marshall, of Snelgrove, Ont. The ceremony was performed by the brother of the groom, Rev. David Heggie Marshall, of Huntsville, Ont. The bride, who was unattended, was given away by Dr. Heggie. Mr. Stuart Holmes played the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, and during the signing of the register Miss Reta Hearst sang "O Promise Me." The bride and groom left on the 5.30 train for New York and other points, the bride travelling in a Belgian blue suit and hat to match. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Marshall will reside at Snelgrove. The bride is a cousin of Mrs. Robert McConnell of this town.

Hospital Notes

Reserve your seats early at Jeffers' drug store for the "Danger Signal," to be given in the Opera House on Thursday evening, Feb. 25th, by the Old Caledon Dramatic Club. This will be the first appearance in Orangeville of this Company. Crowd the Opera House. Give them a royal welcome and help swell the funds for the Red Cross and Lord Dufferin Hospital. Admission 25c. to all parts of the Hall. Plan opens Saturday, Feb. 20th. Both funds need your support. Come and enjoy yourselves for one evening this month.

The Chapter was pleased to cash the cheque for $300 generously donated by the County Council to the Hospital Fund and wishes to thank the Council for its donation and the Treasurer for his promptness in issuing the cheque.

The following donations were thankfully received at the Hospital : Mrs. Vernet Armstrong, fruit ; Mrs. Jas. A. Arnott, homemade baking and fruit ; Mr. C. R. McKeown, the Daily News.

Inspector Galbraith's Report

Slight Falling Off in School Attendance in Peel County.

Four Township Trustees Associations Were Formed Last Year.

Public School Inspector W. J. Galbraith submitted the following report to Peel County Council at its recent meeting in Brampton :—

Brampton, January 25th, 1915.

The Warden and Council, County of Peel.

Gentlemen —I have the honor to submit herewith for your consideration my report of the Inspectorate of Peel for the year ending December, 1914. It may be of interest to you to have placed before you a comparative statement of conditions which obtained five years ago, when I became your inspector, and those which obtain at the present time. Although there has been a slight falling off in the attendance at the schools of the county as a whole, the school population has increased to such an extent in some localities as to render it necessary to employ additional teachers, there being now 102, whereas 98 were found sufficient in 1909. These additions were made in Brampton, where 2 were needed; Port Credit found that the attendance warranted the employment of the fourth and S. S. No. 5, Toronto Township, of the second teacher. S. S. No. 1, Toronto, has now a two teacher school. The attendance is increasing so rapidly in Sections Nos. 2, 4 and 6, Toronto, that the school boards therein will soon find it imparative upon them to provide more and better school accommodation. In the rural municipalities, with the exception of Toronto, there has been falling off of 12 per cent. in the number of pupils enrolled. This will explain in part the higher cost of education in these townships as shown below :

The average salary paid in the rural sections rose in the five years from $445.00 to $613.00, or 38 per cent ; that paid to the teachers of urban schools from $530 to $665, or about 25 per cent.; the average salary of males in the latter schools now being $1000.00, and of females $550.00. The services of public school teachers are now remunerated much more generously than in 1909, but in view of the fact that it is generally admitted that the salaries were inadequate, the increased cost of living, the higher qualifications of the teachers, and consequently better service, it cannot be said that teachers' salaries have increased in a higher proportion than those of persons in other occupations. In 1909 the teaching staff was made up of teachers holding the following certificates: 3 First Class, 55 Second Class, and 40 Third Class and Temporary ; in 1914 there were 9 teachers holding First Class, 81 Second Class and only 12 Third Class and Temporary Certificates, and I am pleased to be able to report that for the first time, in 1915, the Temporary certificates have entirely disappeared.

The cost of pupils enrolled five years ago was as follows : Albion $14.99, Caledon $15.06, Chinguacousy $18.50, Toronto $16.32, Toronto Gore $16.33, Brampton $13.16, Bolton $30.62, Streetsville $8.76. In 1914 Albion paid for each pupil $26.-05, Caledon $22.08, Chinguacousy $28.41, Toronto $22.11, Toronto Gore $32.76, Brampton $14.91, Bolton $33.11, Port Credit $16.21 and Streetsville $11.66. As compared with 1909 the cost throughout the whole county shows an advance from $16.04 to $22.32. It will be seen from this statement that the cost of education is increasing much more rapidly in the rural than in the urban municipalities. The decrease in the school population of the former partly accounts for this. A further increase may be looked for and the taxpayers should seriously consider how the cost may be reduced without destroying the efficiency of the schools. Many of the schools are small, the average attendance in at least one-fourth of the rural schools does not exceed 12, yet these schools cost as much as if three times as many pupils were in daily attendance. The ratepayers in such sections are empowered by the School Act to close the schools temporarily and authorize their boards to provide for the admission of the pupils to the schools of adjoining sections and the accommodation provided under such arrangement shall be taken in lieu of the accommodation which the board is required by the Schools Act to make for the pupils of the section. Power is given trustees of such sections to levy and collect upon the taxable property of the section such sums as may be necessary to pay the fees of the pupils and also for the conveyance of the pupils to and from such schools. The township council shall pay to the board of such rural school the actual disbursements of the pupils at and the conveyance to and from the school which they attend, not exceeding the amount due such section from Township and County grants. Were this provision of the Schools Act taken advantage of, it would reduce a number of the schools by one-fourth and effect a saving of from 10 to 15 per cent of the total expenditure.

The question of the future in our province is the consolidation of the rural schools. Up to the present this question has not received much consideration, and where it has been discussed has not met with the favor it deserves. However, time will bring about a change of view as the advantages are better understood and appreciated. In the provinces where the system has been adopted it has given very general satisfaction. The ideal school is a large one under the management of a male teacher living in a house, provided by the community and surrounded by from three to five acres of land used as an experimental plot by the patrons of the school. In such schools the teaching of agriculture could be carried on systematically and the boys and girls specially fitted for life in the country. The teachers having fewer classes would be able to devote more time to the personal help and guidance needed by young children in their work. The better returns brought about by the better conditions in a consolidated school would be more than double those now obtained. In fact, one dollar spent in maintaining the larger school would be worth two devoted to the maintenance of the small one-teacher school.

In my report of a year ago I deplored the number and frequency of the changes that occur in the teaching staff of the county, especially in the rural municipalities. Again I desire to call your attention to the fact that of the 79 teachers in these schools only 36 were employed in the same school as that in which they began the year, and of these five resigned at Christmas. In the twenty-one departments of the urban schools there were but four changes made during the year. Until the cause for these changes is known and proper remedies applied a very considerable portion of the money expended in maintaining schools will be wasted. The education of our youth is the most important duty of the hour and I venture to suggest that this council might very properly and profitably devote a portion of its time to the consideration of the matter.

Trustees are showing commendable interest in placing their schools in charge of adequately trained teachers, as is shown in a statement above regarding teachers' certificates, but many have not awakened to the necessity of creating environment in which the most effective work can be performed. To assist in arousing an interest in the improvement of school grounds and transforming them into spots of which people will be proud, Richard Blain, Esq., M.P., and James R. Fallis, Esq., M.L.A., have permitted me to announce that they will offer prizes to school boards making the greatest improvement in their grounds during the year 1915. Trustees will in due time receive notification of details relative to this offer and it is much to be desired that it will be productive of a general effort on the part of trustees and patrons of the schools of the county.

The incorporation of the Village of Port Credit deprived S. S. No. 19, Toronto, of school accommodation. The pupils of this section were permitted to attend the school in the village during the past year, but a board of arbitration appointed to consider the matter re-united S. S. No. 19 with the Municipality of Port Credit for school purposes.

An arbitration consisting of the Judge of Halton, the P.S. Inspectors of Halton and Peel, and representative of the Townships of Chinguacousy and Esquesing, was asked to consider the advisability of forming a new union section of parts of Nos. 3 and 4, Chinguacousy, and No. 16, Esquesing. After carefully considering the matter the arbitrators decided that although several children were inconvenienced because of the distance to an organized school, they would not be justified in imposing the financial burdens upon the ratepayers interested that the establishment of a new section would incur. In order to lessen the cause of complaint the trustees of No. 3, Chinguacousy, offered to engage a carriage for the conveyance of the children of Terra Cotta to the school in their section. I understand that this arrangement is giving good satisfaction.

In the beginning of the year I called together the trustees of the rural schools to consider the advisability of forming Township Trustees' Associations. The proposition met with such favor that four associations were formed. At the close of 1914 and in the beginning of 1915 meetings of all these associations were held, which I attended and addressed on matters of general interest. Considerable interest was shown in every case and arrangements made to secure the co-operation of all persons interested in education and to further the best interest both of ratepayers and the children.

In concluding this report I appeal to you for your hearty assistance in making our schools among the best in the province.

I have the honor to be,
Your obedient servant,
W. J. GALBRAITH,
P. S. Inspector.

The Late John Bryan.

Once more we are reminded of the uncertainty of life by the sudden taking off of Mr. John Bryan, who lived on the farm adjoining the north-east quarter of the corporation. On Monday evening about 9 o'clock, as was his usual custom, he started for the barn to see that everything was all right before retiring. As he was out longer than usual, Mrs. Bryan went out to see if anything was wrong, but before she got far found the lifeless body of Mr. Bryan lying across the path. Death must have been instantaneous as when picked up his hands were in his pockets, showing that he passed away without a struggle. Deceased was born in the south of Ireland 64 years ago and emigrated to Canada when a young man, locating near Kleinburg, where he lived until his marriage. He then moved to the 12th of King where he lived for over 10 years, moving from there to the townline between Tecumseth and King, where he stayed for five years. Two years ago he purchased the farm on which he died. Though a resident of this locality for a short time only, he made many friends. He was a man of quiet manner, honest and hard-working and one who could be depended on at all times. His wife, one son and one daughter, both of whom lived at home, survive him. A half-brother lives in Essex County and a sister in Ireland. To the bereaved family we extend heartfelt sympathy in their hour of trial. The funeral will take place this (Thursday) afternoon, service being held at the house at 2.00 o'clock, interment being made in Mt. Tegart Cemetery. —Tottenham Sentinel.

Neuralgia of the Heart

This Letter Tells of Wonderful Change Effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mr. James G. Clark, Fosterville, York County, N.B., writes:—"I have been a great sufferer from what the doctors said was neuralgia of the heart. The pain started in the back of the neck and worked down into the region of the heart. Though I had taken a lot of medicine of one kind and another, I could not get anything to help me until I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"When I began this treatment I could not rest in bed, except by sitting upright, on account of the dreadful pains about the heart and the quick, loud beating. The change which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has made in my condition is wonderful. It has entirely overcome those symptoms, and is making me strong and well. If this statement will help relieve the suffering of others, you are at liberty to use it."

W. A. M'LEAN HAS A BIG PROJECT FOR ONTARIO.

Commissioner of Highways Is at Work on a Scheme to Build a Road From Montreal to Windsor Which, With a Branch to Ottawa, Would Serve Most of the Larger Communities of Older Ontario.

The Scottish Canadian for December cantains an interesting article regarding the proposals for an Ontario Trunk Road and a sketch of W. A. McLean, Ontario's Commissioner of Highways, who has the project in hand. The article follows:

"Mr. W. A. McLean, C.E., O.L.S., whose connection with various movements having in view the improvement of main highways and county roads generally has been conspicuously fruitful for many years, is well-known in Toronto Scottish circles, being a member of St. Andrew's Society and of the Sons of Scotland Benevolent Association. He was born at Belmont, Ont., in 1871, his father being the Rev. Hugh McLean, and his mother, Margaret S. McNairn. He was educated at Ingersoll, Strathroy and Toronto, and having taken a distinguished professional course, became Assistant Engineer of St. Thomas in 1894. He entered the service of the Ontario Government in 1896 as Assistant Engineer of Highways, becoming chief of that branch in 1910, and was promoted to the important office he now holds, as Commissioner of Highways, in 1913. Professionally he ranks high, both as an author and as a practical engineer. A number of technical books of much excellence stands to his credit, and among works designed by him is the first long span (100 feet) concrete arch in Canada, built in 1907 at Massey, Ont. Articles from his pen are welcomed by the leading engineering magazines, and he fills the coveted position of president of the American Roadbuilders' Association, being the first Canadian to receive that honor.

"Recently, in his zeal to secure the benefit of a great trunk road for Ontario, he proposed that such a great public work could very well be undertaken as part of a triumphal monument to the Canadian arms in the present war, the victorious outcome of which the Allies are confident. Mr. McLean has worked out a plan whereby such a road could be constructed from one end of Ontario to the other along the front, on a feasible financial basis, and no doubt as the project is developed the public mind will become fully sized of its merits.

Of this project a contemporary says:

"'The Montreal-to-Windsor road formed an essential part of the highway improvement scheme formulated by the Highway Improvement Commission. If a trunk road is to be built linking up the highways throughout the province, it will naturally be this road. If a branch road to Ottawa were provided, this road would serve and join the great majority of the larger cities and towns of older Ontario, and it would cross or connect with practically all the highways in southern Ontario. Its construction, therefore, is a natural and essential part of any general highway improvement scheme for the province, and is ultimately bound to come. To see this and provide for it is only common sense and practical engineering.

"'In addition, road building is an admirable way to meet conditions of unemployment and the present or the coming year constitute a time when such conditions are serious. To promote road building in any direction at this time, therefore, is only common sense and good business judgment.

"'In round numbers the road would be 535 miles long. It was laid down in the report of the Highway Improvement Commission and has generally been accepted that cities should contribute something to the cost of the main road close to their borders. In the 535 miles there are about 135 miles of road which would be provided for in this way. This leaves 400 miles of road yet to be provided for. Mr. McLean has estimated the cost at eight thousand dollars a mile. This means $3,200,000.

"'This money might well be raised by contributions levied largely on motorists who exclusively make use of the main roads of the province. There are about thirty thousand licensed cars in the province. This probably means that there are at least 15,000 motorists who would co-operate in such a work. Suppose these men raised by subscription each an average of two hundred dollars. That seems a small amount for each to raise, but the aggregate would be three million and the cost of the road is pretty well provided for. It is largely a question of organization.

"'The appeal for contributions would also be made to the large merchants to whom the road would furnish splendid facilities for the delivery of their goods. In the same way it would appeal to the wholesaler and manufacturers. Many smaller individual subscribers from purely patriotic motives would help swell the contributions. Patriotic and historical societies would assist in the organization, as would Boards of Trade and similar associations. The townships through which the road passes might also be depended upon. And for such work, provincial in its character, but national in its significance, an appeal to the Dominion Government would be justified, and would, it is said, be favorably received.'"

POTASH AND WOOD ASHES.

Valuable Products for Land Improvement Available From This Source.

With the supply of potash from the German mines shut off by war conditions, Canada should now give attention to the large quantity of this fertilizing agent which is allowed to go to waste through want of care and conservation of the annual production of wood ashes.

Throughout a large part of Canada the chief fuel at all seasons, but more especially in winter, is wood. In the eastern provinces, hardwoods are chiefly used. These woods, especially beech and maple, are rich in potash, varying from 5 to 13 per cent., according to conditions of dryness of the wood and care of the ashes. Other valuable ingredients of wood ashes are a small proportion of phosphoric acid and about fifty per cent. of carbonate of lime.

In the clearing of wood lots and in the burning of debris after taking out the fuel supply, large amounts of ashes are produced. These as a rule are left where the burning is done, and are consequently wasted.

Wood ashes should be carefully stored, in fire proof receptacles if possible; in any event away from any danger of fire, and should be kept dry to avoid leaching. In the spring they should be spread upon the land. They are especially valuable as a fertilizer and to encourage the growth of clover and the better grasses.

Wood ashes, by hastening the decay of organic matter in soils, render more readily available the nitrogen contained therein. In sandy soil, wood ashes supply the phosphoric acid and lime in which these soils are deficient, while, on clay lands, the lime content of the ashes tends to render available the potash salts already present in abundance. Potash as supplied to the land through the medium of wood ashes has a distinct advantage over the potash salts as imported from Germany, in that it is in a very soluble form, and hence is at once available for plant food.

The importance of wood ashes, as shown above, as a fertilizer can hardly be over-estimated. It is consequently of first interest to the agriculturists and lumber interests of Canada to conserve the supply wherever and by what process produced.

During the present winter large undertakings in land clearing and right-of-way clearing of railway lines will be in progress from the burning of the debris of which large amounts of ashes will accumulate. Some steps should be taken to provide that these ashes are not wasted, as apart from the difficulty of securing potash supplies, the market value of ashes at present is from $8 to $12 per ton, depending upon quality. — Conservation.

A Police Joke.

The job of protecting Toronto the good brings into the maw of the morality department many trophies of art and otherwise—mostly nude. Staff-Sergt. McKinney, who presides over the museum of wickedness, keeps these curios not for himself, oh no!—for Inspector Gregory. He had one last week—but this is getting ahead of the story. On a certain day last week each of the reporters who called was greeted with the high sign from Officer McKinney.

The high sign is accompanied by a motion toward the inner office with an added whisper, "I'll show you a picture."

Accordingly when the door is shut the sergeant digs down into the inner recesses of the desk and produces, not a picture, but one of those "put-it-close-to-your-eye" affairs like they used to have in the handles of pocket knives, once fashionable.

Just to heighten the interest, McKinney explains how it works. "You put it close to your eye," he says, "and when you get the focus, turn this little screw and see the figure move."

Eagerly our reporter takes the little tube-shaped tin thing and holds it up to the light with his eye close. What he sees is undoubtedly interesting. It is the figure of a beautiful woman—in tights. "Now," warns McKinney, "don't forget to turn the screw."

The screw turns—quite readily—but the figure doesn't perform the dance that our reporter has been led to expect. On the contrary it shoots a sharp stream of water straight into the sin-devouring optic.

Of course, there is a chorus of hoarse, official laughter from four or five "bulls" who have been watching through the crack of the door. Our reporter wipes the moisture off his face and his collar and they are ready for the next one.

Five out of six city papers fell for it in one day.

Then Faith Failed.

A Methodist bishop in the Northwest tells of a conversation he once had with a man touching certain difficulties of the latter's religious tenets.

"Bishop," said this naive Westerner, "I do not refuse to believe the story of the ark. I can accept the ark's great size, its odd shape, and the vast number of animals it contained; but when I am asked to believe that the children of Israel carried this unwieldy thing for forty years in the wilderness, I must confess that my faith breaks down."

He Says He Told His Neighbor

Got a New Lease of Life.

Mike Rudy, Young Manitoba Farmer Sick for Two Years, Tells How He

Campersville, Man., Feb. 15. (Special).—Cured of Kidney and Bladder Disease of two years standing, is Mike Rudy, a well known young farmer living near here, is telling his neighbors that he owes his new lease of life to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"For two years," Mr. Rudy states, "I suffered with a terrible pain in the small of my back and shoulders. I took many different medicines, and was under the doctor's care, but nothing seemed to do me any lasting good. Finally heart disease was added to my troubles.

"Hearing Dodd's Kidney Pills well spoken of by my neighbors, I decided to try them. To my surprise and relief one box cured me completely. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured Mr. Rudy because his troubles all came from sick kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills are a kidney remedy, pure and simple. If you have pain in the back, rheumatism, lumbago, gravel or diabetes, your kidneys are wrong. You need Dodd's Kidney Pills.

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, FEB. 25th, 1915

It is those who will to do who usually find a way to do.

Most people are so much impressed by the size of a man's roll that they forget that it is the size of a man's soul that really counts.

Performance is after all the real revelation of the character. Profession may be very well but if it is not backed up by performance it is as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal.

The war taxes may not be very palatable, but the Canadian who gets off with some additional taxes has no cause to grumble. If he were obliged to shoulder his rifle to repel a foreign invader he would learn something about the realities of war.

We stay-at-homes should remember the men who have gone to the front and what we owe them. It is one thing to remain in comfort at home and contemplate the war from the safety and security of our own firesides; it is another thing to give up home and friends and comforts and to risk one's life in the trenches of France or Belgium. We should not forget the brave defenders who have gone forth to war at the call of their country; nar should we ever cease to gratefully remember that it is to their intrepid courage that we owe our personal safety and the safety of the whole Empire.

The Presbyterian rightly holds that Great Britain can make no settlement of the great war now raging upon the basis of the situation as it stands at the present time. "Britain," writes the editor, "is bound in honor to exert her utmost strength for the deliverance of Belgium. Having entered the fight for honor's cause, she has staked her national existence and the integrity of the Empire upon the issue. The defeat of the Allies would mean not merely the invasion and spoliation of the Motherland, but the ruin of that wonderful experiment in political relationship, so full of hope for the future of the world, which is being made by the British nations—a league of free peoples, bound in brotherhood and mutual helpfulness, all free, yet indissolubly one."

Isn't it just about time that Orangeville did some serious thinking on the question of electric power? To the south and west of this place most of the larger towns and villages are already supplied with electric current from Niagara. Brampton, Georgetown, Acton, Fergus and Elora have all made satisfactory contracts with the Hydro-Electric Commission. The Commission is developing power at Eugenia Falls and places north such as Owen Sound, Markdale, Dundalk, Flesherton and Shelburne are planning to get power from this source. Is Orangeville going to sit quietly by and allow itself to be sidetracked? True, the town has two private companies, which are furnishing a very satisfactory lighting service and also supplying some energy for power purposes. It is doubtful, however, if either of them could furnish manufacturers with power in any large quantities. On the contrary it is reasonably certain that neither of them is in a position to fill a large order for power if a buyer happened to turn up. This condition of affairs is not satisfactory nor is it in the best interests of the town to allow it to continue. If manufacturers are to locate and thrive here it is essential that they shall be able to obtain electric power. Orangeville could not offer a manufacturer any better inducement than electric power at $25 to $26 per horse power.

THE HOME MERCHANT.

The home merchant. Who is he?

He is the chap who gives you credit when you are financially broke, and carries your account until you are able to pay.

He is the chap who gives you back your money or makes exchanges when you are not satisfied with what you have bought.

He is the chap who stands behind his guarantee, and makes restoration of all losses that you may sustain on the goods you buy.

He is the chap who meets you at the door with a handshake, and lets you out with a message to the kids and a real come again goodbye.

He is the chap who meets and greets you on the street every day in the year, and takes a neighborly interest in your family and your affairs.

He is the chap whose clerks and bookkeepers and other employees live in Orangeville and spend their money with you and with other Orangeville people.

He is the chap who pays heavy taxes to help support Orangeville's schools and build Orangeville's streets.

He is the chap who helps support Orangeville's churches and talks for Orangeville and boosts for Orangeville every day of the year.

He is the chap who visits you when you are sick, sends flowers to your family when you die, and follows your body out among the trees and tombs, as far as human feet may travel with the dead.

He is the home merchant— your neighbor—your friend—your helper in times of need.

Don't you think you ought to trade with him, and he his friend and helper in the time of his need?

Don't you know that every dollar that you send out of Orangeville for merchandise, is sent to strangers, to men who never spend a dollar in Orangeville, to men who would not trust you for a box of matches, to men who would turn you over to the police if you should enter their offices?

You don't save much, frequently nothing, when you send your money out of Orangeville and you take all the risk yourself of short weight or measure and of getting damaged or inferior goods. And don't you know that the growth and prosperity of Orangeville depends very largely upon the success and prosperity of the home merchants. Out-of-town people judge our town by the appearance of our stores and the degree of enterprise shown by our merchants. And our home merchants cannot succeed unless home folk give them loyal support.

PEEL CONSERVATIVES

Re-elected Old Officers at Annual Meeting on Saturday.

Mr. A. C. Pratt, M.P.P. for South Norfolk, the Chief Speaker.

Peel Liberal Conservative Association held its annual meeting in the Town Hall in Brampton on Saturday afternoon. There was quite a large attendance at the meeting. The chair was taken at two o'clock by Dr. John Graham, of Mono Road, President of the Association.

Jas. R. Fallis, M.P.P., and Richard Blain, M.P., made brief addresses and were very cordially received. Hon. Thomas McGarry had consented to be present, but at the last moment was prevented by his duties and sent as his representative Mr. A. C. Pratt, M.P.P., for South Norfolk, who made a decidedly favorable impression upon his audience. Mr. Pratt spoke on conditions prevailing in Canada and urged his hearers, who were largely farmers, to do their utmost to increase the production of every article of food in order to provide for the wants of the Empire.

It was Canada's opportunity to seize the trade Germany formerly enjoyed and to do everything possible to supply all the foodstuffs the soil would produce.

Mr. Pratt's address was not only a plea for increased production, but an outpouring of sentiments with regard to Canada's place in the Empire that has seldom been equalled. At the conclusion he was roundly cheered.

Last year's officers were re-elected as follows:—President, Dr. John Graham, Mono Road; Vice-President, Leslie H. Pallett, Toronto township; Treasurer, Frank Jackson, Toronto township; Secretary, J. J. Donaghy, Brampton.

Resolutions of confidence in the Government leaders at Ottawa and Toronto were proposed by Messrs. J. J. Donaghy and B. F. Justin, K.C., and seconded by Messrs. W. J. Jameson and W. S. Morphy. The Association pledged its unwavering support to R. Blain, M.P., and J. R. Fallis, M.P.P.

McKEOWN IS WHIP.

Member for Dufferin will Marshall Government Members in Legislature.

C. R. McKeown, M.P.P. for Dufferin, has been appointed Chief Conservative Whip in the Ontario Legislature as successor to Hon. Dr. Preston. His selection was made known on Tuesday, following a general caucus of the Conservative members.

Mr. McKeown was assistant whip last session and his advancement has been regarded as practically assured. While by no means an old member in point of service the new Whip has been a member of the Legislature since 1897 two years after Sir James Whitney took up the reins of office. He was first elected in the by-election following the death of the late Dr. Lewis by a majority of 97. In the general election he was again returned to the Legislature, although his majority was reduced to 42. In 1911 he was elected again, this time with a margin of 276, and last June came out ahead by a majority of 545. In each election he was opposed by an Independent Conservative only.

That Mr. McKeown will fill his new position acceptably goes without saying. His unfailing good nature and his resourcefulness are qualities which fit him admirably for the responsible post to which he has been appointed.

United States Should Help

A large audience gathered in the Methodist Church school room on Monday night to hear the debate on the subject, "Resolved that the United States should Help the Allies in the Present War." The affirmative was championed by Mr. A. E. Annis and Principal Firth, who advanced a number of cogent reasons in favor of intervention by the neighboring Republic. The arguments against the United States interfering in support of the Allies were presented by Mayor Campbell and Dr. R. N. Kyles, both of whom spoke in convincing style. Public School Inspector Liddy, who acted as judge, gave a concise summing up of the debate before announcing his decision in favor of the affirmative. Mr. Percival Harding contributed a well-rendered solo, which was greatly appreciated. Rev. G. W. Robinson occupied the chair.

17th of March.

The ladies of the Methodist Church are giving a drama entitled "A Ladies Aid Meeting at Mohawk Cross-Roads," on the 17th of March. A good musical programme will be provided as well. Further particulars later.

DRUGGISTS PROTEST.

Declare that They are Asked to Pay More Than Their Share of War Tax.

Wholesale druggists manufacturing patent medicines had a lengthy conference on Monday with Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, during the course of which they asked that the war tariff changes be adjusted so as to bear less heavily on their industry. They maintained that the increase in the tariff duties themselves is a sufficient burden without the imposition also of a special stamp tax on proprietary medicines.

The objections to the new measure of taxation as voiced by the deputation are several in number.—The tax proposed, it was shown, amounted to from 15 per cent. to 40 per cent. on the usual trade selling prices. The tax being imposed on the price of sale at retail to the public represented on that basis of calculation from 10 per cent. to 20 per cent. No other business or industry was taxed to any such extent, and many important lines would actually face ruin if the measure was persisted in by the Government. Instead of yielding for the war a large amount the prohibitory nature of the Tax would defeat the object sought and ruin prosperous and legitimate business enterprise in manufacturing.

The Minister of Finance was approached on the basis of asking investigation in detail, it being claimed that the treatment of the manufacturers and dealers as well in the branch affected, is unfair and unjust. The goods involved it can be shown cannot stand any such charge, and also have already been taxed for the same purpose in respect to all the crude material employed in manufacturing same. The general tariff advance of 7½ applies to the ingredients used and as well also certain advances enacted last year at the "War Session" of Parliament. Alcohol is one important item with many manufacturers who have to bear the Inland Revenue Tax of 3,96 per gallon on spirits. In principle it cannot be held as just to tax one and the same articles under several headings.

Discussing the effect of the tariff, one member of the delegation spoke as follows to-day: "The tax on the druggist is more than we can stand. The average taxable stock in the drug stores of this country amounts to $1000. The tax is 10 per cent., which amounts to an average of $400 on each druggist. There are 2,500 drug stores, so that as soon as the act comes into force it will mean $1,000,000 out of our pockets right away. That is more than we can stand in the present depression.

The Canadian Club.

Quite a representative audience attended the meeting held in the public library auditorium on Friday night for the purpose of considering the advisability of organizing a Canadian Club in Orangeville. Rev. G. W. Tebbs was elected to the chair and Mr. John Foley acted as secretary for the evening. The chairman read several letters from Canadian Clubs in the Province and after hearing these the meeting resolved to form a branch in Orangeville. All present signed as charter members. The membership fee was fixed at one dollar per year. A committee consisting of Messrs. A. A. Hughson, Rev. G. W. Tebbs, A. D. McKitrick, Mayor Campbell and A. A. Smith was appointed to draft a Constitution and to nominate permanent officers for the first year. Arrangements will be made to hold the inaugural meeting in the near future.

SOLDIERING at SALISBURY

Digging Trenches a Stiff Job Owing to Chalky Formation of Subsoil.

Former Alton Boy Writes About Experiences in the Canadians' Camp.

The following letter is from the pen of Pte. Herbert Meek, of E. Company of the 48th Highlanders a member of the First Canadian Contingent. Pte. Meek is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Meek, of Toronto and formerly of Alton:—

Lark Hill, Salisbury Plains,
Jan. 28th, 1915.

Dear Mother:—

Received your last letter two days ago, also one from Dad, Winnifred and Miss McCann. I am sure I got everything you sent me for Christmas which was certainly a lot. Yesterday I got the box with the socks and gloves for which I am very thankful, for our feet are never dry.

We are pretty well fixed in the huts since Christmas, warmer and more comfortable. We have each a bowl and plate now instead of the billy can. We have two long tables and benches and a large coal stove in the centre and I took good care that my bed was placed near it. We have wooden beds and five blankets each. The beds are pretty hard but much better than the bare ground.

We have done a lot of pioneer work, pick and shovel, making roads, digging trenches and constructing rifle ranges. The ground here is difficult to shovel. There is only about three inches of soil on top and then you strike a white chalk, which is "sort of" hard. It is in layers about two inches thick and we have to make two rifle ranges in that stuff. Had to dig a ditch on each side about 100 yards long, 3 yards wide and 7 feet deep. Had to throw this chalk in a pile between the ditches making a large bank of it 7 feet high to stop the bullets, then sod it all over. I told Moore I wished Gowdy could see him doing the dago stunt. I have certainly taken off some fat lately.

We have been drilling pretty hard the last two weeks getting ready to leave. This morning we had to walk 12 miles to the rifle ranges. Col. Turner gave it out as official yesterday that we will leave for France by the 7th of February. The nearly had to move us for all the boys were getting so fed-up on the job that they were joining English regiments. I hope France has a nicer climate than England. We will all be glad to leave Salisbury Plains. The winds here are very cold and damp.

I did not get to Scotland again. Meredith and I intended to go again at New Years but did not get leave. London is certainly a big place, too big for me. I like Edinburgh the best of all the places I have visited. It is so clean and more modern than the others. Harold and I were invited to spend Christmas with Sir James and Lady Mason, who are relatives of Meredith's, but as we had been away twice in December we could not get off again for Christmas, but they sent Harold a large box of stuff, plum pudding, etc. Sir James Mason is in the navy.

I am sending you a picture of our section but a number of the boys are not in it. Meredith is not in it as he was in the hospital with a cold. You can see our hut behind us.

We have not been able to get rid of our "dwarf regiment" no matter how much coal oil or insect powder we use. You can't insult the little devils. I can feel them crawling up my back now in quarter column and short rushes by the right. I have a few specimens bottled up for souvenirs.

Now, Mother, I do not want you to think, or write, any more about trying to get me left at the base. I did not enlist for that and if I get to the firing line I will do my best, and I will not be shot in the back either. Don't think I do not know where I am going. I have found that out. I have spent more than one cold night in a trench full of mud and water. I know you people over there have not the slightest idea what the front is like. I have seen dozens of fellows who have come back wounded and you ought to see some of the wounds and hear them tell about it. It is certainly worth while. I am going and will do my bit if I am only seventeen, but I dont' think we will see any fighting for some time yet.

I have not seen Cavers for some time but I see that young Englishman, Billy Parker, every day. He used to be in Alton and is in B. Co. of our regiment.

Well, Mother, I will close as we have to be at Balford rifle range by half-past seven to-morrow morning, so that means out of bed by five and anyway some of the boys want the pen and ink.

I will send you my address in France as soon as I can, but you write to the old address yet and it will be forwarded to me.

Love to all,

HERB.

Route for Hydro-Electric.

The Free Press states that a couple of men in the employ of the Hydro-Electric Commission were in Shelburne one day recently. They were engaged going over the route of the transmission line from Eugenia Falls to Shelburne. The route as now proposed will be down the Gravel Road from Flesherton, through Dundalk from McDowell's corner and thence to Shelburne by way of the Back Line.

Jno. McCabe has been appointed clerk of Tottenham to succeed S. H. Nolan, who resigned at the last meeting of the council.

TRIAL ON FRIDAY

Harry Cooper Was Committed on Three Charges on Monday.

Harry Cooper, who is in jail here awaiting his trial on charges of stealing grain and chop feed from John Harshaw's farm in Mono, was arraigned before P.M. Pattullo on Monday on three additional charges arising out of the theft of a steer from W. N. Baker, a cow from H. L. Atkinson and a set of harrows and some whiffletrees from Wm. Canning. The accused was sent up for trial on all three charges. Cooper will be tried by Judge Fisher on Friday at 10 a.m. The prisoner is now awaiting trial on no less than five charges.

Two more charges have been lodged against Peter Cooper, the older of the two prisoners. The senior Cooper is now charged with stealing a quantity of clothing and other goods from William Potter & Son, millers and general merchants in Tottenham. The Potter firm has a sawmill and timber limits near Barrie. Goods valued at $91 intended for the men employed in the mill were stolen from the station platform at Potter's Siding about four miles north of Baxter. When Constable Marshall searched Cooper's premises at Mono Centre he found in the old man's possession clothing and other articles which Mr. Potter identified on Saturday as part of the stolen goods. In fact the identification included a suit of clothes which the prisoner was wearing when Mr. Potter visited the jail. Marshall also found at Harry Cooper's place near Angus four very large steam whistles, a threshing engine whistle, several lubricators and a miscellaneous collection of oil cups, taps and other fittings for which he would like to find owners.

The senior Cooper insists upon going before a jury and will therefore be tried before Sir William Mulock at the Spring Assizes in March.

PATRIOTISM and PRODUCTION

Pin Your Faith to Live Stock

The one outstanding feature of the world's farming is that there will soon be a great shortage of meat supplies. Save your breeding stock. They are today Canada's most valuable asset. If you sacrifice your breeding stock now, you will regret it in the near future. Plan to increase your live stock. Europe and the United States, as well as Canada, will pay higher prices for beef, mutton, and bacon, in the very near future. Remember that live stock is the only true basis of economic and profitable farming. The more grain you grow, the more stock you can carry. The more stock you keep, the more fertilizer for your fields. Mixed farming is real farming, not speculating.

Study this table, which was prepared before the war. Only one country increased its cattle more than its people in the past ten years. And, in it Australia in 1914 there was a tremendous loss of live stock through an unprecedented drought a fact which the table does not show. Do you need any stronger argument than this table that there is bound to be an increasing demand for beef? Add to this condition, the destruction of live stock of all kinds, breeding and young stock included, in the war zones. The war has merely hastened the meat shortage of the world. When it is over, the farmer with live stock will continue to profit in the world's markets, and, in addition to having helped feed our soldiers at the front, will be in a position to reap a further reward for having stayed with the live stock industry.

SHEEP. Canadian farmers have been losing great opportunities in sheep raising and sheep feeding. Hundreds of thousands of sheep have been slaughtered to provide winter clothing for the soldiers of the different armies. Australia's losses, through drought in 1914, were very heavy. Canada has been importing frozen mutton from New Zealand. In view of these conditions, wool and mutton should prove very profitable for Canadian sheep raisers during the next few years.

SWINE. Through the indiscriminate sale of swine in the Canadian West in the past three months, the supply in 1915 promises to be little more than half of 1914. Add to this the fact that the British soldier is allowed ½ lb. of bacon per day, and that sausage is the principal meat food of the German soldier, and you will understand the outlook for the future. Those who stay steadily with swine, year in and year out, make money. Those who rush in and rush out, generally lose money. "Buy when others are selling, sell when others are buying," applies to live stock as well as to Wall Street stocks.

DAIRY. Milch cows increased in Canada from 2,408,677 in 1901 to 2,594,179 in 1911. This increase did not amount to 8% and was less than one-quarter of the population increase of Canada. At the same time, the per capita consumption of milk by Canadians increased 30%. Is there any wonder we had to import 7,000,000 lbs. of butter from New Zealand?

The exports of Canadian cheese have been steadily declining for ten years. Look at the market prices today. Do they not suggest the advantage of increased production?

Through cow-testing, selection and better feeding, the average annual production per cow in Canada did increase from 2,850 lbs. per cow in 1901 to 3,805 lbs. in 1911, but this is only a beginning. Last year one cow in Canada produced 26,000 lbs.

The dairymen of Denmark who supply Great Britain with butter and bacon are not satisfied unless their herds average 10,000 lbs. per cow. Let Canadian dairymen work to increase the productiveness of the milch cow. Breed for milk. Test your cows. Save your calves. Select your milkers. Feed for yield. Read the Agricultural papers and Government reports and bulletins on dairying.

Now that you have attended the Conferences, or have read about them, get together and talk things over. Also write to the Publications Branch, Canadian Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, for bulletins and reports on live stock and dairying.

ALTON.

Mrs. Wm. Rowcliffe, of Alton, and her son, J. E. Rowcliffe, have returned home after a trip to Hamilton and Ridgetown, where they were visiting Mrs. Rowcliffe's niece, Mrs. B. Hillock, of Hamilton, and her brother in Ridgetown.

MONO MILLS INSTITUTE

The Mono Mills Women's Institute intends sending another bale to the Red Cross Society. Any persons who would like to send articles with this bale are welcome to do so. Bandages will be the principal articles. The Institute would like all goods in at the meeting which will be held on March 10th. Further particulars next week.

MELVILLE CROSS

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Corbett entertained about 100 of their friends and neighbors at their home here on Tuesday night of last week. Dancing was the principal amusement and everybody enjoyed themselves immensely until the party broke up in the wee sma' hours of the morning. Excellent music was furnished by local talent. Mr. John Kannawin, of Orangeville, acted as floor manager, and we are pleased to note that his score is as mellow as ever. Towards midnight an excellent lunch was served. The party broke up about four o'clock in the morning, the guests repairing to their respective homes carrying with them the kindliest feelings toward their host and hostess.

FALGRAVE.

The death took place at his home, 101 Evelyn Ave., Toronto, on Saturday, Feb. 13th, of Mr. John Rowley, a former resident of this district. Deceased, who was 62 years of age, had been in declining health for some time. He was born in Alton and had always lived here until about two years ago, when he removed to Toronto. He was widely known and was held in high esteem as a good citizen. The remains were brought to Falgrave for burial, service being held in the Anglican Church by Rev. W. S. Westney. Deceased was a staunch Orangeman and the burial ritual of the Order was read over the open grave. The late Mr. Rowley was a pronounced Conservative and a useful member of the Anglican Church, having served as church warden continuously for upwards of twenty-five years. The interment took place at Falgrave on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Rowley died about five years ago and the deceased is survived by a family of three sons and two daughters. These are Justin, Holland, and Burgoyne, all living in Toronto; Mrs. Wm. Bracken, of Orangeville, and Marene, at home.

A movement is on foot to erect a covered skating rink in Tottenham.

Orillia public school trustees are considering the advisability of starting a penny savings bank in the schools under their control.

WEST MONO.

Divine service will be held in West Mono Parish on Sunday next, February 28th, as follows—Herald Angel 11 a.m.; St. Luke's 3 p.m.; St. George's 7 p.m. We would like to get the February envelopes in next Sunday.

A MONO PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. M. Stinson, 2nd line, west, Mono, entertained about 100 of their friends and neighbors on Friday night. Dancing and games were the chief amusements and a splendid time was spent by everybody. Violin music was furnished by the McMaster Bros., Messrs. Irwin and Johnston. The floor managers were Messrs. Bert Jackson, Watt McCluskey and Geo. Duke. Refreshments were served about midnight. Mr. and Mrs. Stinson entertained their guests with warm-hearted hospitality and everybody returned home delighted with the evening they had spent.

CALEDON.

Convenor W. T. Harris, Secretary Cecil Dodds and a number of party stalwarts represented Ward 5 at the annual meeting of the Peel Conservative Association, held in Brampton on Saturday last. There was a very large audience, representatives being present from all parts of the county. Dr. John Graham, of Mono Road, was again the unanimous choice as President for another year and on motion of Mr. W. J. Limebeer, seconded by Mr. Geo. Nelson, all the other officers were also re-elected. Stirring speeches were delivered by Mr. J. R. Falls, M.P.P., Mr. Richard Blain, M.P., and a most interesting and appropriate patriotic address by Mr. V. C. Pratt, M.P.P. for Norfolk. The Caledon contingent returned home well pleased with the days outing.

Farmers throughout the Dominion of Canada and the British Empire are being urged at this time to produce more food and fodder; to use their every ability to make their land produce to the very limit all that it is capable of producing, and there is no doubt if the present situation continues in Europe and the season is at all favorable for crops, farmers generally stand to gain millions this year and the farmers owe it to themselves and to the great British Empire to produce more and show their patriotism in this way. While a great many of them cannot take their places in the firing line, they can stay at home and grow the grain that will feed the men who are taking their places in the trenches and fighting the battles for Canada and the Empire. Already Caledon farmers are alive to the situation and many of them are giving their best attention to the choice of seed and studying the best methods of preparing the soil etc. in order to obtain the best results. Caledon farmers are just as thrifty and just as patriotic as any in the British Empire and can be depended upon to do their duty in this time of stress and strain.

Mr. Geo. Cameron, who went west and farmed on a rather extensive scale for the past few years, but has been visiting his parental home in Orangeville this winter, has exchanged his land at Biggar, Sask., for Mr. Jas. Irvin's fine two hundred acre farm on the 2nd line, east.

Is this a postponed January thaw or a forward spring?

Mr. Clarence Perdue, of Toronto, visited Caledon friends over Sunday.

Mr. Wm. Hutchinson, of Regina, Sask., spent the week end at the Sutton House.

Mrs. A. Vanwyck, of Detroit, is in town at present, owing to the serious illness of her sister, Mrs. D. Patterson.

Mr. Ross Bates, who has been home from the West since last autumn, expects to leave for Indian Head in a short time.

Miss Mary Pickering, of Orangeville, is spending a few days with her aunt, Mrs. H. Stuckey.

Miss Birdie Dodds is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Royce, of Meadowvale.

Miss Ethel Arkell, of Orangeville, spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Torrance.

Miss Alice Wilson, of Sandhill, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Hugh Potter, 2nd line, east.

Messrs. H. Hilliard and C. Limebeer were our delegates to the Peel County S. S. Convention at Streetsville, Feb. 11th and 12th.

Members of the three local Dramatic Clubs were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Dan McKim, 1st line, east, on Thursday of last week, and report a most enjoyable evening.

The Caledon Old Dramatic Club, which played "The White Oak Tavern" in Orangeville last winter, will make its second appearance there on the evening of Feb. 25th, this time presenting "The Danger Signal."

Owns the Blanket.

To the Editor of The Banner.
Dear Sir:—

I have been informed that Mr. D. A. Hogg has stated that a horse blanket in my possession belongs to him. I have had and owned the horse blanket referred to for years, and if Mr. D. A. Hogg can prove that the blanket belongs to him. I will donate $100 to the Lord Dufferin Hospital here.

Yours truly,
G. E. SUTTON.

RESULTS ENCOURAGING.

What Prohibition Has Accomplished in West Virginia.

To the Editor—

The actual results of prohibition in West Virginia are most encouraging. The President of The Citizens National Bank of Pennsboro says, "I am personally acquainted with quite a number of former drinking men who have reformed since prohibition and are now sober progressive citizens."

Mr. Amos Wright, President of the Home National Bank, of Sutton, says, "I have yet to hear the first business man speak of the prohibition law except to say that it is a great help to business, and a great help in many other ways."

Mr. P. M. Snyder of the Bank of Mount Hope, says, "Our Bank has opened up approximately three hundred new accounts since the first of July, a very large per cent. of which came from the laboring class who formerly spent their money for booze."

Mr. John L. Roul of the Clarksburg Trust Company, says, "The drink money is finding its way into savings accounts." And so I could go on giving the testimony of numbers of prominent bankers and business men all of whom are delighted with the working of the new law.

It seems strange how slow people are in finding out that money won't buy boots and beer. But I am almost amazed at the taxpayers who cannot see that they are burdened with taxes to support the paupers and criminals and take care of the wrecks caused by the liquor traffic.

H. ARNOTT, M.B., M.C.P.S.

Underground Postmen.

Parliament recently gave permission to the postoffice authorities to construct a miniature underground tube railway for the purpose of conveying letters and parcels across London in half the time formerly taken. In two tubes, nine feet in diameter, little, electrically-propelled trucks will run and parcels and mail-bags will be stacked on them. The first postal tube is to be constructed between Paddington and the Eastern District Office at Whitechapel.

Driven by electric current, controlled by switches at intermediate stations, the mail trains will not need drivers. The will hurtle through the tubes at about twenty miles an hour, carrying the mails from point to point in half the time that motor-vans threading their way through traffic in the streets above would take.

Anthem Titles.

A certain Edinburgh organist, who "posts up" his Sunday service lists at the church door, had recently a very practical illustration of the risks that may attend the shortening of anthem titles. The late Dr. E. J. Hopkins of the City Temple wrote an anthem, "I Will Wash My Hands In Innocency."

The organist in his haste no doubt set this down as "I Will Wash —Hopkins," and was surprised when next day some wag sent him a cake of soap "to help wash Hopkins!"—London Globe

Dogs Help Germans.

Major Richardson states that the Germans, who for many years past have recognized the value that dogs were likely to be in battle as aids to their ambulance, and particularly as auxiliaries to their sentries and patrols, have at present about 6,000 trained dogs helping the troops on both fronts.

The Belgian People
Are Undisciplined
Children, He Thinks

ONE of the most interesting German pronouncements of recent days was the statement of the Teuton towards Belgium, made by the new military governor Gen. von Bissing, who, by the way, is the official who imprisoned Cardinal Mercier in the episcopal palace.

"The Belgians," said Gen. von Bissing, "are politically undisciplined children. They believe their liberation from German rule may come at any moment, and they are strengthened in their belief by French newspapers as well as by some neutral newspapers which continually are smuggled in.

"When, as frequently happens," continued the governor-general, "a favorable wind brings the sound of cannon to the city, the Belgians believe the longed-for day has come. On several occasions the very date for the return of King Albert has been set and no number of disappointments seem to crush the hopes of the people.

"We have had much trouble with the postal and railway officials. The former are being gradually won over to co-operate with us, but the latter feeling that the railways are an important adjunct of warfare—a conception which is quite true and justifiable—have generally refused to do anything to help us. They feel it would be unpatriotic and disloyal to assist us even though indirectly in carrying on a war against their own land.

"The Belgian civil courts," the general said, "still exist and they try ordinary cases of breaches of the law of the land. All crimes against soldiers or the military government are tried by so-called field courts, which are military courts presided over by German judges."

Gen. von Bissing left unanswered the question whether he believed that if Belgium, or part of that country, eventually became a part of Germany, it would ever be possible completely to Germanize the country, making it a harmonious portion of the German empire.

"I don't think that is a question I can answer at the present time," he replied.

Gen. von Bissing added that conditions in Belgium on the whole were as good as could be expected in the circumstances. Gen. von Bissing at first only made vehement gestures when asked that if in view of all that had happened, it was a political and military error to have invaded Belgium.

"Not to have marched into Belgium would have been a very grave mistake," he replied. "If we had not done so France and England would. Events long before the war made it apparent that some sort of an alliance existed between Belgium and France and England. The last named two would perhaps have found some pretext to make it appear that they were Belgium's allies and that they were not violating Belgium's neutrality, but they would have come. Germany would then have found herself in a position of greater danger. A strong state simply could not suffer itself to be brought into a position so highly disadvantageous. There was no other course possible for Germany."

Wanted a Soldier's Death.

"The man who dies at home doesn't know the pleasure of death, and I would much rather die here than in the most comfortable bed you could rig up at home."

This is what a dying Irish soldier in a rough field hospital at Ypres told Lieut H. R. Watson of the Highland Light Infantry.

The soldier came of a long line of fighting stock. His father died on the battlefield at Abu Klea (in the Soudan), his father's father at Isandlwhana (South Africa), his paternal great-grandfather at Alma, and his grandfather's father at Waterloo. An own brother fell in the Boer war at Glencoe, and another now lies wounded in a military hospital.

"I know I am dying," said the soldier, "but I don't mind. It's always our luck, and runs in our family like wooden legs. There is a joy in fighting that appeals to me, and I wouldn't miss this set-to for all the world."

The man's last words to his officer were: "Good-bye, old chap; you were my superior a day or two ago, but at death's door all men are equal."

HOUSEHOLD KNOWLEDGE.

Tartaric acid removes almost any iron rust blemishes and is an excellent article for removing yellow marks.

To clean lacquered brass wash it in hot water, using soap if necessary. Polishes should be applied to unlacquered brass only.

Potato balls which are salted in butter after being boiled are delicious. They should be served with a generous sprinkling of minced parsley.

When gilt frames or mouldings of rooms have specks of dirt from flies and other causes upon them they may be cleaned with white of egg applied with a camel's hair brush.

Should the knob come off a pan or kettle, a screw can be slipped through the hole with the head inside the lid. Screw a cork onto the protruding end. This knob will not get hot and can be replaced.

A little ammonia in a few spoonfuls of alcohol is excellent to sponge silk dresses that have grown "shiny" or rusty as well as to take out spots. A silk, particularly a black, becomes almost like new when so sponged.

Bran is much better to use for cleaning matting than soap and water. Tie the bran in a bag, dip the bag into clean warm water and rub the matting briskly with this, then wash it off with a cloth wrung out of warm salt water. This method freshens it up wonderfully.

Silver spoons or forks may be cleaned and brightened by leaving for several hours in strong borax water; the water should be boiling hot when the silver is put in. Silverware which frequently washed with ammonia water will need cleaning much less often and much work be saved.

The Mexicans serve their cheese in combination with peppers. For this the fresh green chilies are preferred. Choose fine, large ones; blister in a very hot oven, and peel off the outer skin. Cut each one down one side so that it may be spread out flat, and wrap it around a slice of cheese. Fry it in good sweet lard.

Half a dozen camphor balls placed in the silver drawer will do much toward preventing the silverware from tarnishing.

A Turkish stew is made of purlane and rice, boiled together and then seasoned with browned onions, pepper and salt.

If table linen becomes stained from candle drippings the wax can be removed by rubbing with a soft cloth moistened with alcohol.

Always empty any water left before boiling a kettle. Very frequently the flavor of tea is caused by using water that already has been boiled.

To renovate linoleum, mix equal parts of vinegar and raw linseed oil. After the linoleum has been washed, shake the mixture well and use it for wiping the floor covering.

To remove finger marks and other spots from white woodwork dip a very slightly moistened cloth in whiting and rub the stains very lightly. Change the cloth frequently, as fast as it absorbs the dirt.

SHE MARKED THE COIN

A clergyman tells a story of a worthy vicar in a rural parish, who had waxed eloquent in the interest of foreign missions one Sunday, and was surprised on entering the village shop during the week to be greeted with marked coolness by the old dame who keeps it. On asking the cause the good woman produced half a dollar from a drawer, and throwing it down before him, said—"I marked that coin and put it on the plate last Sunday, and here it is back in my shop. I knowed well them poor Africans never got the money."

To pick up little pieces of broken glass wet a woollen cloth; lay it on the floor where the fragments are and pat it. The little particles will adhere to the damp cloth.

War Review of the Week

ANOTHER week of the war sees no radical change in the relative positions of the opposing forces. Although, there have been some interesting changes of scene and a few sidelights which point to a terrific resumption of activities within a few weeks.

The German pressure on the Russian troops defending the approach to Warsaw has proven a flat failure and comparative quiet reigns in the region which for the past three months has seen the most desperate fighting in the history of the war.

Under cover of a violent attack at Bolimow, Gen. von Hindenburg got the major part of his forces away last week, and planted them in East Prussia, where he hoped by rapid action to bring about another Tannenburg in the East Prussian marshes. The Russians have, however, evaded the trap which was baited for them. They have retired to Lyck with a loss of 29,000 prisoners, according to Berlin's announcement. The Russians admit that one of their corps was not quick enough in retiring to avoid loss. At Lyck, a few miles within the German frontier, the Russians turned upon the pursuing Germans and inflicted "heavy losses" upon them. It would seem that the Russians do not intend to continue their retirement so far within their own territory as they did after Tannenburg. In the northern part of East Prussia, along the Memel, they are not retiring at all, but have an eighty-mile long front, from Niemen to Tilsit, where they are masters of the German flank. Once intrenched they will repeat the story of the Bzura-Rawka lines, where the more vigorously the Germans attack the better the Grand Duke Nicholas will be pleased, for the German losses are enormously greater than those of the Russians under such circumstances. The grand duke is following the same plan of campaign in the defiles of the Carpathians. In the vicinity of the Uszok Pass for two weeks the Russian army has occupied a strongly-entrenched hill position, in the attempt to capture which and clear the way to Lemberg the Germans have lost many thousands of men. Sunday's report from Petrograd says the Germans have abandoned their efforts, and have been forced back into the Wyszkow Pass. The Austrians farther west have had no luck at all, and during the past twenty-four hours another thousand of them have been captured, making 16,000 since they tried to cross the Dukla Pass two weeks ago. They are doing well however, in Bukowina, and claim to have re-occupied almost all the chief towns and captured many thousands of Russians. Vienna likes to read stories of that sort, and in this case there is at least a basis of truth in the report.

Along the western front the fighting has been confined for the most part to the Argonne forest country and to Alsace, where the German feat of invasion is greatest. Elsewhere artillery duels have formed the greater part of the struggle. Sunday's despatches, however, gave signs of a new phase which betokens German activity in advance of the approach of spring. On Sunday Berlin issued a statement that "to the north of Pont-a-Mousson we took the village of Norroy from the French, and captured Hill 365, situated to the west of that village. Two officers and 151 men were taken prisoners." The French official statement last night admitted the loss of Norroy, in these words: "In the region of Pont-a-Mousson we delivered counter-attacks against the enemy, who had occupied Norroy, and who had obtained a footing on the neighboring heights. The struggle still continues." The bridge at Mousson over the Moselle is one of the chief means of entering France from German Lorraine. The river there is very narrow, and several important roads through a difficult hill country converge upon Pont-a-Mousson. The French have been working their way up the left bank of the Moselle toward Metz, and a few weeks ago were so close to German territory that they were able to bombard Arnaville, almost within the circle of the defences of Metz. Norroy, which the Germans have now taken, is fully six miles farther than Arnaville from Metz, and is on the left bank of the river, a short two miles from Pont-a-Mousson. Artillery planted on the range of hills southwest of Norroy would command the principal road between the Moselle and the Meuse, south of that from Metz and Verdun, which is still in the hands of the Germans. If the Kaiser's troops can maintain their hold upon the hills around Norroy they will greatly interfere with the French communications in a region where there is a very large force of men to be fed and provided with ammunition.

In the meantime, the eye-witness with the British forces reports the increasing superiority of the allies' artillery over that of the Germans, and military observers look for a general advance of the French, British, and Belgian troops in March. Reinforcements continue to pour into the reserve lines, among them the advance guard of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, which at last accounts was at Rouen.

Britain has taken prompt action against the submarine blockade. On Friday, Feb. 12, thirty-four British airmen set out against Zeebrugge, Ostend, Blankenburghe, and Bruges. All of them German submarine bases, and on their return reported having done great damage.

The Turks have again been met by British troops, this time at Tor, away down on the Gulf of Suez, near the southerly end of the Sinai peninsula. The Turks were completely annihilated.

WOMAN'S BEST MEDICINE

Mrs. Kelly Advises all Women to Take "Fruit-a-Tives"

HACKERSVILLE, Ont., Aug. 26th, 1913.

"I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good and I cannot speak too highly about them. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollar's worth, but it was money well spent because they did all that you claim for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other laxatives, that I found only pleasure, as well as health, in taking them. They seemed to me to be particularly suited to women, on account of their mild and gentle action, and I trust that some other women may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" after reading my letter, and if they do, I am satisfied the results will be the same as in my own case".

MRS. W. N. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THAT KNITTING CRAZE.

How Providence Conductor's Wife Helps.

Just how far-reaching is the knitting craze is seen in the following tales from Providence, R.I.—

One of the prominent society women identified with the commendable relief work said that as she was riding on a train bound for Providence a few days ago she seized upon the opportunity to do some knitting. The conductor smiled as he stopped to punch her ticket, and said: "You are doing a good bit of work. My wife is knitting in the same cause. She has a box in the hallway of our house and everybody who calls is requested to put as many cents in that receptacle as compares with the size of the stocking worn by the contributor. She asks no questions. It is a matter of honor with the donor. They may put in eight or nine pennies, when perhaps they ought to deposit ten—if she should make the mistake of dropping in 25 pennies my wife would not take it that she was wearing a No. 25 stocking—either the donor would be charitable to that extent, or she might be ingeniously concealing the size of the boot she wore; that is a touchy point with some women to whom nature has been overlavish with regard to length and breadth of feet."

"Do men knit?" replied one of the earnest workers in the Belgian cause. "They do and they make no pretense of concealing the fact. In the South Station at Boston, one day this week, I saw a member of the Salvation Army industriously engaged on a stocking. Apparently he was waiting for a train and was taking advantage of the spare time in knitting a few rows. He was an adept for the needles were plied with celerity and certainty. Meanwhile, he was observing all that was going on about, indicative of years of experience in the art of knitting.

He's Back at Work Strong and Hearty

One More Splendid Cure by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Quebec Man Who Suffered for a Long Time from Kidney Disease Finds a Complete Cure.

Allen's Mills, Portneuf Co., Que., Feb. 22. (Special)—Another splendid cure by Dodd's Kidney Pills is that of Michael Gauthier, a well known resident of this place. Mr. Gauthier was for a long time a sufferer with a pain in his head caused by kidney disease, and at length got so bad that he had to quit work. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him. He is back at work, strong and hearty, and naturally he feels that he wants all who suffer from kidney disease to know that they can find a cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

For Dodd's Kidney Pills not only cure the pain or ache that is causing the most distress, they put the kidneys in good working order and all the impurities and poisons are strained out of the blood. The result is that new strength is carried to every part of the body. That's why so many sufferers cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills sum up their condition, "I feel like a new man." New energy is new life. You can't have it with sick kidneys. With healthy kidneys you must have it. Dodd's Kidney Pills make healthy kidneys.

SKI ARMIES.

Snow Corps Are Playing a Large Part In the Present War.

Since the last great European war a new fighting force has been formed by nearly all the continental powers—the ski corps. Skis, of course, have been used for military purposes by the northern tribes of Europe for centuries, while as far back as 1326 Norway had an efficient ski army. But it was not until winter sports became popular in Switzerland some years ago that the use of skis in war was considered at all practicable. The Swiss were the first to raise a ski army, and they were quickly followed by both Italy and France.

Much of the Alpine territory of both these two countries is impassable during the winter, and in many parts it is only by the aid of the skieurs that communications are kept open during seven months of the year. Germany and Russia, too, have since organized ski armies, the former using them largely for outpost duty in the Black Forest. In equipment the ski corps closely resembles the ordinary infantry, with the exception that the men's clothing is, perhaps, warmer, and that, in addition to their rifles, they are provided with spades and axes with which to cut roads if necessary.

But it is for outpost and despatch work that the ski corps will probably prove most useful. When other means of communication fail owing to heavy snow, the skieur can, says Country Life, by attaching himself to a horse by means of a whiffle-bar, cover long distances at a great speed. Both the French and Swiss ski corps are trained to accomplish forced marches in this way.

In times of peace the ski corps of Europe have performed many remarkable feats. A column of Swiss ski infantry is able to traverse thirty-seven miles of Alpine territory in a day, while Capt. Bernard, of the French Ski Corps, accompanied by twenty-five men, equipped with ammunition and supplies, ascended the cols Arsine and Colleret in sixteen hours.

The Czar's ski troops, too, are thoroughly efficient. In Finland some Russian skieurs, in full marching order, took twenty-nine days to cover 890 kilometres, while ski troops alone are able to traverse the mountainous country of Armenia in severe weather.

A BOGUS MORTAR.

A German Ruse to Deceive the Allies' Aerial Scouts.

If all German plots came out as they are intended, the war in Europe would be over by now, or, in any event, the map of Europe would be a very different thing from what it is.

A FAKED GUN.

The accompanying snap-shot shows one of the German General Staff's devices to fool airmen. It is a bogus mortar made from a farmers' cart and a canvas barrel and painted to look like a real weapon. From a few yards on the level it deceives nobody, but it is said that for a very brief time aerial scouts counted the "stage" guns as real ones when engaged on a rapid survey of the enemy's force in any particular area. That the German generals permitted a correspondent to photograph it shows that the usefulness of the device was short lived.

German Pigeon Service.

For years past a sum of $15,000 a year has been set aside out of the German military estimates for the upkeep and development of a pigeon service, and nearly 200,000 feathered messengers were available at the beginning of the war for military service. Beyond these army pigeons, all trained birds belonging to civilians, even the pets of schoolboys and schoolgirls, are carefully registered and numbered, and may be commandeered by the War Department at any time.

New Ships Ready.

Three "destroyers of destroyers," like the famous Arethusa and Undaunted, are now officially recorded as completed for the British navy, the Caroline, Cordelia, and Penelope. Two others, the Calliope and Comus, formerly described as "building," are now "completing." Six new torpedo-boats destroyers have been put into service.

Heligoland a Failure.

Herr Ballin, the managing director of the Hamburg-Amerika Line, who is a personal friend of the Kaiser, has expressed the view that Germany must admit that the position of Heligoland does not give the German fleet a desirable base.

ROYAL YEAST
MAKES PERFECT BREAD

IN THE RIGHT PLACE.

If the world seems hard and selfish sometimes, it is because we see only the surface. Underneath is the warm, generous heart that responds instantly when the right chord is touched. Not long ago a little lad was brought from a city hospital to a seaside hotel to gain back some of the strength lost in a hand-to-hand struggle with death. An automobile accident had made him a mere wreck of a boy, but skilful surgery and careful nursing had restored the physical framework to comparative soundness. But though the broken bones had knit, there was little flesh to cover them. With his big eyes, hollow cheeks and wasted body, the lad was an almost uncanny little object.

He had been confined to his bed so long that he was finding it necessary to learn the art of walking all over again.

There were many beautiful children at the hotel—chubby, dimpled, full of bewitching gay spirits. But that frail little lad with his gnome-like face and almost helpless limbs was the centre of attraction. From the time his chair was wheeled out on the porch in the morning, till he was taken indoors for his early bedtime, he was surrounded. Benignant old gentlemen cut funny pictures out of the newspapers and brought them over to his chair, feeling fully repaid for their effort if a ghostlike smile curved the lad's pale lips. Children brought him shells and pebbles they had found upon the beach. One little girl who had purchased a toy balloon insisted on tying it to the arm of the convalescent's chair "so it can keep you compa'ny," she explained with a charming, winsome smile. There were always volunteers among the older lads to wheel the chair down the board walk, relieving the tired mother who looked almost as much in need of a rest as the boy himself. Cynical people who liked to talk about the selfishness of the world would have found it difficult to explain why for a whole summer a sickly little child should be the centre of interest in a constantly changing community bound to him only by the tie of sympathy on the one side and need on the other. And the explanation is that under the crust, the heart of the big world is in the right place after all.

SWALLOWED THE MONEY

Cattle are not usually so fond of money as their human friends but a story comes from Holland township, which goes to prove that at least some of the cattle kind have a decided liking for filthy lucre. The other day the Holland township tax collector, who, by the way, is a farmer, went out on his rounds and collected some six or seven hundred dollars in taxes. When he returned home, he happened to leave his coat, in the pocket of which he had deposited the tax money, hanging for a few minutes over the back of the cutter in the barnyard, where a number of cattle were running at large, and while he was gone one of the animals chewed off and swallowed the pocket of the coat, and also the money. What happened that animal we did not learn but we are fairly safe in saying that after it swallowed the "swag," it was worth more dead than alive and we can only make a conjecture as to its fate.

THE TOWER OF LONDON.

The terrible tower of London, which has become a grim tradition and a museum in the face of modern progress, was suddenly shifted back into its atmosphere of tragedy and bloodshed when Carl Hans Lody, the German naval lieutenant, convicted of being a spy, was shot to death by a firing squad on the morning of Nov. 6th last. This ancient structure, unrivalled in the history of the world because it has been so crowded with dramatic events, with this enrolment on the great war record, in all probability has not seen the last of present day executions. But one thing modern progress has accomplished—it has robbed the doing to death of the condemned of much of the old gloomy horror that was lighted only by the hideous flash of the axe. The bullet has much to recommend it over the blade.

The history of the tower shows that death and the preparation for it were made as terrifying and implacable political hate and the ingenuity of torture could make them. Harrison Ainsworth, Reynolds, and other romancers have taken its grim records as a groundwork for fiction that transformed the cluster of ancient buildings into a place of mystery and death—its turreted outlines standing against a fading sky with the shadowy fatality of the fabled castle of the ogre who feasted on the bodies of men and women.

Old and New Death Method.

The headsman has gone his way, and the block is only a museum object in the minds of those who read. Compare the execution of Lody to some of those that have moved painters and romancer.

It was extremely businesslike —no spectacular accessories, no strikingly pictorial groupings, none of the mediaeval awesome atmosphere. Simply a firing squad lined up at 7 o'clock on a foggy morning; a clean shaven young man sitting in a chair facing it with clear blue eyes which disdained the bandage that would have shut out the flash of death; a volley, following which the relaxed body slid from the chair, and all was over save for the undertaker's wagon that came a half hour later and took the body to a pauper's grave. This within a few rods of where Mary Queen of Scots, Anne Boleyn, Lady Jane Grey, and other celebrities bowed before the last summons.

Poor little Lady Jane, only seventeen years old at the time of her death, one of the blackest tragedies of the old fortress! The date was Feb. 15, 1554. She was the Queen of England for four months, through the plotting of her ambitious father-in-law. For this Queen Mary cut off her head. Delaroche has immortalized on canvas the tragedy and also contributed an intensely tense moment to the story of the princess in the tower, made familiar to most of us by the appealing interpretation of the great Millais.

Tradition has it that on the eve of the death of a crowned head the wailing shadow of Mary, Queen of Scots, appears in the tower. With even more opposition might arise great Caesar's ghost, for the chronicles tell that the Roman invader erected the first building on the storied site. It was called "Arx Palatinum" and was constructed under the direction of the Emperor himself.

Begun by William the Conqueror

The tower had been continuously in the occupation of English monarchs for 836 years, when its building was begun by William the Conqueror. It really includes twenty towers, but it derives its accepted name from the prominence of the large square tower in the middle. It is a combined fortress and prison, covers thirteen acres, and is an independent municipality.

A residence is still maintained there for the King, although never occupied by him. And there is a room, fashioned before the time of high powered guns, intended as a refuge for the monarch in case of hostile invasion. The most conspicuous evidence of the royal standing of the tower, however, lies in the fact that it is the repository of the crown jewels.

The Bloody Tower, with its creepy dungeons underneath, were thrown open to the public for the first time last year. It received its name from the murder of the Princes Arthur and Edward at the behest of their uncle, Richard III. Prior to its opening the visitors, stirred by the remembrance of the tragic story, had to content themselves with a look at the tablet which marks the spot, in the nearby White Tower, where the bones of the princes were discovered after centuries.

In the Bloody Tower, too, is the famous torture chamber of the old prison, the walls of which were painted with representations of men bearing and inflicting terrible tortures. From the upper window of the tower one can enter the so-called Constables' gardon, where Sir Walter Raleigh was allowed to take exercise.

Buried Alive.

The underground cells are as deep as the Tower Moat itself, and many of them were specially constructed with a view to the torture of the inmates. One of them is called "Little Ease."

It is a cell so small that it was impossible for a prisoner to stand up or lie down in it except in a cramped position. Another was called "The Pit."

It was a frightful place into which little light came and prisoners were scarcely better than buried alive.

It was on April 3rd, 1875, that the Tower of London was first thrown open to visitors, so that nearly forty years had elapsed before the Bloody Tower was placed on view.

In Salt is a quaint drawing on the wall of the zodiac, the work of one, Hugh Draper, of Bristol, imprisoned there as a sorcerer in 1561.

None of these parts of the fortress, however, is equal in interest to the White Tower, where Raleigh was confined, where Richard II. took refuge during the rebellion of Wat Tyler, and where the Duke of Clarence is said to have met his death in a butt of Malmsey wine.

This tower has been open to the public for many years, and thousands have looked at the axe with which the Earl of Essex is said to have been beheaded, and the block at which Lord Lovat knelt on Tower Hill to receive the fatal stroke.

Where Raleigh Wrote.

The White Tower is the oldest part of the grim prison. It was built about 1078, and the first prisoner was Ralph Flambard, or Firebrand, who escaped through a window.

It was strengthened by Edward III. who imprisoned there, among others, David, King of Scotland, and John, King of France, and his son, Philip Raleigh is said to have been imprisoned in one of the rooms on the first floor during the time he wrote his "History of the World."

In the light of present events this venerable fortress takes on an interest to students and statesmen such as it probably never had before in the eyes of the world. It is the symbol of the iron will to whom Death is merely a willing time-saver and the first entry on the record of to-day would not have been made, it is said but for the unshaken insistence of Lord Kitchener.

It is told that certain members of the Cabinet favored a life term for Lody, but "Kitchener of Kartoum," realizing that the most drastic action was necessary to meet the spy menace, which was so stirring the country, insisted upon death. So this otherwise inconspicuous subject of the Kaiser goes into history along with a most distinguished company.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Bradley's Health—Her Own Statement.

Winnipeg, Canada. — "Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. They found that my organs were affected, and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in.

"After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper, and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 284 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can.

Why will women take chances or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Baby Eczema Becomes Chronic

Causing Great Suffering and Anxiety —Prompt Relief and Cure by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

This is one reason why every mother should know about Dr. Chase's Ointment, since it is an unfailing cure for all itching skin diseases.

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes:—"My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad, and nothing seemed to do her much good. Hearing of the remarkable cures Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now, and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend this preparation too highly."

Here is another letter, which tells of the cure of a five-weeks-old baby: Mrs. Wallace Islington, River John Road, Colchester County, N.S., writes: "My little girl took eczema when she was five weeks old. Though we doctored her until she was nearly a year old, she got no better. I was advised to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this treatment completely cured her."

Hatred of Russia Is Baron Burian's Dominating Idea

TO explain the retirement of Count Leopold Berchtold as Prime Minister and Secretary for Foreign Affairs in the Dual Monarchy of Austria and Hungary and the appointment of Baron Stephan Burian to the post needs no confidential insight into the affairs of the Emperor Francis Joseph and his people. A weak man has fallen; a strong man has taken his place.

Berchtold is one of the most charming and amiable men in Europe. Coming of an ancient family of Austria, possessing large estates in Hungary and a member of the Hungarian House of Magnates, married to a daughter of the illustrious Carolyi family, Berchtold had every advantage of birth, wealth, and influence.

Berchtold has obtained without effort every honor which has led up to the highest to be coveted—that at the head of the Cabinet. He never had to fight for anything. In this war, in which every nation engaged in it is fighting for its very existence, but most especially Germany and Austria-Hungary, with their backs to the wall before such a combination of armies and statesmen as history has never before known, Berchtold has not been equal to his difficulties.

Berchtold is succeeded by a man of sterner fibre. Burian, whose title of Baron is still almost "brand new," emerges from the middle class, the first representative of the plebeians ever allowed to enter the sacred doors leading to the high office of Prime Minister. His career has been a gigantic struggle for recognition at Vienna—intellect and force of character battling against the hitherto impregnable fortress of lineage which the Hapsburgs erected around the administration of their affairs in their chief capital many hundreds of years ago.

He was born sixty-four years ago in the County of Pressburg, Hungary, of a wealthy mercantile family, with large business interests at Moscow. There, as a young man visiting his kinsmen, he suffered with them the humiliation of seeing the widow of one of the men of the Burian firm lay the enormous fortune she had inherited from her husband at the feet of the Grand Duke Nicholas, the present generalissimo of the Russian army. Baron Burian, a cool-headed, calculating statesman, is a fanatic in his hatred of Russia.

He was given in his youth every facility which money could buy to fit him for his present position. He studied at the Pressburg Gymnasium, going from there to the Diplomatic Academy at Vienna, which accepts only students who have left the Gymnasium with honor and which furnishes all the recruits to the diplomatic service of the Dual Monarchy. His first appointment was an attache at Alexandria, Egypt, going from there to Bucharest, and then to Belgrade. He has been consul-general at Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, and minister to Greece. His ability was unquestionable, but he owed his entrance into the actual diplomatic service to his marriage, his wife being the daughter of Baron Geza Fejervary, Minister of War in Hungary for twenty years and for a few months in 1905 Prime Minister, a famous general also in Francis Joseph's army, commander of the bodyguard regiment of the Emperor, and for fifty years the sovereign's most trusted confidential counsellor.

Burian's advancement after his marriage was rapid. He became Minister of Finance for the Dual Monarchy, a position which made him automatically Governor of Bosnia and Herzegovina. Up to a few days ago he was the diplomatic representative in Vienna of his native Hungary and as such a member of the Emperor's household.

"TIPPERARY" IN BRAID SCOTS

"It's a Lang, Lang Way tae Auchtermuchty."

[This parody is by Rev. W. Parton Shinton, of Gravesend, and will no doubt be much appreciated by the "kilted laddies" at the front, as well as by all the Scottish soldiers who are so splendidly upholding the ancient renown of the regiments in the firing-line.]

Up tae feckless London came a Hielandman lang syne;
As the Southrons were a wee bit saft he prospered fine;
Kept awa' frae Piccadilly, Strand, an' Leicester Square,
Stickit tae his wee bit chairge, forbye his hert was sair.

It's a lang way tae Auchtermuchty,
It's a lang way tae Perth,
It's a lang way tae ge. tae anywhere
Frae anywhere else on airth.
Guid-bye tae Ballachulish,
Farewell but an' ben;
Its' a lang, lang way ta. Auchtermuchty,
But I'll gang back again.

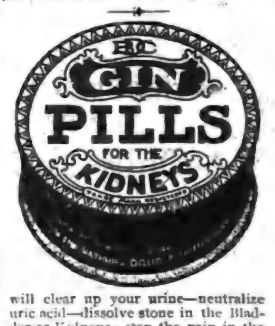
Sandy sent a wee bit screed tae tell the lass he loo'ed
"O' the kiltie laddies a' the Empire's michty prood.
If my letter should be longer, Kirsty, said he,
"Remember that I'm somewhere wi' my rifle on my knee." (chorus.)

Kirsty wrote an answer maist becomin' in a lass,
Sayin' "Censors ken nae Gaelic, sae they'll let it pass,
Stay and finish fechtin' for auld bonnie Scotland's fame,
I'll never marry ye until the Belgians get back hame." (chorus.)

SUEZ CANAL.

Built By French, It Later Passed Into Hands of British.

It was 45 years ago Nov. 17 that Ferdinand de Lesseps, the builder of the Suez Canal, in company with Empress Eugenie of France, began the voyage on the Aigle through the canal followed by 68 vessels of various nationalities. It took them three days to reach Suez, at the eastern end, and the canal was then formally opened to the maritime trade of the world. The new canal was only 8 meters deep with a bottom width of only 22 meters. Vessels could pass each other only at widely separated crossings and in Great Bitter lake. Passage for vessels drawing more than 23 feet of water was impossible, and for vessels drawing 20 feet it was tedious, owing to the danger of grounding. But the canal at once became a great boon to commerce. For the first time the great storehouse of Indian wheat could be drawn on by Europe for bread, for, on account of the tropic heat and the weevil, wheat could not be shipped by way of the Cape. The canal company charged 10 francs per ton toll. Though in 1870 500 vessels used the canal, it failed to pay expenses and continued to run behind for some years. The canal from the beginning was neutralized, but in 1888 representatives of all the principal nations of Europe met in convention and formally ratified the neutrality. Great Britain reserving the right to declare that this neutrality should not interfere with her control of Egypt.



To-day the canal has undergone great improvements. It has an average depth of 9 meters and a width of 65 meters at the bottom between Port Said and the Great Bitter lake, and from the lake to Suez an average of 77 1-2 meters. To make these improvements 100,000,000 francs were expended. Had they not been made within the last ten years, the Panama Canal would now take from the Suez Canal a great bulk of its trade. The Suez can now pass great steamers drawing a depth of 28 to 29 feet of water and with their searchlights they may easily navigate the canal at night and pass each other at many points. The passage is now effected in 16 hours. The improvements entailed an expense that caused the French Canal Company, a large number of whose shares were held by the Khedive of Egypt, to lose control of the canal to the British Government. The canal toll is now $1.26 per ton, the same as that of Panama. In 1912 5,378 vessels navigated the canal, the total receipts being 139,000,000 francs and the expenses 47,000,000.

Routed By Bees.

When the German army was marching on Paris, a company of soldiers stopped for lunch at a farm, midway between Nauteuil-Haudouin and Senlis. As is the German custom, they commenced by destroying the furniture, stealing the silverware, tearing the linen, and drinking all the wine found on the premises. Suddenly they spied a beehive. "We shall enjoy a bit of honey with our lunch," said one of the Germans. His suggestion was acclaimed with cheers, and several soldiers made a rush for the hive. A few minutes later the whole company was flying down the roadway, pursued by angry bees, and in their hurry to retreat from the zone of danger they forgot their booty.

A STRANGE COINCIDENCE.

When Charles McKnight, aged 70, a former shoemaker of Port Elgin, came to the House of Refuge here on Friday last to be admitted as an inmate, says the Walkerton Times, Keeper Wiles was flabbergasted at what he supposed was the impersonation of a dead man, for on the records of the Bruce House of Refuge, Charles McKnight, an old shoemaker of Port Elgin, had died in the House in 1899, the year the Institution was opened, and who Mr. Wiles now supposed was touching the harp in competition with Lazarus and those other good old souls, whose adversities here ensured them a place hereafter in the choir of the just. Knowing therefore that Charles was dead and one to his reward, Keeper Wiles apprised the stranger that a man of the same name, from the same place and of the same occupation, had gone before him, and was informed by the aged visitor that he was a son of Charles the First, and that as he had followed his father in name, place and profession, he would complete the chapter by passing the remnant of his days in the same way and under the same roof as his late lamented sire. Like the spook in Hamlet claiming that he was his father's ghost, so the newcomer at the Poor House seemed like an apparation of one who had gone before.

BROADWAY, ORANGEVILLE.

LOCAL LACROSSE HISTORY

Game Was First Played in Orangeville in 1876

Clubs and Players were Plentiful in the Early Days.

The Banner is indebted to Dr. T. H. Henry for an interesting sketch of lacrosse clubs and players from the time the national game had its birth in Orangeville down to recent years. The article, which contains a fund of information that will be prized by the followers of the great outdoor game, reads as follows —

Orangeville was for many years known far and wide as one of the hottest lacrosse towns in Canada. It is doubtful if there is another town of its size that has produced so many players of the first rank. It has had its own senior and intermediate championship teams and it has furnished players for such great teams as the Capitals, the Torontos and the Tecumsehs. There were few greater players in the olden days than Harry Ketchum, the Carsons, and Harry James, and modern lacrosse has never produced a headier player, a greater general or strategist than Ernie Menary. for years one of the mainstays of The Dufferins and subsequently Captain of the Torontos. It is true, unfortunately, that the grand old game has fallen upon evil days in recent years, but signs of a revival of interest are not wanting and it may be that in the not distant future Orangeville will again send forth a team that will worthily uphold the traditions of the past.

Lacrosse appears to have first obtained a foothold in the town in the year 1876. The first team bore the classic name of The Olympians. Prior to 1876 the favorite pastime of the town youth was "Raz on the Stick," in imitation of lacrosse. This game was especially popular with the younger element. Mr. J. J. Craig, now School Inspector for East Wellington and at that time Principal of Orangeville High School, appears to have been the moving spirit in introducing the game into Orangeville. On July 2nd, 1877, at the opening of the Orangeville Driving Park, what is said to have been the first important local game was played between a Guelph team and The Olympians. On July 14th of the same year an Owen Sound team defeated the Olympians on the same ground. A banquet was tendered the visitors in the evening and was attended by many prominent citizens.

The oldtime Mechanics' Lacrosse Club was organized at the Gordon House on July 4th, 1877 as a rival to The Olympians. The following were the officers :—

President—Wm. Parsons
Vice-Pres.—D. Livingstone
Captain—Thos. Mara
Secretary—Wm. Fountain
Executive—J. Brown, T. Middleton, R. Dryden, J. Wilkins, T. Bennett, W. Graham and M. Murphy.

At Bolton on Aug. 13th, 1877, the Mechanics played a draw game with the Standards, a Bolton team. After 1 hour and 47 minutes play the score stood 2 goals each. The game was then stopped on account of the darkness. On Aug. 29th, 1877, Capt. Bill's Six Nation Indian team defeated the Mechanics. On Sept. 18th the Bolton Standards played the Orangeians on the latter's grounds. There is an extract from one of the Orangeville newspapers which shows the popularity the game already enjoyed.

"Lacrosse is now the rage in Orangeville. The fever first originated among the adult population, but now the young urchin on the street has his club and ball and displays a wonderful amount of expertness in both catching and pitching. Baseball which was the rage two years ago has entirely succumbed to lacrosse—the national as well as the favorite game in Canada."

The following extract is from the same newspaper of Oct. 4th, 1877 :—

"The Mechanics of this town marched in a torchlight procession last Thursday evening to music supplied by the Union Band and played in the Fair Grounds (now Alexandra Park). The affair, which was fairy like and attractive, was witnessed by a large number of people. Lacrosse, popular as it is by daylight, has a charm about it by torchlight, which no other game possesses. The spectators on the grounds Thursday night must have gone off delighted and await a repetition of the scene with delightful expectation."

Some idea of the craze for lacrosse in those early days may also be formed from the following extract from the Orangeville Sun of July 4th, 1878 :—

"If the town of Orangeville had prohibition against the importation of lacrosses, a factory for their manufacture would be a paying institution. Young and old have one or more of them and girls of 12 or 15 summers use them just as dexterously as do boys of the same age."

On Wednesday evening, Feb. 7th, 1878, a meeting was held at the Gordon House to consider the amalgamation of the Mechanics and Olympics. The two clubs decided to unite and a new club was formed called the Orangeville Lacrosse Club. The officers were :—

Hon.-Presidents — John Fielder
Major Parsons.
President—Capt. Allen
Vice-President—J. C. Fox
Secretary—Wm. Fountain
Treasurer—Jos. J. Kelly
Captain—Jas. Anderson
Committee—F. E. Galbraith, Jas. Shaw, Jno. Brown and Jas. McIntyre.

On May 24th, 1878, Brampton defeated Orangeville by three straight games.

But these were not the only teams in Orangeville at this time. Two rival junior teams, the Wellingtons and Shawnees, battled it out on July 1st, 1878 before a large audience, the Shawnees being winners by a close margin.

In the year 1879 the Orangeville Lacrosse Club became the Dufferins, of Orangeville. Many games were played this year. One at Erin on July 1st with the Athletics, of Guelph, resulted in favor of the Dufferins by three straight games. At this time a team winning the first three games was the victor. Sometimes it was a short match, but more often very long. On July 20th the following players represented the Dufferins against the Maples, of Guelph, winning a hard game by a score of 3 to 2 :—

Goal, P. Foster ; point, A. Kelly ; defence field, T. Mara, J. Aiken, A. Collins ; centre, J. Wilson ; home field, J. Legate, H. McKenna, H. Gillespie ; outside home, J. Anderson ; inside home, W. Cooper.

During the year a famous junior team, "The Young Hanlans," came into existence and developed such excellent players as Ward House, Bill York and Sam McElroy. On July 12th, at Owen Sound, the Silver Leafs defeated the Hanlans by three straights. On Aug. 13th, the Hanlans defeated Brampton Excelsiors by three straights on Orangeville ground and the following week at Brampton were defeated by 3 to 2. On Aug. 2nd, 1880, the Young Hanlans again defeated Brampton by a score of 3 to 1 and the Dufferins were beaten by Mt. Forest on Aug. 18th by 3 to 1.

In the following year the Young Hanlans' officers were :—

Secretary—J. Neelands
Treasurer—J. Gahan
Captain—W. Robinson
Committee—I. Curry, S. Kennedy and W. House.

On July 20th Brampton defeated the Hanlans by 3 to 1. On July 1st the Dufferins were beaten by the Iroquois Indians by 3 to 2. Dufferins played in Guelph on May 24th, 1882, winning by 5 to 0. On July 1st of the same year they played a long and hard game with the Toronto Maitlands, winning by 3 straights in 41 minutes, 20½ minutes and 1 hour and 8 minutes. On Aug. 9th the Dufferins won in Barrie and on Aug. 31st played Brampton on the latter's grounds for the championship of Western Ontario. Brampton won by a score of 3 to 2. Young Hanlans played in a Tournament in Shelburne for a purse of $100 and defeated the home team by 3 straights. No other team showing up they received $60.

Among other junior clubs at this time were "The Young Harkaways" and "The Lornes." The latter Club had for officers :—

Captain—T. H. Henry
Secretary—T. C. West
Treasurer—Hugh Carson

On June 17th the Lornes defeated the Liberals, of Brampton, by 3 straight games. On May 24th, 1883, at Fergus, the Dufferins defeated Arthur by 3 straights for a silver cup presented by the Fergus Turf Club. On June 18th The Grays, of Shelburne, were beaten by The Dufferins by 3 straights.

The new grounds opposite Squire Pattullo's residence were formally opened on July 1st, 1883, when Orangeville's junior team "The Chippewas" was beaten by the Victorias, of Brampton, by 3 to 2. The Dufferins, however, atoned for the defeat of the juniors, by winning from the Tuscarora Indians. The Chippewas took a jaunt to Fergus on July 20th and secured the scalps of a Fergus team, called The Canadians, by 3 straight games. On July 1st The Dufferins won from Elora on Elora grounds.

On Aug. 17th The Chippewas defeated Fergus at Orangeville by 3 straights and on Aug. 27th were defeated at Brampton by The Victorias. In September The Dufferins again defeated Elora by 3 to 1 and The Chippewas administered the quickest defeat on record to the Aetnas, of Georgetown, in 3 straight games. The actual playing time was less than one minute. Dufferins played in Brampton for a challenge cup on Oct. 20th, but lost by 3 straights.

Other junior teams which came into existence and achieved a measure of prominence in those early years were The Silver Stars, The Tannery team, or R. H. Robinson's team, and the Station team. In the following year all these junior aggregations were merged into the best junior team Orangeville has ever had—the Junior Dufferins. During the year three of these juniors—C. R. McKeown, Army Munroe and T. H. Henry—were given places on the senior team. On May 24th Fergus defeated The Dufferins by 3 straights and on July 1st The Dufferins won from Brampton by 3 to 1. The latter was T. H. Henry's first game with the seniors. During this year another junior aggregation, The White Elephants, came into existence and carved out a reputation for themselves by defeating The Puzzlers, of Shelburne, in their first game. This organization comprised such players as the Menarys, Irvines, Kearns, Henrys, Ketchum and Geo. Carson, who later on became prominent in The Dufferins during the nineties.

In 1885-86 The Dufferins fought many hard battles on the lacrosse field, winning some and losing others. Many attempts were made to lift the challenge cup held by Richmond Hill, but they were all unsuccessful. All games were played on the grounds of the Club that held the cup. 1887 was a red letter year in the history of The Dufferins. In this year the Canadian Lacrosse Association was formed and to the Dufferins fell the great honor of being the first C.L.A. Champions. They first won the old Northwestern district, composed of Shelburne, Fergus, Owen Sound and Orangeville, and then defeated The Stars, of Bright, and The Young Torontos in the final games. The playing members of the champion team were :—

Goal, Jack Ashenhurst ; point, Jack Aiken ; coverpoint, H. James; defence field, J. McGuire, N. Linn, A. Jones ; centre, W. Kearns ; home field, J. Thompson, B. McGuire and R. H. Robinson ; outside home, H. Grimis ; inside home, T. H. Henry ; captain, A. Kelly.

In 1887 the rules were changed, and the winner was the team that scored the most games in two hours playing time.

During succeeding years The Dufferins won the District Championship several times. In 1889 they defeated Brampton for a silver cup in Owen Sound. Hugh Carson was a member of the Junior Dufferins, but moved to Shelburne when quite young and therefore did not play with the senior Dufferins. George Carson and Harry Ketchum played their first game with the seniors in Streetsville in 1889 and Ernie Menary his first game in Mount Forest in 1891. In 1892 the district championship was won by The Dufferins after a hard game with Fergus in Grand Valley. The season of 1893 ended disastrously Fergus defeating Orangeville's best team in a final game at Harriston. In 1897 The Dufferins again captured the intermediate C.L.A. championship after a series of hard fights both on and off the field. The champions were all home players and one of the youngest teams that ever carried The Dufferins' colors to victory. The members of the team were :—

E. Menary, Fred Menary, Jack Henry, Tiny Henry, Walter Henry, Bert Henry, Jack Kearns, W. E. Irvine, J. A. Irvine, Wes. Island, Adam Clarridge, Jack Telford, Jack Irving, Larry Hay, Baker Hamilton, Fred Dowling and V. Armstrong.

Next year the team entered the senior C.L.A. series and, after a successful season, met with a disastrous defeat at the hands of the Orillia team on the Rosedale grounds in Toronto. 1901 was another season of notable triumphs, closing with the memorable game at Toronto Island, when The Dufferins defeated St. Catharines, thereby winning the senior C.L.A. championship and the coveted Globe shield. The names of the officers and players of the champion team are as follows :—

Officers—H. Gillespie, J. N. Fish, Jasf Armstrong, Dr. T. H. Henry, C. R. McKeown, J. W. Aiken and W. G. Kearns ; Field Captain, A. Jones ; Players, E. A. Menary, C. Shore, A. Clarridge, W. Kearns, H. Goodall, J. T. Hatcher, F. S. Dowling, Bert Henry, J. A. Irvine, G. H. Campbell, J. M. Kearns, W. E. Irvine, W. Swain, A. L. C. Kirkwood.

Other well-known players who were in the limelight about this time included R. Bawie, Art Snell, A. Foucar, Jack Dowling, Jack Carmichael, Paddy Kelly, Geo. Donaldson, Billy O'Brien, Ed. and Will McIntyre.

Since 1902 and 1903 lacrosse enthusiasm has largely died out in Orangeville. The town has not been represented by teams of the calibre of the famous twelves of bygone days and there has been nothing like the old time interest taken in the game. Orangeville has turned out many great players, who have brought honors to their home town and also to teams elsewhere in Ontario and in Western Canada. They are scattered far and wide, many of them have crossed the Great Divide and most of them are well-night forgotten in the place of their birth, save by the older residents who followed their fortunes and applauded their prowess on the lacrosse field. Orangeville has had no better advertisement than through the enviable reputation it achieved as a great lacrosse town. In the early days the professional spirit was not so rampant as it has since become. More of the young men remained at home than nowadays and more of them played lacrosse purely for the love of the game. It is perhaps largely to the spirit of professionalism that must be attributed the decadence of the game in the smaller places. The inducements held out by the city teams have drawn the best of the players from the smaller towns and made it difficult for the towns and villages to maintain teams at all.

War Review of the Week

THE submarine "blockade" of British shipping, which began officially on Thursday, Feb. 18, absorbs the attention of the public almost to the exclusion of the land operations. As a result of the German Admiralty's campaign by torpedo and mine several ships have been sunk, including two Norwegian freighters and on Friday the U. S. steamer Evelyn, laden with cotton for German factories and bound for Bremen. On Saturday, also, the British steamers Downshire and Cambank were torpedoed, probably by the same submarine. The operations thus far show that while the Germans are scoring, they are securing only trifling results compared with the boasts they have made. It is proven that their underwater craft can only harm very slow ships or those lying at anchor. British shipping shows scarcely any diminution since the campaign began.

Sir Edward Grey, in a full note to Washington, in reply to the protest of the United States over the detention of contraband shipments, intimated that Britain would make reprisals on the German submarine campaign, and that she would cut off the shipment of food supplies from Germany.

The first phase of the German submarine campaign will be a thorough submarine hunt by the British and French fleets. It is said that they have a surprise for the under-water craft. During the war there has been probably enough time for experts to devise suitable means to combat them.

The reprisals of Britain will include the shutting of Germany from the rest of the world, so that complete, instead of partial, paralysis will set in. "It was the British blockade of the coasts of Europe a hundred years ago that finished the career of Napoleon. Food will be declared contraband of war. Enemy's goods in neutral ships will probably be confiscated.

The attempt to force a passage through the Dardanelles was resumed on Friday and continued on Saturday by a strong squadron of battleships, battle cruisers and light cruisers, including the battle cruiser Inflexible, the eight 12-inch guns of which recently helped to send Von Spee's squadron to the bottom of the Atlantic off the Falkland Islands. Other big-gun ships engaged were the battleships Vengeance and Agamemnon, each with four 12-inch guns; the Triumph, mounting four 10-inch and fourteen 7.5 guns, and the French battleships Suffren and Bouvet, mounting four 12-inch and two 12-inch guns respectively. In addition, the Bouvet carries two 10.8 guns. These great ships, with twenty-two 12-inch guns, and six others of 10-inch calibre or more, hammered away at the forts for the better part of two days, and for a time brought into play also their numerous 6 and 4-inch guns.

The British Admiralty reported that Friday's bombardment had silenced the forts on the European side of the Straits.

From time to time since mid-November attempts have been made to force a way to Constantinople through the Dardanelles, not merely in the hope of striking a decisive blow at Turkey by the capture of her capital, but to enable the export wheat crop of southern Russia, which has been lying at Odessa and other Black Sea ports since October, to reach the outer world. It is asserted that considerably over a hundred million bushels of wheat, greatly needed in western Europe, would be released at once were the British and French warships to win in the duel with the forts. But that is only part of what victory would mean. Russia is extremely short of military supplies, which reach her now chiefly through the far northern port of Archangel and across Siberia from the Pacific.

The operations on the eastern front have assumed a gigantic scope and will be eagerly watched for some weeks. The points of greatest moment are northeastern Poland and the Carpathians, where with huge forces the Austro-German armies are endeavoring to crumple up Russia's 700-mile line. Von Hindenburg's lightning movement east into East Prussia, and the succeeding southerly stroke seems to have lost most of its momentum. The German battle front extending for 200 miles from Augustowo to Plock is confronted by several great fortresses, chief among them is Novo Georgievsk, which the German field marshal wants for a base of operations against Warsaw. His desperate efforts there have resulted so far only in a decisive defeat to the Uhlan cavalry, leaving the German flank exposed, and now the Russians are giving battle at Przasnysz, where the Germans are all prepared. The probability is that instead of seizing strong positions as he had hoped to do and thereby being able to release a large army to reinforce the west, Von Hindenburg will be compelled to die up a huge force in Poland for the spring. In the Carpathians, the Austro-German army of about twenty army corps has forced the Russians to evacuate Bukowina, but seems to make no headway at the Wyszkow Pass. Here again the enemy are in far greater force than the military advantages of victory justify and there seems no probability of their being able to release any men.

All of which has a strong bearing on the situation in the western theatre. Early last week the French War Office announced a complete series of successes at half a dozen points on the line, notably in the Champagne country, where a vigorous effort is in progress to dislodge the enemy. Sunday bulletins announced a big gain at Perthes.

THE ASTROLOGERS' FORECAST.

Planet That Figures Primarily In the Horoscope Is Saturn.

Several prominent astrological students have compared notes of their calculations, and all agree that the European war will come to a close in the spring. These men do not belong to the professional coterie of stargazers, but are sincere students of many years' standing, and their opinion is wholly unprejudiced and without bias.

The planet that figures primarily in the horoscope of the war is Saturn. This is the most malefic and unfortunate of all the planets, and in an individual's chart or the chart of a country Saturn raises havoc when ill placed. The proof of this is shown by the fact that since the latter part of July, 1914, Saturn has been passing through the second half of the celestrial sign Gemini, which rules Belgium. It is unnecessary to comment on what has occurred in Belgium. Saturn is now retrograding 2 degrees in Gemini, so that Belgium will still have her troubles, but within a short time Saturn will pass out of Geminin and go into Cancer.

Cancer rules Germany, and the unfortunate Saturn therein will lay a strong hand on the German empire and the allies will be pressing her hard. Just at this time the great benefic Jupiter will enter Pisces in fortunate aspect or triangle to Saturn, and this is the time when overtures for peace can be expected. This will occur between the latter part of February and the middle of April, and events will so shape themselves as to make Germany anxious for the cessation of hostilities.

One astrologer figured the date as Feb. 22, but several of the other students thought this too early and look for peace in April. In the meantime no decisive battle will occur, and the same seesaw game will continue, being a mere wearing out process.

It will be interesting to follow the course of events in view of these predictions, which have been carefully calculated.

IN A GERMAN PRISON.

Lonsdale Is Not Likely to Serve His Twenty-Year Sentence.

That Germany's hate for England is tempered by a wholesale respect for her striking arm is evidenced by the change from death to twenty years' imprisonment in the sentence passed on Pte. William Lonsdale, who while a prisoner in Germany struck a German officer. Lonsdale was made the victim of a brutal assault by an officer who charged him with shirking work. Lonsdale struck the officer in the chest with his fist and was promptly court-martialled and sentenced to ten years in prison. Prussian militarism did not feel that the sanctity of an officer's person had been upheld and the Englishman was tried again and sentenced to death. A prominent German wrote a strong letter to the Socialist organ Vorwuerts, reminding the German people of their own sons in Britain, and the sacrosanct officer caste thought better of their action. The third trial resulted in the twenty-year sentence, and military honor was satisfied. The end of the war will see Lonsdale home again.

"Pretty Hot."

There is an unknown hero in the Gordons—a lance-corporal who saved scored of men's lives. The regiment had been ordered to take certain of the enemy's trenches at a point in Belgium, but wire entanglements prevented them being "rushed." Suddenly the lance-corporal came forward and volunteered to cut the wire entanglements. "Then we shall soon be able to take the trenches," he said. Under a perfect hail of shrapnel and bullets he went forward, cut the wires, and enabled our soldiers to clear out the Germans. "He seemed to bear a charmed life," says Corpl. Moore, of the South Lancashires, who tells the story; "and what do you think the beggar said when he got back? Why, nothing more than that it was 'pretty hot'."

Teetotalers Do Best.

That 80 per cent. of the men who had done great deeds on the battlefields were teetotallers was a statement made recently by Brigadier-General Hunter.

Prisoners To Sow Grain.

It is declared that the German Government intends to employ all the prisoners of war in sowing the grain in the spring.

NEW BELGIUM PLANNED.

Reconstructed Cities and Villages Will Represent Modern Types.

Plans are already under way on an international basis for the rebuilding of Belgium into one of the garden spots of the world. All the civilized nations will be invited to contribute ideas for the erection in the devastated cities, towns and villages of Belgium of model homes, which, while preserving as much as possible the picturesqueness of the buildings leveled by the guns of war, yet will exemplify the best examples of community building. A meeting of Belgians has been called in England under the auspices of the International Garden Cities and Town Planning Association to consider plans for the reconstruction of homes in Belgium.

"Church and home, public building and farmstead are alike laid waste, and, with the exception of a tiny corner, the whole country presents a scene of desolation which the world has not before witness," says the magazine published by the association.

"But to-morrow the Belgians are going back, and the homeless wanderers who are now finding sanctuary in Holland, France and Britain have to return to take up again the broken thread of their life. To go back as things are at present will be to increase the hardship and to create a new risk arising from the remnants of the war and the destruction of sanitary organization. It would seem not inopportune, therefore, for such an association as the Garden Cities and Town Planning Association to take the initiative in calling together the experts of the world to consider the replanning of the new Belgium."

Students of municipal planning in the United States are following with interest the attempt being made by high minded men and women of all countries to assist Belgium, not only with material means, but with ideas which, if they can be realized, will build a finer Belgium than the world has known. Incidentally it is noteworthy that the program of the international city planners takes no note of the German occupation of Belgium and assumes that the Teuton will not seek to impose his own ideas upon the scheme of Belgian rehabilitation.

VICTIM OF THE ZEPPELINS.

Little Denise Cartier a Typical Bomb Explosion Victim.

Count Zeppelin, upon whose celebrated dirigible airships the German General Staff counted so heavily, bids fair to go down to posterity as nothing more than a slayer of women and children. The several useless incursions into France have earned no military result for Germany, and have left only a surge of indignation among belligerents and neutrals alike. Typical of the victims of the Zeppelin is the little French girl in the accompanying snapshot, who lost a leg by a bomb dropped on one of the cities of northern France. The picture of the maimed child as being widely circulated in France, along with others depicting the results of the Zeppelin raids.

Cossacks' Terrible Attack.

The Russian Cossacks, who have already wrought havoc amongst the German and Austrian cavalry troops with whom they have come into contact, owe their success mainly to a form of attack which is peculiarly their own. It is known as the "lava."

Cossack horses are specially trained to carry out the manoeuvre.

The leading sotnia (squadron) spreads out to right and left, and the others, at full speed, form up on either side of it in a semi-circle or half-moon.

Every man with a lance is attended by a man wearing a sword, all the officers are in front of the men of each sotnia.

The other squadrons do not wait for a special order, but at once adopt the same formation, endeavoring to surround the enemy from another side.

With loud shouts reminiscent of the Red Indian war-whoop, the Cossacks rush down on the foe, and even though the first assault be repulsed, another "lava" pours down on the shaken enemy.

Celebrated Too Soon.

There was a fete of fireworks in Jerusalem to celebrate the report of the Turkish occupation of the town of Suez.

IN DREAD OF CROUP.

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses, at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

"MY LADY DARRELL."

Grand Valley Dramatic Club will Present Their Popular Play in Orangeville Opera House.

The Grand Valley Dramatic Club will put the popular four act melodrama "My Lady Darrell" on the boards in the Orangeville Opera House on Wednesday night next, March 3rd. The Play will be given under the auspices of St. Andrew's Church Ladies' Aid Society and should attract a bumper house. The Club carries its own scenery, which has been designed and painted by Mr. G. W. Jenkins, the manager. The players are experienced amateurs who take their parts capably and can be depended upon to present the Play in a pleasing and effective manner. The Grand Valley Club has already given the Play before crowded houses in Grand Valley and Shelburne and scored a big success in each place. The following are extracts from the comments of the two Shelburne newspapers:—

The Free Press:—"The members of the Grand Valley Dramatic Club scored a grand success in their presentation of the melodrama "My Lady Darrell," in the town hall, Shelburne, on Friday evening last, under the auspices of the Women's Guild of St. Paul's Church. As an incentive to the Club they were greeted by a full house, almost every available seat being occupied. This fact no doubt encouraged the players and they did their part with the vim and force of professionals. There were many difficult parts in the play and some exciting scenes."

The Economist:—"Shelburne town hall was well filled on Friday evening last to witness the presentation of the melodrama "My Lady Darrell," by the Grand Valley Dramatic Club, under the auspices of the Women's Guild of St. Paul's Church, the proceeds being between $125 and $126. "My Lady Darrell" is in four acts, and there are certainly no dull moments. Most favorable indeed was the impression made on the audience by the Grand Valley players. The strongest member of the cast was G. W. Jenkins, whose work as George Vaughan alias Count Jura, was really excellent. Mr. Jenkins also was the painter of the special scenery, which added not a little to the effectiveness of the presentation. . . . . If the Grand Valley Amateur Dramatic Club visits any other of the surrounding towns they should be greeted with full houses for their work deserves it."

St. Andrew's S. S. orchestra will furnish music between acts. Doors open at 7.30. Curtain rises promptly at 8 o'clock. Admission 35c and 25c. Reserve seat plan will open at The Banner Office on Friday at 1.30 p.m.

We Should All Be There.

There is never anything lost in an intelligent exchange of ideas. It is, therefore, to be hoped that everybody who can will make it a point to be present at the meeting to be held next Friday, Feb. 26th, under the auspices of the "Patriotism and Production" campaign that is being conducted by the Federal Department of Agriculture. It is not necessary to dwell upon the issues involved in the war, or even point out that with many channels of supply closed, there must be increased opportunity for those that are open. Nor should it be necessary to refer to the fact that whatever the conditions of things may be to-day, with a continuance of the war they must become more clamorous in demand in every direction to-morrow. It is impossible that consumption can proceed at a normal rate and production over half of Europe be tremendously reduced, without a call to other lands for supply. Prices fluctuate, but this one thing is certain, that increased demand for all kinds of foodstuffs must follow either upon prolongation or cessation of the war.

It is with this idea that next week's conference will be held, and whether dubious or not of the aims and objects of the movement, it is desirable that every farmer, every breeder, every man interested in production, should attend. It is also hoped that farmers will make application to the Publication Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, for the various bulletins, dealing each with a different subject of agricultural industry, that are being issued.

The Dufferin Theatre.

Beginning on March 1st the Dufferin Theatre will be open every week night. The manager, Mr. Leonard Tyrrell, is making a special effort to secure attractive pictures and patrons of this popular resort are assured of a good night's entertainment whenever they visit the theatre. There will be an entire change of program nightly.

Classes in Cooking.

About 60 of the ladies of the town are taking the domestic science lectures which Miss Gray is giving under the auspices of the Orangeville Women's Institute. The ladies are enthusiastic over the demonstrations and it is an open secret that several of them have already made successful attempts to test the results of their newly acquired knowledge upon the unsuspecting members of their households. So far the doctors have received no emergency calls, but we hear that Mayor Campbell and his colleagues in the town council are decidedly nervous as to the effect the "gallon a day" dictum is going to have on the water supply. Seriously speaking the Classes are proving very instructive and it is little wonder that the ladies pronounce them splendid.

"Greatly Exaggerated."

That the report of the death of Garfield Bailey, M.D., R.N., a former Shelburne boy, brother of Dr. N. G. Bailey, was, as Mark Twain would have said, "greatly exaggerated," is clear from the photograph we saw of him, this week, taken in London, and sent by him, under date of February 1st, to Mrs. H. Silk, of Shelburne. Garfield looks "quite a bit," in his uniform as a naval surgeon.—Economist.

A Song Service.

A Song Service will be given in the Baptist Church on Sunday morning under the able leadership of Mr. Percival Harding. Seats free and strangers always welcome.

Remember the Concert.

Don't forget the Concert "The Danger Signal" to be given in the Opera House to-night (Thursday) by the Old Caledon Dramatic Club. This is a really good Play and should be well patronized, especially as it is being given in aid of the Lord Dufferin Hospital and Red Cross funds. Admission 25c to all parts of the Hall.

Brampton Driving Club.

At the annual meeting of the Brampton Driving Club the following officers were appointed:—President, J. L. Clark; 1st vice, E. J. Jones; 2nd vice, John Patterson; treasurer, Aikin Dolson; secretary, John Speers. Directors—J. D. Orr, F. J. Jackson, Waldie Steen, Wm. Dennison, David McClure, S. J. T. McClure, Arthur Fletcher, Nelson Carter, David Arthurs, L. J. C. Bull, Dr. F. S. Hutchinson. The Spring Meet will be held on Saturday, May 29th. Good purses will be given for three races. A fall meet will also be held the date of which will be announced in due time.

John Greason's Death.

The death of Mr. John Greason, a widely known resident of Amaranth, took place at his home, lot 9, 4th line, near Laurel, early yesterday morning after an illness of only nine days. His death, which came as a complete surprise to most of his friends, some of whom had not even heard of his illness, was caused by pneumonia. The late Mr. Greason was 72 years of age and was born in Oakville. His pareats moved to Amaranth when he was about two years of age and settled on lot 9, con. 4, where he has lived ever since. About 45 years ago the subject of our sketch was married to Miss Eliza Hannah. His widow and a family of three sons and three daughters mourn the loss of a devoted husband and a kind, affectionate father. The sons and daughters are Robert and Hannah, on the homestead, Thomas and John, Mrs. Jos. Langtree and Mrs. Robt. Gray, all of Amaranth. The late Mr. Greason was a quiet mannered man, kindly in his nature and an excellent neighbor. He enjoyed the good will and esteem of the community at large and his widow and family have the sympathy of everybody in their time of sorrow. He was a staunch Orangeman, being one of the oldest members of Laurel L.O.L. No. 330, a member of the Presbyterian Church and a pronounced Conservative. He will be buried with full Orange honors, the funeral taking place from his late residence to Greenwood cemetery at 1.30 o'clock on Friday afternoon. A short service will be held at the house at one o'clock.

Mrs. Nelson Smith.

Mrs. Smith, wife of Mr. Nelson Smith, a onetime resident of Alton, passed away at her home, 9 Radford Ave., Toronto, on Saturday at the age of 70 years. She is survived by her husband and four daughters—Mrs. Will Galvin, Hamilton, Mrs. F. Spence, Mrs. W. J. McCormick and Miss Dell Smith, of Toronto. Mr. J. E. Smith, of this town, is a nephew. The family moved from Alton to Toronto about 25 years ago. The funeral was held to Mount Pleasant cemetery on Monday afternoon.

Joshua E. Leader.

Joshua E. Leader, a well-known resident of Shelburne, died at his residence on Andrew St., on Sunday, Feb. 14th, after about one week's illness from pneumonia. The deceased, who was in his 44th year, was a son of the late Joshua Leader, of Whittington, one of the early settlers of Amaranth. Mr. W. T. Leader, of Amaranth, is a brother and Mrs. McKibben, of Guelph, and Mrs. Durkin and Mrs. Campbell, in the West, are sisters. Mr. Leader's wife died a few years ago. He is survived by three sons, Clifford, David and Herbert, the eldest of whom is about 15 years of age. The funeral was held to Shelburne Cemetery on Tuesday following his death and was in charge of L. O. L. No. 1321. Service was held in the Congregational Church by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Higgins, who also conducted the service at the grave.

Now is the time to leave your measure for a good suit at J. D. Torrie's.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

George Tyner Meets With Sudden Death in Minnesota.

Mr. James Tyner, of Camilla, received word from Meadowland, Minn., on Monday evening of last week that his second son, George, had accidentally shot himself at that place and had passed away shortly after the unfortunate accident. Deceased formerly lived in Orangeville and was well and favorably known by a large circle of friends in town, who will be grieved to learn of his sudden death. Two brothers, Alexander and Alan, left for Meadowland on Tuesday morning for the purpose of bringing the remains home for interment. The body arrived in Grand Valley on Monday and the funeral was held from the C.P.R. station, interment taking place in St. Alban's Cemetery. The unfortunate man was 30 years and 7 months old. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the community in their hour of trial.

Thos. Harshaw's Death.

The death of Thos. Harshaw, the oldest son of the late Moses Harshaw, one of the pioneer settlers of Mono Township, occurred in Grace Hospital, Toronto, on Tuesday. Deceased, who was 73 years and 9 months of age, had been ailing for the last three months. He is survived by a widow, two sons and three daughters. One of the sons, Charles, is in the West, and the other, Victor, holds an important position on one of the Ontario divisions of the C.P.R. The daughters are Mrs. Wm. Maher, Mrs. D. J. Carson and Miss Georgina Harshaw, all living in Toronto. Postmaster G. H. Harshaw and Mr. John Harshaw, of Orangeville, Mrs. Adam Hunter, of Pilot Mound, Man., and Mrs. Robt. Galbraith, of Ellesmere, Ont., are the surviving brothers and sisters. The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon, interment taking place at Prospect Cemetery, Toronto.

ST. MARK'S CHURCH NOTES

His Lordship, the Bishop of Niagara, has written to the Rector stating that he will visit the St. Mark's congregation on the second Sunday after Easter for Confirmation and the Dedication of the new organ. A large confirmation class is being held on Tuesday evenings in consequence.

During Lent the Rector is preaching a special course of sermons. At the morning services the subject is "Things of Strength in National Life." On Sunday last the topic was "Religion." On Sunday morning next the topic will be "The Home." At the evening services he is preaching on the "Ten Commandments." On Sunday next "The Second Commandment" will be the subject.

At the Thursday evening services during Lent, illustrated addresses on "The Story of a Grain of Wheat" are being given. These are being largely attended.

A Successful Sale.

One of the largest and most successful auction sales that has ever taken place in Dufferin County was held by Mr. Jos. E. Dyer, lot 2, 16th line, East Garafraxa, on Wednesday afternoon of last week. There was an immense crowd in attendance and the bidding was decidedly spirited. Mr. R. J. Kerr, of Orton, was the auctioneer and disposed of everything in five hours.

A ROMANTIC MARRIAGE.

Forty-four years ago Francis Wagner and Miss Regina Connor were lovers in the township of Markham. Circumstances occurred, however, which prevented the realization of their youthful hopes and changed the whole course of their lives. Miss Connor became Mrs. Thornton, and young Wagner married his former sweetheart's schoolmate and friend. Time passed on and the affairs of life drifted the former friends to different parts of the Dominion, and their early years became but a dim recollection.

Last July when Mrs. Thornton's daughter, Mrs. McQuarrie, visited her sister-in-law at Eyebrow, Sask., on her way to Vancouver, B.C., she became acquainted with Mr. Wagner, who was a near neighbor of her sister-in-law. Social conversation disclosed to Mr. Wagner that his new acquaintance was none other than the daughter of his old-time sweetheart, who was a widow and lived in Creemore, Ont., and that her husband had died about the time his wife did some eight years ago. On learning the facts mentioned what more natural than that he should write to his old girl and arrange to visit her, which he did last fall. As an old coal is easily kindled, the renewal of the friendship quickly brightened into love again, and culminated in their marriage, which took place on Thursday last, just forty-two years from the day Mr. and Mrs. Thornton were married in 1873.

Mr. Wagner, who has acquired sufficient of this world's goods to enable him to live in comfort the rest of his days, has decided to spend the winter in the cozy home of his wife here, and in the spring they will go west for the summer and probably return here for the winter again. May their remaining years be peaceful and happy is the wish of all their friends.—Creemore Star.

STRUGGLE BRINGS TO LIGHT STORIES THAT ARE FULL OF HUMAN INTESEST

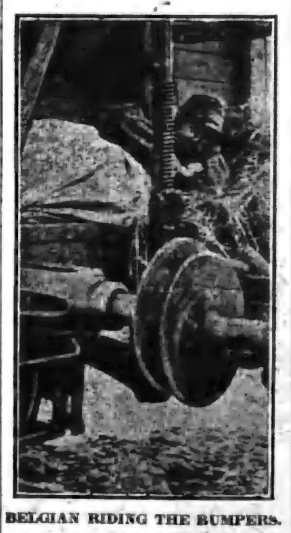
Belgian Woman Refugee Recognizes Her Husband in "Movey" Film.

Mother Thought It Cruel For Her Boy to Kill Another.

EVERY day there come to Canada stories of human interest, incidents of the European war. Some of the latest and best are the following:

Among the taxicabs plying their trade on the boulevards of Paris is a blue Renault riddled with bullets, which is driven by Jules Germain. He carefully refrains from patching these disfigurations, and to inquirers he shows an extract from the Journal official, in which he is mentioned in dispatches for an act of unusual courage.

When General Manoury determined to summon the reserves for the desperate effort which finally broke Von



TURKOS IN CAMP.

Kluk's army at the battle on the Ourcq he requisitioned 1,500 Paris taxicabs, in which he transported all the available reserves from Versailles to the firing line. Although Germain was not available for service as a soldier owing to a recent illness, his taxicab was among the number and conveyed as many as eleven soldiers a trip to the points menaced.

After his last trip on this service he was ordered to try to take to the hospital the wounded French soldiers lying in an exposed position between the French and German batteries. In a storm of shell fire and mitrailleuse bullets he drove his machine to the point indicated and assisted the wounded to enter it. Returning by a different route, he received the fire of the French riflemen, equally without injury to himself and his passengers.

SEES HUSBAND IN FILM.

During a moving picture show in Liverpool a Belgian woman refugee recognized her husband in a film depicting scenes in the Belgian trenches. The husband appeared in the picture to be in the best of health and spirits. As they had been separated early in the war and the address of each was unknown to the other, the woman tried frantically to obtain information from the theatre, and even wrote to the film agent, but the name of the place where the husband was seen had been deleted by the censor. The film company, however, promised to try to trace the matter through the camera operator.

MOTHER THOUGHT IT CRUEL.

Lucien Descanes, the French writer, received this letter from a young French soldier wounded and in the hospital:

"I am a corporal. On patrol duty I killed one Boche. I boasted of it to mother. She answered: 'I cried on reading your letter. Perhaps that German you killed had his mother, and perhaps he had a wife waiting for him at home. Couldn't you just merely wound the Germans. It would be quite enough.'"

SLAV CAPTURES BROTHER.

A Serbian captain writes to one of the staff of the London legation:

"One of my corporals, who hurried across from an Austrian border town as a volunteer at the beginning of the war, came hauling an Austrian dragoon before me to-day, his face wreathed in smiles. 'This is my own brother, captain,' he said. 'I told him before I left that he would be pressed into the Austrian army if he remained—and sure enough, here he is!'

"The dragoon was evidently friendly, so I did not send him back to Nish, but gave him in charge of his brother."

DIES SINGING "MARSEILLAISE."

A pathetic story is told of the death of a seventeen-year-old Alsatian boy in the hospital at St. Nazaire the other day. The boy had fought successively in Belgium, on the Marne and Ypres. At Dixmude he was wounded in the left thigh, right arm and other parts of the body.

The youth showed wonderful stoicism. When he was dying his mother asked him if, now that he knew what war was, he would be willing if he lived to undergo his sufferings again. The boy answered unhesitatingly:

"There is no doubt about it, mother."

He then bade farewell to all the other patients in the ward, thanked the nurses and died singing the "Marseillaise."

LIKE COMIC OPERA.

Telegraphing from a central point in northern France, a London Chronicle correspondent says: "Day and night the tide of war flows and back washes through this station just behind the fighting line, for by the railway armies feed or fall. Trains that laugh at the very mention of time tables creep out to the sound of guns and come back with broken men, who travel under the Red Cross.

"Everything passes through here—a letter from an English village to the trenches or a load of shells with our compliments to the Kaiser—and those who control the war can finger its pulse at this point. One shell dropped here could do more harm than a thousand fired into the trenches. The thought gives us some pride and satisfaction. It adds interest when we watch the sky for Taubes or Zeppelins.

"The armies of three nations send all their varied uniforms to give the platforms life and color. A train that stopped here this morning just to take breath tumbled out of one carriage to stretch their legs turbaned Arabs, red trousered plou-plous, zouaves, like an operatic chorus, and flat-capped sharp-shooters from the Alps.

"British Tommies sitting on the foot-boards of loaded horse boxes looked on the scene, and a little group of German prisoners behind Belgian bayonets sulked in the far corner."

PENS WHAT THEY SAY.

In the treetop I tried to set down on a piece of paper words that would stand for the sounds the shells were making. At the moment I thought I was cutting quite a literary dash, but upon later examination the results did not seem very brilliant. But they were the only results I had and as I had come across the ocean to get them they at least represented the expenditure of a good deal of time.

So here they are:

The shell said, "I am coming to get you, and I am coming to get you now." That part was in a kind of remote singing—hardly more than a murmur. Then a whistle crept into the singing, as if the shell were trying variants on the air.

Suddenly the tone became insolent and urgent. It was then that the chattering sound was audible. "I am coming to get you," said the shell, and added the highly improper afterthought, "Hang your eyes and blast your soul!"

The "you" was a favorite word, and on it the shell grew nasal and made it "yew," "yew," "yew." There were further objectionable remarks, partly concerning the liver, a word which the shell elaborated into "liverrrr," waxing guttural over it With a further hooting of "yoo," "yee," and with another reference to the liver, this time in a snarling manner, the shell abruptly closed the conversation with a prodigious bang in midair. It was a period punctuated by a million.

First Aid For Weak Digestion

Like Nearly Every Trouble Afflicting Mankind Indigestion is Due to Poor Blood.

Almost everybody experiences times when the organs of digestion show painful signs of weakness. Some slight disturbance of the health starts the trouble; then the patient takes a dislike to food and dull, heavy pains in the abdomen give warning that the stomach is unable to do its proper work. Sometimes a false craving for food arises; if this is satisfied the result is additional torture—flatulence, a drowsy depression, sick headache and nausea are common signs of indigestion. The foolish practice of taking drastic, weakening purgatives at such times should be avoided. Indigestion arises from stomach weakness and the only effectual method of curing the trouble is to strengthen the feeble organs of digestion by supplying them with richer, purer blood. This is the true tonic treatment, by which natural method Dr. Williams' Pink Pills achieve great results. These pills strengthen the stomach, thus imparting a healthy appetite and curing indigestion and other stomach disorders. Mr. Thos. Johnson, Hemford, N.S., says: "For five years I was a great sufferer from indigestion which wrecked me physically. I suffered so much that for days at a time I could not attend to my business. I had smothering spells so bad at times that I was afraid to lie down. I doctored and tried many medicines but with no benefit. I saw Dr. Williams' Pink Pills advertised to cure the trouble and decided to try them. I had not been taking them long before I found that I had at last hit upon the right medicine. The improvement in my health was constant, and after I had used ten or twelve boxes I could eat and digest all kinds of food, and I felt physically better than I had done for years. I shall never cease to praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for they proved a real blessing to me."

You can get these pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE SOLDIER'S DREAM

(By Thomas Campbell)

Our bugles rang true, for the night-cloud had lowered;
And the sentinels set their watch in the sky;
And thousands had sunk on the ground overpowered,
The weary to sleep, and the wounded to die.

When reposing that night on my pallet of straw,
By the wolf-scaring faggot that guarded the slain,
At the dead of the night a sweet vision I saw,
And thrice ere the morning I dreamed it again.

Methought from the battlefield's dreadful array,
Far, far I had roamed on a desolate track;
'Twas autumn—and sunshine arose on the way
To the home of my fathers that welcomed me back.

I flew to the pleasant fields traversed so oft
In life's morning march, when my bosom was young;
I heard my own mountain-goats bleating aloft,
And knew the sweet strains that the corn-reapers sung.

Then pledged we the wine-cup, and fondly I swore
From my home and my weeping friends never to part;
My little ones kissed me a thousand times o'er,
And my wife sobbed aloud in her fulness of heart.

"Stay, stay with us! Rest, thou art weary and worn!"
And fain was their war broken soldier to stay,
But sorrow returned with the dawning of morn,
And the voice in my dreaming ear melted away.

THE LITTLE GRAY KITTEN

By Mary L. Turnbull.

Once upon a time there was a little gray kitten which wandered far away from home. At first she liked all the strange sights she saw; but by and by she began to feel very much homesick, and wished she was once more cuddled up with her brothers and sisters.

Now the only word this little gray kitten knew was "mew." So when she was lonely she would say, "Mew;" when she was hungry, "Mew "Mew;" when she was cold or tired, glad or sad, it was always "Mew." At home they knew what she meant when she said, "Mew," but out in the wide, wide world nobody seemed to know.

Wandering along the street, she came upon a little squirming earthworm. "Mew," said she, meaning, "Where is my home?"

The earthworm, however, did not notice the little gray kitten, but crawled away across the street.

Next the little gray kitten met a butterfly on the top of a dandelion. "Mew," said the little gray kitten, meaning: "Can you tell me where my home is?"

But the butterfly did not say anything and flew away.

The little gray kitten walked on, and then she spied a robin on a stone wall nearby. "Mew," said the gray kitten, meaning: "Where is my home?"

But the robin, cocking his head on one side, answered, "Chirp, chirp;" and then, spreading his wings, flew away.

The little gray kitten felt very sad indeed; but running along, she came up to a big black dog. "Mew, mew," said the little kitten, meaning, "Oh, can you tell me where my home is?"

But the black dog shook his tail and barked, "Bow-wow, bow-wow, bow-wow!" so loudly that the little gray kitten ran away from him as fast as she could go.

The little gray kitten was very tired, but she still ran on, and soon met a big red cow. "Mew, mew-ew," said the little gray kitten, meaning: "Can you tell me where my home is?"

The big red cow, however, hardly looking at the little kitten, stretched out her big head and shouted, "Moo, moo-oo!" which so frightened the little gray kitten that she jumped over a fence and landed right in the middle of a flower bed. There she caught sight of a little girl running up to her, and with such a sweet smile on her face that the little gray kitten ran toward her and said once more, "Meow," meaning: "Do you know where my home is?"

"O you dear fluffy ball!" said the smiling little girl, catching the kitten up in her arms. "I'm going to take you right home to live with me."

The little girl was the only one who understood, and the little gray kitten purred softly. She was happy for she had found a home.—St. Nicholas.

INSTRUCT THE CHILDREN.

It is doubtful whether Protestant ministers, speaking generally, realize the opportunity they have to instruct the children in their congregations. It is a work which has no showy qualities. No matter how effective a man may be, in this direction, it will not impress the managers who make selections for their pulpits, unless it is brought home to them in some forcible way.

The general demand is for a minister who is regarded as a good preacher; one who can entertain, as well as instruct; one whose manner, and whose matter holds the attention of a congregation. But after all, the preaching is but a small part of the duty of a Christian minister. Personal contact with his parishioners ought to count for more than the best sermons delivered from the pulpit.

The Sentinel heard of a case, recently, which indicates the point we are trying to make. Rev. M. Terrill, of Sterling, Ontario, conceived the idea that the young folks of his congregation ought to be instructed as to the difference between Romanism and Protestantism. He called them together, and undertook to teach them the fundamentals of the two different systems of religion. His own testimony is that he was positively amazed at the interest excited in the children by this course of instruction. It was more attractive to them than a programme of singing or any other form of amusement or entertainment. They came eagerly to have these things expounded to them.

There is no reason to believe that the experience of Rev. Mr. Terrill is different to that which any other Protestant might meet with in his own congregation. Besides, there is altogether too little instruction of Protestants by their own clergymen, regarding the dogmas of Rome. We believe that the juvenile part of a congregation is the most important to instruct in this regard. While the parents and the older portion of the congregations might well find deep interest and great value in a course of lectures or talks upon such a subject as this, there can be no doubt that boys and girls who grow up under a minister who will thoroughly ground them in the essential doctrines of Protestant Christianity will be better men, more useful, and stronger to resist temptations that may come to them, to surrender their convictions at any time.

The example of Rev. Mr. Terrill is commended to the Protestant ministers of Ontario generally.—Orange Sentinel.

As Nervous as a Kitten—

"I woke up last Sunday morning feeling like a piece of chewed string," said a Travelling Salesman.

"My wife had my favorite breakfast ready for me, but I couldn't eat a bite. I was all shaken to pieces, and as nervous as a kitten.

"'Poor old Bill!' said my wife; 'you're all in, aren't you?' 'Yes, and then some,' I replied. Well, sir, she put on her hat and slipped out to the Drug Store—then she handed me a glass of something that put me right in 10 minutes. Now I wouldn't be without Turner's Invalid Port for a fortune."

Expensive Steak.

The highest known price ever paid for beefsteak was at Dawson City, a town that sprang up almost in the night during the Klondike gold excitement. The first steak to reach there sold for $48 a pound. It was a 10-pound steak and was sent from a point fifty miles away. It was placed on exhibition and was such a curiosity that all the miners turned out in a body to see it.

Of course everyone wanted a piece of the precious meat and the prices offered might have resulted in a general mining camp quarrel had not someone thought of raffling the steak for the benefit of a hospital which a bishop was trying to establish for the miners at Dawson City. Bids started at $5 a pound and rose quickly to $35. At last, in order to avoid possible trouble, it was decided to sell tickets at prices ranging from 50 cents to $2.50 for the privilege of drawing a slice. After $486 worth of tickets had been sold the drawing began, and to the relief of those in charge of the enterprise, no serious consequences resulted.

J. J. Carrick Appointed.

J. J. Carrick, M.P., who has been appointed an intelligence officer of the overseas expeditionary force, is one of the popular politicians of northern Ontario and one of the most energetic of the Conservative members in the House of Commons. He received his early business training at Sault Ste. Marie under the careful guidance of F. H. Clergue and controls big real estate interests in the west and at Port Arthur. He is president of the Carrick Company, Limited, and of the Great West Coal Co., and owns a tobacco factory at Winnipeg. He was mayor of Port Arthur for two years and sat for that town in the local Assembly.

He actively opposed the Taft-Fielding reciprocity agreement and was returned to the House of Commons for the Thunder Bay and Rainy River district at the general elections of 1911.

Mr. Carrick was born in 1873, and educated at the Kincardine High School and Toronto University.

Marine Engineers Enlist.

There are many fully qualified marine engineers in different parts of Canada, some of whom have already offered their services to the British navy. The Admiralty has just notified the Canadian Naval Service Department that these and any others who will offer will be accepted now. They will be enlisted as artificer engineers for the period of the war.

Memory Kept Green.

It is not often in these days that we find any real humor in the interrupters of political meetings. There are exceptions, however. "A man is soon forgotten after he's dead," said a speaker one evening. "Not if you marry his widow, guv'nor," cried a voice from the crowd.

His Medicines Proven Effective, and Always Kept at Hand in This Home.

Mrs. Chas. Lovell, Agassiz, B. C., writes:—"I feel it my duty to tell you what a great friend Dr. Chase's medicines have been to myself and family. I cannot praise his medicines too highly, and Dr. Chase's name is a household word in our home. Well, quite a number of years ago I sent to you for a sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment for protruding piles, and having used the sample and found relief, I sent to a neighboring town for four boxes, and I am completely cured.

"I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for constipation, and after using them, I am completely cured of this dreadful disease. I am the mother of ten children, of whom nine are living, and when seven of my children were all very bad with whooping cough, caught in the night of a severe winter, I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and they were all cured before the winter was over, and now we are never without Dr. Chase's medicines in our home, and I recommend them to all

GOOD ROADS.

The campaign for good roads being carried on throughout Canada is only part of the general awakening of the people to the causes which led to the enormous increase in the prices of the necessaries of life. That the transportation problem is all-important for the farmer-producer is without question. That he may at all seasons reach his markets at a minimum of time and expense is a necessary factor in the making of reasonable prices for his products. For the consumer, good roads have an advantage in the fact that by enabling the farmers to reach the markets in greater numbers, the supplies of produce will be larger, and competition will be keener. A further consequence of this larger attendance will be that more attention will be paid to the condition of the produce offered by those displaying it for sale.

In the present campaign for increased production, good roads will play an important part. Motor transportation is being rapidly developed and utilized by the farmers. By this means greater distances can be covered and farmers at a considerable distance from markets, with the advent of better roads, will be able to bring their produce to the consumer in larger quantities and at less expense.

Trailing a Herring.

We are told by the French agitators that the Governors of Laval University show exceeding generosity in allowing the English language to be taught in that institution. We doubt very much whether this is due to the love of the English or their language, but rather to the absolute necessity of their students learning English.

A university in Canada, or in any other part of the world, which does not teach English, is ridiculous. Queen's University, McGill University, Toronto University, all teach French as they do Latin, Greek, and other languages.

But this is not a question of universities. It is one which affects the primary schools. No person in Ontario would for a moment enter a protest against the teaching of French in the secondary schools of the province, and after that, through all the grades to the university.

We refuse to accept as a token of generosity the teaching of the English language in French universities. To raise such a point at all is an attempt to befog the question. We are dealing with the little children in the primary schools, who must gain a knowledge of the English language in their childhood or never get it at all. We understand that the French priests, who are the leaders of this movement, do not want their people to learn English. The more ignorant they are kept, the more tractable they are. And so, all these attempts to confuse the issue will prove unavailing. The people of Ontario know exactly what they want. They are no going to be diverted by side issues. Laval can do what it likes, but in the primary schools of Ontario, the English language is going to be the language of instruction and communication.—Orange Sentinel.

Co-Operative Gardening

Regina Business Men Working Out a Comprehensive Scheme.

Regina, Mar. 1. 1915.—A comprehensive co-operative gardening scheme is being worked out by a number of Regina's business men, who see in the present situation a great opportunity to supply garden produce in an advantageous market. A meeting of a number of these business men was held on February 15th and a committee was appointed with power to add to their numbers to ascertain what broken land was available for the purpose. This land will be sub-let in five or ten acre plots and men hired to plant and care for potatoes, beets, celery, carrots, and other hardy garden vegetables.

AGRICULTURAL CONFERENCES

Patriotic Canadians May Serve the Empire by Increasing Productive Capacity of Their Farms and Gardens.

Hon. Nelson Monteith and Other Speakers Addressed Public Meetings in Opera House on Friday.

It was unfortunate that the weather was so inclement on Friday as to prevent many of the farmers in this district from attending the Patriotism and Production Conferences in the Opera House under the joint auspices of the Federal and Provincial Departments of Agriculture. These Conferences are being held at different points for the purpose of giving the farmers an opportunity to meet and confer upon the best methods of doing their share toward meeting the new situation and responsibilities which the war has created. As it was the meetings were rather slimly attended, but those who had the good fortune to hear the speakers were delighted with the tone of the addresses and the practical manner in which the problems that are engaging the attention of the farming community were discussed.

Rev. G. W. Tebbs, who occupied the chair at the afternoon meeting, pointed out that it was the duty of every true Canadian to help the Empire in the present emergency. This Canadians could do by sending men to the front and by developing the production of the resources of the broad agricultural areas of this great "granary of the Empire."

Mr. A. R. G. Smith, of New Hamburg, President of the Waterloo County Board of Agriculture, discussed the duty of the Canadian farmer to the Empire as regards the cultivation of his farm. Mr. Smith took the position that as a soldier's first duty is obedience to those in authority, so should the farmer consider it his duty to do his best to carry out the orders given by those who had made a careful study of the conditions and needs of the present moment. Farmers were specially urged to give due attention to the ground already prepared for crops rather than try to increase the acreage under crop. Special attention was directed to the importance of using seed that was perfectly clean and of known origin. Mr. Smith emphasized the need for exercising care when buying seed, discussed the Seed Control Act and explained the standards of Seeds demanded by the Act. Alfalfa should not be planted without knowing the source of the seed. Mr. Smith recommended the German and Ontario variegated. The reason that there was so much weed growth on farms was largely due to the fact that seed grain had not been properly cleaned for small seeds. These were often not taken out of the grain owing to the use of old or defective fanning mills. Some of the later makes of fanning mills were equipped to remove the worst of these weed seeds, but many of the worst seeds were difficult to detect and to remove, particularly from oats. Oats from the northwest were blamed for many of the weeds which are now found on Ontario farms. Unless farmers were more diligent in demanding and seeing that they got clean seed and unless they exercised more care in cleaning and preparing seed they would be obliged to pay the penalty in dirty farms. Naturally the farmer who had weeds on his farm could not hope to reap the same returns as the farmer who kept his land clean and looked carefully after his seed. Mr. Smith strongly advised the use of timothy and alsike when seeding with clover to ensure a catch. The clover seed being offered this year was likely to prove disappointing on account of being largely imported seed. The corn crop, the speaker described as one of the most useful and successful that a farmer could grow. It served a double purpose, for it not only gave an abundance of excellent winter feed, but also furnished an opportunity to cultivate the land in such a manner as to almost certainly kill noxious weeds. This was due to the fact that to grow corn successfully it was necessary to work the land frequently, thereby continually stirring up the surface. This had the effect of killing the weeds before they could reach maturity and seed again. The speaker knew of no method of dealing with weeds that quite equalled corn growing. Even the old plan of summer fallowing was not to be compared with the growing of corn, for along with his corn crop the farmer secured a big crop of fodder in addition to the same beneficial effect upon his land as the summer fallow method would give. This was a most important consideration in these days, when the farmer should plan the working of his farm so that nothing would be wasted. As another substitute for the summer fallow Mr. Smith advised that the land be plowed up and fertilized and cultivated early in the spring and then sown with a mixture of oats, sugar cane or sorghum and red clover. This might be regarded as a strange mixture, but it would give excellent pasture during the season and the growth would make a valuable fertilizer when turned under.

Hon. Nelson Monteith, of Stratford, formerly Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, spoke at some length on the duty of the Canadian farmer in relation to live stock raising and general farming. Emphasis was placed on the Empire's need of the assistance of the Colonies in the present crisis. The speaker dealt with agricultural conditions in the countries now at war, pointing out the shortage which the war must cause. Each soldier's rations included 2¼ lbs. of meat per day, which would mean an enormous consumption of meat. The speaker laid stress on the value of silage for cattle feeding and advised farmers to build silos. Attention was also directed to the conserving of breeding females as a matter of prime importance. What Hon. Mr. Monteith said in the afternoon was along the same general lines as his evening address, which is more fully reported elsewhere.

Mr. H. A. Dorrance, District Representative of the Department of Agriculture, in a practical, straightforward address, urged the farmers to increase the production of their farms as a personal and patriotic duty. This they could accomplish by improved cultivation of the soil, the choice of better yielding varieties of grains and the selection of the best seeds. Mr. Dorrance pointed out how the District Representative could be of service to farmers in these matters. He algo dealt at some length with the question of corn growing and stated that farmers would find the White Cap, Yellow Dent, Wisconsin No. 7 and Wisconsin No. 12 the varieties best adapted to the soil and climatic conditions in Dufferin County. Farmers were advised to buy varieties that were known to mature early. Seed corn should be purchased in the cob only and all seed should be tested. Mr. Dorrance stated that farm labor was likely to be very scarce this year and advised those wanting assistance to secure farm help to make their applications early.

Mayor Campbell presided at the evening meeting. The speakers were Mr. A. R. G. Smith, Hon. Nelson Monteith, Mr. H. A. Dorrance and Mr. John Farrell, of Forest, Ontario Immigration Agent, in the order named.

Mr. Smith discussed the opportunity and duty of the Canadian farmer in relation to farm crops in much the same manner as at the afternoon meeting.

Hon. Nelson Monteith stated in opening that in its municipal system Canada had the best system of local self-government that the world has yet devised. The system in its present form he attributed largely to the foundation laid down by the United Empire Loyalists. It was a system that met practically every want and gave one of the most direct forms of self-government known anywhere. Members of township, county and town councils were responsible and responsive to the voice of the people. Touching on the live stock interests of Canada the distinguished speaker pointed out that the basis of successful agriculture depended upon the maintenance of soil fertility. By turning his crops into dairy products and live stock the farmer maintains the fertility of his farm and secures just as profitable returns as he could obtain by selling the grain off his land. Mr. Monteith quoted statistics to show that the increase in production of live stock had not kept pace with the increase in population. Where population had increased by 34 per cent. in the last ten years live stock production had only increased by 17 per cent. In ten of the great meat producing countries of the world population had increased 20 per cent. in ten years, but there had only been an increase of 4 per cent. in the production of beef. It was a matter of the first importance that the Canadian farmer should increase his live stock holdings and make an effort to meet the serious shortage in the world's meat supply—a shortage that was bound to be greatly increased by the demands and wastage of the war. Nor should the farmer in Canada overlook the production of horses. True, the prices were lower than in recent years, but they were high when compared with the oldtime prices in Canada. There were factors at work too which would tend to enhance the prices of horses. One of these was the demand for cavalry and artillery horses for the war and the other the need of more horses to till the large areas of land that would undoubtedly be brought under cultivation in the Canadian West during the next two or three years.

Mr. Monteith commented upon the falling off in sheep production, stating that the farmers of Canada had a half million fewer sheep now than 15 years ago. Speaking of the tremendous wastage of the war he stated that there were probably 20,000,000 men in the field. This terrible drain was bound to have a profound effect upon the productive capacity of the warring nations. It meant that a large part of the supplies formerly produced at home, would now have to be drawn from foreign countries and largely from this Continent. Even under normal conditions the countries of Europe were not able to produce enough to feed their population. In years of peace they had been obliged to import many foodstuffs. How much worse would be their plight now that they were obliged to depend more and more on the producer abroad. Canada was most favorably situated for the production of those commodities that Europe needed most.

The speaker pointed out that a difference in political ideals and aspirations lay at the root of the struggle between Great Britain and Germany. The difference between British and German ideals was very marked. In Germany the individual simply exists for the benefit of the State. In Great Britain on the other hand the state exists for the benefit of the individual. Citizens of the Empire who remain at home were in duty bound to support the hands of those who went into the trenches. Their duty had been pressed home by the Government in increased taxes, which every loyal subject should feel himself bound to bear without complaint. The citizen must be prepared to deny himself something in order to strengthen the hands of those who are furnishing the sinews of war. Two ways in which the Canadian people could render effective help were by increasing the production of their fields and practicing greater economy in their homes. Great Britain in the present war was engaged in a righteous struggle for the sanctity of contracts and the great principle that the individual has rights in the State. In preparing for the war and in the conduct of their campaign, the Germans had showed that they were practical, far-sighted and resourceful. They had made provision for almost every emergency that could arise. It was quite possible, however, that they had overlooked the affect the war would have upon their own productive capacity and the import of foodstuffs from other countries. The lack of food stuffs might prove the weak link in the great chain of preparedness they had forged. It might be the link that would break down and precipitate Germany into defeat. For the coming year at least the Canadian farmer should employ all the help he could, work his land to the very best advantage and make every acre produce just as much as he could. In this way he would be rendering a double service by furnishing employment where it was needed and by increasing the food supply of the Empire.

Mr. H. A. Dorrance, who spoke briefly, pointed out that townsmen could do much to forward the work of the present educational campaign. It was their duty and opportunity to pass along the word as to what is expected of Canada. It was the duty of townspeople who had gardens or vacant plots to see that these were made productive and thereby put to profitable use.

Mr. John Farrell, the last speaker, stated that it was the duty of the delegates to inform the Department of the needs of the districts they visit. He advised farmers to direct their energies toward increasing the production from the land already under cultivation instead of endeavoring to increase the area of cultivated soil. Intensive farming was what was most needed in Canada and it was the kind of farming that would pay the best. The speaker discussed the methods whereby the Department assisted immigration and gave instances to show what old countrymen were accomplishing on Ontario farms. In one case he gave figures which showed a net profit of $1766 from a 100 acre farm in Middlesex County. Mr. Farrell explained the methods of putting in applications for farm help, the efforts the Ontario Department of Agriculture was making to obtain suitable help in the Old Country and the difficulty of holding this labor in Ontario because of the lure of the West and its cheap harvest excursions. One plan proposed to meet this difficulty was to bring out entire families and place them in neighborhoods where they would be given steady work. 95 per cent. of the assisted immigrants had made good after locating in Canada. Mr. Farrell also discussed the steps taken to secure the investment of British capital in Canada and stated that the Department was prepared to send investors into any community where there was a dependable organization such as a Board of Trade or a Farmers' Club, which would look after the investor and give him reliable advice as to the nature and merits of the projects which were seeking investment funds. The speaker paid a glowing tribute to the energy, disinterestedness and patriotism of the Women's Institutes throughout the Province and stated that the Department was trying to associate itself with these Institutes and enlist their services in the matter of bringing out, placing and looking after little maids for domestic service.

The meeting was brought to a close by singing Auld Lang Syne and the National Anthem.

EATON'S SCHEME

To Get Ahead of the Post Office Department.

We understand that the T. Eaton Company had two men in town for a couple of days last week addressing and mailing copies of their spring and summer Catalogue. The Catalogues were forwarded to Orangeville in bulk by freight and then mailed to townspeople and farmers living within a radius of 20 miles from the Orangeville post office. When the parcel post regulations and rates were prepared they were arranged to prevent the big mail order houses from flooding the country with catalogues and other advertising matter at postage rates that would not pay for the carriage of such bulky matter. Two rates of postage were fixed for each province —one for parcels delivered within 20 miles of the place of mailing and the other for parcels delivered anywhere in the province outside of the 20 mile limit. It costs the T. Eaton Co. 6 cents to get each of its catalogues delivered inside the 20 mile zone. Each of them would cost 14 cents if mailed from Toronto to points outside the 20 mile zone, so the this rich Company is beating the Government out of 8 cents postage on the great bulk of its catalogues by the clever scheme it pulled off in Orangeville last week. This plan of distribution, we presume, is being followed elsewhere in the Province as well as here, so that the Post Office Department will likely be thousands of dollars behind and the T. Eaton Company thousands of dollars ahead. Every now and again we read in the daily press of some new evidence of the public spirit, the patriotism or the generosity of the T. Eaton Co. or its President, Mr. John C. Eaton. Patriotic it may be, but its patriotism will not help the revenue of the Country very much in this instance. It will be interesting to note what action the Government will take when this latest Eaton scheme is brought to the attention of the Post Office Department.

WITH THE CAVALRY.

Another Orangeville Boy Tells of Life at Salisbury Camp.

Miss Hazel Clarke has just received the following interesting letter from her brother, Albert, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Clarke, of Purple Hill. The writer is another of the Orangeville boys who enlisted in the first Canadian contingent :—

Lord Strathcona's Horse, R.C.
1st Troop, 'B.' Squadron,
Up-Avon, England.
February, 6, 1915.

Dear Mother, Father and Sister,—

I received your letter yesterday. I am always glad to get some mail from home. We get our mail pretty regular here. I got your letter two weeks after it was written so that was pretty quick work.

The weather has not been quite so bad of late, but we often get "a nice refreshing shower."

We are billeted in private houses and it is much better than sleeping on the damp ground. This house is the real old English style alright, with fireplaces in every room, which makes the house very home-like and cosy.

Three other boys and myself rented wheels last night and wheeled to a place seven miles off, called Devizes. We went to a show. It rained all the time on our way home, and of course we were soaked through, but the fellows who kept house had a good fire on in our room so we soon got dried. We often get invitations out for dinner. I am invited out to dinner next Sunday evening, but am not sure if I can get leave to get away or not. The Major is not giving out any more passes now but I have been off twice so that is not so bad. I went to London both times to see the sights. London is a big place alright with lots of noise. Almost all the lights are put out at night there and it is very hard to find one's way in the fog especially when one don't know the streets. I am sending a book describing London Tower. We were all through it. We also went to see Madame Tussaud's wax figures. We had lots of fun in that building. One of the boys in our bunch went up to the figure of a policeman that was standing near the door and inquired the way to a certain place. Of course he got no answer. It was so very lifelike.

They have wax figures of Napoloon, Charles I., Mary, Queen of Scots, and many others. We had no time to remain long in one building as we had such a lot to see. I met several boys from Dufferin since I came here. I saw Dug Endacott often and some Hamilton fellows whom I used to know.

Say mother, don't believe all that you see in the papers. They had it that we were in France a month ago but no such luck. It was rumored that we were going to Egypt, but haven't heard anything of that lately.

We call the other fellows "Gravel Crushers" as we are with the cavalry all the time.

We were reviewed by King George and Lord Kitchener about two weeks ago. The former passed quite near to where I had a good look at them. The King is a short man and rather stout.

Last week we were sent out as patrols. We were given slips of paper with a verbal description of a place on it and were told to find that particular place. When we return (perhaps after a five mile ride) we are supposed to be able to describe the soil, location as to rivers, altitude, etc., of that place. Of course the officers have this all studied out before hand.

We have all been given numbers now. Mine is 2788. This is to identify the men in case of there being two men of the same name or initials. Don't mention in the letters. There isn't much news to tell you but a little news is better than none I guess.

I am sending Hazel a picture of "The White Horse." It is the form of a horse that is cut out of chalk, in the chalk at Broad Town, Woffon Bassett. It was cut out by one man some fifty years ago. It is 86 feet long and 54 feet high. It is after the fashion of the one that was cut out in King Alfred's time in the south of England.

Well I must go on picket duty now.
Love to all.
ALBERT CLARKE.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

GRIPPING STORIES FROM ZONE OF CONFLICT IN EUROPE

Educated Men of England Have Answered the Call Nobly.

English Sergeant Writes to His Mother of Fighting the Turks.

EVERY mail that reaches this side from Europe brings heart interest stories of the great war. Here are some of the latest and best:

"Not a single light is allowed, and every one is prepared and waiting in case" — is a suggestive line picked from a letter received by a woman in New York from a woman in Sutton Vale, Sutton-by-Dover, Kent, England. The letter, which pictures conditions in Kent when the bread-winners are away at war, says in part:

"Phil has given up his holidays to working as orderly at our Red Cross hospital and is very happy to have something definite to do for his country even though it is only scrubbing steps, peeling potatoes, washing up and running errands. His heart is very sore about his age, and so is Dolph's, one too young and one too old.

BRITISH SOLDIERS ENTRENCHED IN A WOOD.

"It is terrible to see the sorrow round one. One of our friends has just lost his eldest son, only eighteen, and only seven hours at the front, killed at once. Another quite young girl has her husband wounded and missing, and no idea if he is dead or a wounded prisoner. One of her brothers is in a hospital in France, and the other is still fighting.

"The educated young men of England have answered the call to a man, and only those physically unfit in some way are left, and they are nearly all working at home. It is splendid to see the way every one pulls together. We have a naval brigade here now in which are blacksmiths, carpenters, university men with high degrees, master engineers, etc., all enrolled as ordinary privates together and living together in perfect companionship. Two of them were here the other day; both have belonged to the same firm, but one was master with a very high income, the other servant working at a lower salary.

"Now the servant has been made an officer and his master is serving under him as an ordinary 'Tommy.' We have not a single young man friend in England who has not joined, and nearly every young man of the working classes we know has also gone, for they, too, have responded splendidly. It is only the 'slackers' who are left, and they are much looked down upon.

"Here in Deal, although at present safe — thanks to our gallant navy, which has the terribly difficult part of always watching and seldom fighting —we hear the guns booming away in the distance and enemy's air craft and submarines keep making silent attempts. Not a single light is allowed and every one is prepared and waiting in case—

"We have 1,200 poor Belgian refugees and their plight is truly heart-breaking. No homes left, no possessions, and worse still is the family separation. One woman here has lost her nine young children, many wives their husbands. Saddest of all is the plight of many sweet young girls.

"We have talked to many wounded soldiers, and they are all such brave, cheerful, uncomplaining fellows, all very happy at being in clean beds again, but all ready to go back to the trenches again when duty calls, though the suffering must have been fearful, they having been literally up to their knees in mud and having nowhere to sleep except in the wet mud. There are so many cases of frost bite.

"We had a great day of prayer on Sunday. I think every man who fights in this war goes to it with a clear, clean conscience, for we gain nothing material in victory. It is entirely to keep honor and faith with those who trust us, and now, of course, also for the defence of our land, for if the Germans got here now Belgium would be nothing in comparison. Dolph is working hard patrolling at night, and he is also joining the home defence force, which means much drilling and shooting practice; so his time is very fully taken up."

FIGHTING TURKS AND ARABS.

Fighting the Turks and Arabs in the desert of Mesopotamia, where in places even camels cannot go, where after the Euphrates is left behind water is more precious than powder and the tribesmen show no quarter to the wounded, is described by Sergt. A. Kingdom, of the Second Battalion Norfolk Regiment, in a letter to his mother at Thetford.

"We came by ship (from India) up the river Euphrates," he writes, "and disembarked on a 'lovely' landing—up to the waist in mud and water. Not a tree in sight nor a blade of grass, except on the river banks, which are covered with date palms. We marched all the next day through mud. Anything with wheels cannot be taken, and packs of mules and camels are no good because their big feet pick up too much sand.

"We lay in the wet mud on the desert all night and moved away early again in the morning, to find the enemy in position. They consisted of Turks and Arabs, about 1,900 yards to our front. The attack was pushed home under cover of our mountain batteries; the field artillery came up later. The artillery horses were so completely knocked out that they could not walk away from the guns when unhooked. The troops also were knocked out, and in the meantime the enemy's artillery was having it all their own way.

"Our rifles were absolutely choked

WOUNDED FRENCH SOLDIERS.

inside with mud, and the bolt action and sights had to be made to work before an accurate fire could be effected. Some of the men, rather than drink the muddy slush from their water bottles, stood and emptied it in their bolt action, although water was so scarce and slush worth a gold piece an ounce.

"I was more fortunate, my socks had shrunk so small that I was better able to march without one, so I cut off the toe and put it over my bolt action. So my rifle was fairly clean. We were caked with clay from head to foot. When the sun did come out for a time and we saw a chance of cracking it off a thunderstorm came over and softed it into a sticky paste.

"Our only transport is mules with ammunition, and they frequently fall down and have to be picked up. Anyhow, the enemy were in their trenches with a decided advantage, and were delivering a murderous fire. But by a supreme effort after we got the enemy's range we kept out fire coolly delivered and within half an hour the Turks were retiring, leaving the Arabs to cover their retreat. They remained another quarter of an hour, and meanwhile we had fixed our bayonets for the grand finale, but evidently they did not wish to prolong their stay."

Some Biplane!

Germany has a new war biplane which, it is claimed, can remain in the air ten hours, carries a ton of explosives and four passengers and has 225 horsepower engines.

A Cat Brigade.

All stray cats in Lebanon and Damascus have been commandeered by the Turks to protect army stores from rats.

War Review of the Week

ALL scenes of land warfare have had to give way in interest this week to the epoch-making operations of the 123456 Anglo-French fleet against the forts along the Dardanelles. After centuries during which the "unspeakable Turk" has oppressed and lorded it over the Slavonic nations in nthe nether end of Europe, at last the time has come when it seems that he must surrender his cherished Stamboul, known to Europeans as Constantinople, the city of Constantine the Great.

Naval siege operations, the most gigantic ever undertaken developed last week into a crushing onslaught on the forts which guard the mouth of the Dardanelles passage. A fleet of vessels, not officially enumerated, but estimated at about twenty and including the great Queen Elizabeth of 27,500 tons and throwing 15-inch shells a distance of twenty miles. Indeed, there is a distinct possibility that all four of the Queen Elizabeth's sister ships laid down a few weeks after her, are part of the Mediterranean fleet for this special task. Thus far all the powerful forts at the mouth of the Straits have been reduced to ruins and occupied by landing parties with artillery a French cruiser on Friday penetrated fifteen miles into the channel and stayed an hour shelling the interior forts. Mine dragging has been carried on for a distance of four miles and the main fleet has advanced into the passage, where it is smashing the interior defences. The path perilous begins about fifteen miles eastward of the mouth of the Straits, where the waters separating Europe from Asia are only about a mile wide, and curve in the form of a rough S. Around this narrowest point there are nine fortifications on the European side, the largest of which is Kilid Bahr, which before the war had twenty-one Krupp guns of 21 to 35-centimetre calibre. On the Asiatic side are three well-armed forts, the largest being Kaleh Kalessi, with twelve Krupp guns of 35-centimetre calibre. The allied fleets will meet the greatest resistance at this point.

The ease with which the forts at the entrance have been reduced by the fire from the battleships, which they were unable to return because outranged, however, raises the hope that a similar fate will befall the defences at the Narrows.

The day on which the Dardanelles is forced will be the turning point of the whole war, sums up as nearly as a phrase may do the combined opinion of high military, naval and political authorities in London, and, to judge by the tone of the French press, of Paris also. It will mark the downfall of Turkish dominion predicted by Mr. Asquith. It will signify the total failure of those German ambitions which found concrete expression in the Baghdad railway. It will break the backbone of the German policy of communication through the Balkans and Constantinople with Asia, and will effectively counter the plans for the Turkish invasion of Egypt. Supplies of German munitions of war for the Turkish troops in Asia Minor will be cut off and those armies rendered impotent.

There is a change in the face of affairs on the eastern front. The German offensive extending over a front from Augustowo to Plock had one weak point, the area around Przasnys. The Russians attacked at that point and Saturday the announcement was made that the Russian forces had routed a German column. The Sunday despatches showed that the comparatively small victory had led to greater results than generally anticipated. The area of the Russian victory has grown steadily and the Germans have been compelled to retreat at several points. Almost the entire German line is reported to be now on the defensive. In the Carpathians the Russian armies have driven a wedge between the Austrian extreme right and the centre, cutting off a large body of men. Stanislau and Tolomea are in the hands of the Slavs once more. Were the Roumanians suddenly to make up their minds to jump in to the war the Austro-German army that recently marched so confidently through Bukowina into Galicia would never return home. Even without Roumania's aid, it may yet be cut off.

The French official statement shows that progress is still being made in the Champagne district, especially near Perthes. In addition to gaining quite a bit of ground, the French took two hundred prisoners. The Germans seem to be surrendering more freely now than earlier in the campaign. During the past ten days over a thousand German prisoners have been taken on the western front.

The Turks seem to have transferred their operations in the Caucasus almost entirely to the coast between Artvin and Batum. There they fight for a big prize. Were Batum to fall into their hands they would paralyze the great oil industry of the Caspian. The Russians say, however, that the Turks have been beaten off.

The serious invasion of German Southwest Africa has begun. Forces under Gen. Botha have landed at Walfisch and Luderitz, and have started on their march to the heart of the colony. They are advancing along the railways leading to the main line which traverse the country from north to south.

Other significant events of the week include the failure of the German submarine campaign materially to reduce British shipping. No losses were reported on Friday, and the British Admiralty, in a statement, said that 138 ships arrived and sailed from the British Isles in the week of Feb. 18-24, and that only seven were sunk by torpedoes and one by a mine.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

Particulars of Death of Geo. E. Tyner in Minnesota.

On Monday of last week George E. Tyner, second son of James Tyner, formerly of East Luther, was accidentally shot at Meadowlands, Minn., expiring almost instantly. For the last month George had been living with two chums M. A. Purcell and C. Anderson at Meadowlands, a small place about forty miles from Duluth. On the 13th he had been out shooting with his 44 Stevens rifle, and on the following Monday was completing a deal with Anderson for the sale of the gun. Anderson was inspecting the rifle, asking some particulars about the action when George reached across the table and drew the gun muzzle first, towards him. There was a deafening report and when the two terrified men picked George off the floor he was dead, the bullet having entered the left side just above the heart. The young man must have entirely forgotten that the weapon was loaded. The opinion of the coroner was that the hammer caught on the table. Purcell and Anderson wired home news of the tragedy, and, pending the arrival of Alex. and Roy Tyner, did everything possible to make the burden lighter for the brothers.

The remains reached Grand Valley on Monday noon, the funeral taking place direct from the C.P.R. to the family plot in St. Alban's cemetery, and was very largely attended especially by old friends of the family from Luther.

George Tyner was a splendid specimen of Canadian manhood, over 6 feet in height. For several years he ran a threshing machine in this section but for the last ten years has been in the West, where he held an engineer's certificate for Sask. Besides the grief stricken father and mother he leaves five brothers and one sister :—Thomas in B.C.; Alex., Roy, Victor and Allan at Camilla, to whom much sympathy is expressed in their tragic sorrow.—Star & Vidette.

MIRANDY ON MEN AND THE DOMESTIC ARTS.

By Dorothy Dix in Good Housekeeping Magazine.

"Bless Gord, dat I done live to see dis day!" says Sis Hannah Jane to me de odder arternoon when she drapped in to see me, as she retch out de tea-pot, an' poured de dreenings into her cup. "Dey done freed de nigger wid de wah, an' dey done freed de mule wid dese heah mobile wagons, an' hit looks lak dat woman was gwine to be freed at las'."

"Glory be for de hope," says I, "But whar's de wharforeness of yo' prognostications? "So fur as I kin see, things is jest a-rockin' along in de same ole odd-come-short way for our sect lak dey always is. Whut's done happen dat makes you think dat we is 'bout to grab hold of de tail-feddlers of de bird of liberty?"

"Why," says Sis Hannah Jane, "ain't you heard tell dat out dere in de West, at dat University of Minnesota, dat dey's teachin' all de boys how to cook an' how to sew, so dat when dey grows up dey kin git up an' git deir own breakfas', an' sew on deir own buttons, an' darn deir own socks, an' patch deir own britches, so dat deir wives won't have a thing to do but to go to de movin'-picture show an' de bargain sales, an' meander an' peruse up an' down de streets in deir good clothes?

"Talk 'bout de emancipation of our sect, of dis ain't hit, den what is hit? Whut's bein' freed of yo' political shackles to bein' freed from de wash-tub an' de cookin'-stove? Whut's de privilege of de ballot to de privilege of havin' a husband dat'll do all de fambly mendin'? I tell you, Sis Mirandy, ma'am, de glad day of freedom is a dawnin' for us po', pusecuted, down-trodden women, an' hit's comin' along of de sewin' machine route for men."

"Well, Sis Hannah Jane," 'spons I, "ever sence we sent Thomas Jefferson Abraham Lincoln off to college, an' me an' his pa wuked our fingers to de bone to pay for hit, an' all dat he come home wid wuz a college yell an' a fraternity pin an' two busted ribs an' de opinion dat he was ole man Solomon hisself, an' dat his parients wuz back numbers. I'se been kin' of suspicious of dat higher culchah. Hit looks lak to me dat hit don't take on jest ordinary folks, an' de odder kind ketch hit, anyway. But maybe dey's gwine to mix up de book larnin' wid some sewin' an' cookin', hit'll sort of take de course off of a college eddication."

"I tell you, Sis Mirandy," 'sclaims Sis Hannah Jane, "hit's a grand idee to teach men how to be handy aroun' de house, an' I jest loves to think of dat class of earnest-eyed young men hein' taught how to wa'k de colic an' fix de baby's bottle, an' havin' hit proned in on deir youthful minds dat you don't wash a baby lak you does a setter-pup. Why, Sis Mirandy, ef my husban' was to undertake to wash my little 18-inch Snowdrop, I makes no doubt dat he'd soap her all over wid mange soap, an' den tar her by de years an' ruse her down into de tub, an' den set her out in de sun to dry.

"I tell you, Sis Mirandy, I ain't never dast let deir pa lathe none of my chillun, 'cause he handles a baby jes' like he was a sack of potatoes, an' he's des' as liable to hit' hit's head down as his's feet, but, thank Gord, all of my chillun is dat dark complected dey don't show dirt, so dey can wait until I gits time to wash 'em myself."

"Amen," 'sponds I, "an' you had better see Ike, my ole man, when he tries to sew on a button. He starts off wid a grand flourish, an' a-wearin' de look of one of dese head early Christian martyrs dat Brer Jinkins tells 'bout, whut's done been tooken in an' sold a-hold f'om of a wife, but what is too noble to say de things 'bout hit dat he's entitled to say. When I sees him wid dat suffer-in' an' resigned expression, a makin' for my wuk-basket, I knows dat he's gone busted a button off, an' is mad 'cause I ain't been mind-reader enough to know hit.

"Den he rummages through my wuk-basket ontel he makes a mess dat hit takes me two hours to straighten out, an' den he pic's out de littlest needle an' de biggest thread in hit, an' den he goes over by de window an' braces hisself in a chair against de wall lak he was startin' into a wrastlin' match. I offers to sew on de button, an' he says: 'Go 'way woman, dere ain't none of yo' sect dat kin do no mo' dan paste a button on. I want dis one to hol', so I'se a-gwine to sew hit on myself.' Den I offers to thread de needle, an' he 'lows dat he ain't lost his eyesight, nor yit de use of his hands, an' dat ef I'll go an' 'tend to my business, he can 'tend to his widout de ben'fit of any of my advice. Den I goes away.

"'Long 'bout a half-hour afterwards I comes along ag'in, an' Ike has got fo'ty-leven spools of thread, an' fo' papers of needles scattered roun' him, an' is done tuk off his collar an' spit on his hand, an' at las' has got de needle threaded, an' a kin' of light of triump is shinin' on his brow.

"Den he makes a jab at de button, an' he can't find de hole, an' den he makes 'bout fo' mo' jabs widout findin' it, an' den all of a sudden his needle goes through de hole onexpected lak, an 'bout a inch into his thumb, an' Ike gives a jump dat makes de cheer slip, an' he falls on de flo', an' he gits up doin' a war dance, and a-suckin' his thumb, an' a-sayin' things dat ain't becomin' in no Christian man what's a elder in de chu'ch. An' I finishes sewin' on de button, an' 'bout de time dat de sore gits out of Ike's finger, he commences to brag 'bout how much he knows 'bout sewin', an how he always sews on his own buttons."

"Whut you say, Sis Mirandy," says Sis Hannah Jane, "is de ve'y sp'it an' image of de way my husban' acts on dem lak occasions. Dat's why dey's gwine to teach dem college boys how to sew, so dey can wrastle wid deir own buttons widout losin' deir grip on deir religion. Teachin' dem boys dem household tasks, so to speak, sholy is a grand idee, an' hit's gwine to stop a lot of dis-heah divorsh evil."

"Well, I dunno, Sis Hannah Jane," I 'spons, "hit looks lak to me dat hit's mo' calculated to encourage argyment in de fambly, circle dan hit is to promote harmony. Seems lak to me dat I can't edzactly see de dove of peace roostin' on de roof-pole of dat house whar de man of de family is always a handin' out advice to his wife 'bout how she should make de chillun's clothes an' cook de vittals, an' a tellin' her dat he always double-felled his seams an' browned his flour for thickenin' gravy, instid of doin' things de slack way she does 'em.

"I don't know how you be, Sis Hannah Jane, but ef dere's one thing in dis world dat does rile me an' git my dander up, hit is for anybody to pass any remarks, an' throw any asparagus out de way I cooks things; an' ef I was married to a man dat was always a-findin' me dat his buscuits was always light, an' his cake never hel, an' dat de way he roasted his chickens dey dest melted in yo' mouth, I lay dat 'bout de second time he done hit, I'd smash all of de dishes over his head, an' dat dere would be a call for de ambulansh in dat once happy home."

"Sis Hannah Jane, believe me, he won't gwine to make for no happy home for de man to know mo' 'bout cookin' dan his wife does. For what does de Good Book say on dis ere point? 'Eat whut is set befo' you, an' ax no questions, An' pass no criticism.' De grounds in de coffee pot is been de grounds of m' own divorsh already, an' dey would be of mo' ef ev'y man wuz a good free-han' cook."

"Dat's de true words, Sis Mirandy," agrees Sis Hannah Jane, "an' mo'over an' lakwise, dere ain't no odder man in de world dat is so set up an' bigoty as de man dat thinks dat he knows how to cook. Lawd, dest let one of de po' things go a-campin' an' cook up some sort of a mess dat dey can gulp down because dey's dat hongry dat dey could eat turnpike rocks an' tenpenny-nails, an' he don't git through braggin' over hit to de las' day of his life. An' when a man does undertake to 'cook anything, hit takes all de pots an' pans an' spoons an' cups in de house, an' he wastes enough vittels to run de family a week makin' one dish.

"Dere's one thing, dough, dat's good 'bout teachin' men how to cook an' sew," goes on Sis Hannah Jane, "Hit'll make 'em have a little mo' sympathy for deir wives. Because a man ain't never tackled de job, he thinks dat a woman dat ain't got nothin' to do but to git three meals a day, an' clean up de house, an' wash de clothes, an' do de fambly sewin', an' nuss de baby, an' take care of the chillun is got a reg'lar picnic, an' dat de reason dat hit takes her from five o'clock in de mawnin' till ten o'clock at night to git through wid her wuk is because she ain't got no management to her.

"When de men goes up against dat kind of a perpetual-motion job an' finds out dat hit's de hardest wuk on earth, den maybe dey'll have a little mo' pity for dem whut's wid hit, an' lend deir wives a helpin' han' wid de spring sewin'."

"Shoo, Sis Hannah Jane," says I, "you'se barkin' up de wrong tree, for dere won't be no marryin' when ev'y man is his own cook an' seamstress. Dere comes a time in ev'y bachelor's life when he's got a drawer full of socks wid holes in 'em, an' his suspenders pinned on wid safety-pins, an' his stomach turns at de thought of boardin' house cookin', an' den hit is dat de nearest woman snatches him up an' leads him lak a lamb to de altar. Dat's de way de Lawd delivers a man into our hands; but ef he had a good grip on de needle an' de fryin' pan, he'd git away from us ev'y time."

"Maybe so," 'spons Sis Hannah Jane, "but maybe when men learn how to do fancy-work, de po' things dat is drove to de corner saloon an' de crap game to pass de time of a evenin' will stay at home, an' pass a pleasant time crochetin', or doin' Battenberg work."

"Well, Sis Hannah Jane," 'spons I, "I ain't in favor of teachin' men how to cook an' sew, an' make 'em thereby independent of us women. Naw'm, we need all de strangle-hold on de wedding-ring dat we can git, an' ef de time ever comes when a man don't have to marry to git a cook dat can't give notice an' quit, dere's gwine to be a mighty falling off in weddin' bells. But," says I, wid a sigh, "hit would be a comfort to be married to a man dat could tell you when yo' shu'twaist fit in de back, an' whedder yo' skirt was on straight or slantwise. But beyaad dat, hit's money in our pockets to keep man in deir own sacred sphere."

THE CALL.

[The following poem from the pen of a Canadian soldier with the first contingent is reprinted from The London Daily Mirror.]

I hear the clear note of the bugle
And the roar of the calling drum,
And I feel the swing of the marching men.

And a deep, deep voice says, Come.
For the arrow of duty points forward,
Tho the heartstrings quiver and break,
Yet the voice of my calling country
Is one I may not forsake.
For my manhood heeds and listens
And bends an attentive ear,
And tho war's alarms may bring me harm,
My road lies plain and clear.
It stretches wide from my own fireside,
At the far end stands the foe;
And tho grim death meets my eager breath,
I am ready and glad to go.
For England asks for the sons she lent
To the East, West, South and North,
And who stands by when a mother's cry
Is bidding her sons "Stand Forth"?
The shades of the past stand clear at last
For the flag by land and sea;
What was duty for Wellington, Nelson and Moore
Is doubly duty for me.
For they handed down the hard-won crown
That is made for the victor's brow,
And the glory of deeds afloat and ashore
Is one to remember now.
Then God send England the strong right arm,
To prosper well in the fight,
And show that the sea-girt island
Is backed by the Empire's might.

Modern Fiction.

A young lady in Chicago wrote to a friend in a Canadian public library recently for a list of ten of the best works of fiction she had read during the last year. The recipient of the letter, a young lady well known for her ready wit, sent the following list: "The Truth About Germany: Facts About the War," by Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, and other Teutonic romancists; "The Secrets of the German War Office," a fine piece of imaginative writing by Dr. Karl Graves; "England as Germany's Vassal," a fairy tale by Von Bernhardi; "The Fatherland," running serially in New York; "The Vital Issue," also published serially in New York; "On to Paris via Sayville, R.I.," by Ambassador von Bernstorff; "Called Back! a Trench-ant Tale," by Von Kluk; "The Mailed Fist, or Returned for Better Direction," by William Hohenzollern; "The Uneaten Paris Dinner, or The Wrong Goose Cooked," by Franz von Speed; "Everything Normal in Berlin," by Sir Roger Casement.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

St. Raphael Ont., Jan. 5th,

"Four years ago, I had such pains in my back that I could not work. The pains extended to my arms, sides and shoulders. I used many kinds of medicine for over a year, none of which did me very much good. I read about Gin Pills and sent for a sample and used them and found the pains were leaving me and I was feeling better. So I bought one box and before I had used them all, the pains were almost gone and I could keep at work. After I had taken six other boxes, I was entirely cured and I feel as strong as at the age of 30. I am a farmer, now 61 years old."
FRANK LEALAND

Gin Pills are "Made in Canada". 50c a box, 6 for $2.50 at all dealers. Sold in U.S. under the name of "GINO" Pills. Trial treatment free if you write National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto. 294

Much Pain From Kidney Disease

Doctored in Vain Until Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Were Used.

Kidney derangements are often associated with disorders of the liver and bowels, and under these conditions ordinary kidney medicines usually fail to effect cure. It is because of their unique, combined action on the liver, kidneys and bowels that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are so generally successful, even in the most complicated cases.

Mr. Emanuel Bernard, farmer, St. Paul's, Kent county, N.B., writes:—"About eighteen years ago my wife was bad with kidney disease, and suffered greatly from headaches, pains in bowels and stomach, and her heart was affected. For a year she was treated by her doctor, with no apparent benefit. She then used five boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with most satisfactory results. This gave us such a good opinion of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills that we always keep them in the house to be used for all derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Indians Sent Their Share.

One of the most welcome subscriptions at the head office of the Canadian Red Cross Society recently was a check for $46 from the Indian Orange Lodge at Moraviantown. In his letter enclosing the money ex-Chief Tobias says: "I leave it to you to send it to the society that will appreciate it most as coming from an Indian Orange Lodge and their friends."

Although the various tribes of Indians in Canada are unable to take their places beside their fellow-citizens in the trenches, or undergo the hardships and trials that they will be called upon to go through, the many tribes throughout the Dominion may well follow the example of the Indian lodge of Moraviantown.

GREENWOOD'S CAREER.

It Reads Like a Page From a Romantic Novel.

Sir Hamar Greenwood comes into his baronetcy not at all unexpectedly, for the British Isles have been the Fortunate Isles for him, without any qualification. His career in England is looked upon by many Canadians as a sort of miraculous romance, somewhat resembling that of Sir Gilbert Parker.

Sir Hamar was born at Whitby, Ontario, in 1870. He graduated at the Toronto University. He practiced law a short time, spent a brief period as a civil servant in the Ontario Department of Agriculture, and then went to England without fortune or friends; with nothing but a lawyer's degree, a good physique, and plenty of self-confidence and ability. The following story throws light on both Sir Hamar's temperament and position shortly after arriving in England. It is related that on one occasion when he was lecturing on temperance (his first occupation in the Old Country) he was a guest at a magnificent country house in an English village in which he was to speak. In the morning a valet entered the guest chamber and proceeded to arrange the guest's apparel. Out of a trousers' pocket dropped a two-and-sixpence, which was at the moment the entire liquid capital of the coming statesman. After a time the guest opened his eyes. The valet, who no doubht had his own impressions about the meagre contents of the guest's pockets, remarked: "The two-and-sixpence which fell out of your pocket I have laid on the table, sir." Greenwood quickly replied: "Oh, that is for you, my man. I left it in that pocket for you in case I did not wake up."

Following his temperance work Mr. Greenwood made himself known as a stump speaker.

The first success of the aggressive young Canadian was to run for the British Parliament as a Liberal in York, a stronghold of Conservatism, and win a seat. Once in the limelight he stayed there. He won powerful friends, notably Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, now First Lord of the Admiralty, for whom he was for some time Parliamentary private secretary.

Mr. Greenwood made powerful connections in the law as well as in politics, and now has a large and lucrative practice in London. In 1911 he married Miss Margery Spencer, of Townhope Court, Herefordshire, Eng. whom he met at Kingston, Jamaica, at a lunch during which the first shock of the great earthquake was felt. His wife is the daughter of a wealthy landowner.

Sir Hamar is a strong Home Ruler, and on one of his more or less recent visits to Toronto he told the Canadian Club here that 'he Dominion ought to do her full share towards the defence of the Empire. He is at present member of Parliament for Sunderland, Eng., having been elected for that constituency in 1910. He has made himself prominent in the same way that Theodore Roosevelt, Sam Hughes, and many others have carved riches for themselves. This is not to say that he is vain or that he talks too much—but simply that he is best described as "a force."

Packers and Fishers at War.

A conflict has arisen in the Maritime Provinces between the lobster canners and the fishermen as a result of the war. The packers have been unable to sell all their output this season and will be obliged to carry a considerable proportion of it till next year. They request that no canners' licenses be issued next year so as to prevent the market being overstocked and the price being reduced. The present prices for canned lobster, which the packers wish to maintain, were only obtained after years of effort and gradual increases. If the industry does not take a rest next year they fear that prices will tumble down. They also allege that the fisheries are being depleted, and a year of rest would do much to replenish them.

The fishermen, on the other hand, who have been depending on this means of livelihood, are strongly opposed to a policy that would close the canneries and kill their market for the lobsters.

Celebrates Diamond Weeding.

At the residence of their eldest son, W. H. Fleming, lockmaster at Chaffey's Locks on the Rideau, was celebrated recently the diamond wedding anniversary of Capt. Fleming and his wife, who were married in 1854. To tourists and forwarders on the Rideau waters the name of Capt. Fleming has been a familiar one for the past 60 years. There has not been a season in all these years but has seen the captain actively engaged in navigation on these waters between Kingston and Ottawa. At the respective ages of 81 and 82, Capt. Fleming and his wife are bright and active.

The wedding anniversary brought together a large gathering of relatives and invited guests, among the latter being J .R. Dargavel, M.P.P., who acted as toastmaster at the banquet.

Net Debt Increases.

The monthly statement of the Finance Department shows an increase of $11,900,916 in the net debt of the Dominion during December. This is due to the war expenditures and the falling revenues resulting from the war. The total revenue for the month was $9,167,940, or $3,763,526 less than December, 1913. The customs revenue was $4,706,117, a decrease of $2,931,068. The excise totaled $1,952,837, a drop of $87,000.

Wheat For 1915.

It is predicted that by 1915 western Canada will produce 600,000,000 bushels of wheat annually. The population is increasing more rapidly than the railroad development, and there is serious apprehension that it will not be possible to handle the enormous crops.

He Could Not Make One Step

Then Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Walter J. Roberts.

Newfoundland Man Finds a Firm Cure After Suffering Ten Months of Torture.—Doctors and Other Medicines Failed to Help Him.

Lewisport, Twillingate District, Nfld., Mar. 1st. (Special).—A thrilling story of a splendid cure by Dodd's Kidney Pills is told by Walter J. Roberts, a well known resident of this place.

"My troubles started from a cold after measles," Mr. Roberts states. "For nineteen months I was confined to the house, and for ten months I could not make one step.

"I tried many doctors and medicines but got no relief from them. The trouble was in my feet, legs and arms, and at times was almost unbearable. I could not feed myself for those ten months.

"At last I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills, taking twenty-eight boxes in all, and am glad to say they made a firm cure of me."

Mr. Roberts' troubles were caused by diseased kidneys. That is why Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him. Diseased Kidneys fail in their duty of straining the impurities out of the blood and the consequence is trouble all over the body. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure diseased Kidneys.

THE CONTENTED UNEMPLOYED.

The towns and cities of this country have a problem to deal with for which they have no solution. The fact that 200 unemployed in the city of Toronto prefer the hospitality of the city soup kitchen rather than the honest employment on a farm in Huron County, is conclusive evidence that the unemployed are not a result of economic conditions which exist in this country. They are unemployed by choice, and will remain unemployed so long as they receive free meal tickets or free soup. Toronto does not stand alone as a city with this class of unemployed, they exist in every city in Canada, and the cities which harbor them are at present not altogether to blame. There is a certain class of manhood which has little ambition for work, and they are stealing from the working people just as much as the "honest" laboring man with a large family who steals a few bushels of coal with which to warm his home. The Provincial Secretary has initiated a commendable scheme in the northern part of this province where people out of work "may" assist in clearing waste lands and transforming it into productive areas. The word "may" should be changed to "must" in relation to these satisfied unemployed in our cities. They should be compelled to work or starve in a pursuit that will result in production in some shape or form.—Farmers' Advocate.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

OLD WAGON TRAINS

There Used to Be Exciting Times on the Santa Fe Trail.

TRICKERY OF THE REDSKINS.

They Employed All Sorts of Ruses to Plunder the Caravans and Murder the Whites—A Bit of Treachery and a Battle With the Troopers.

As the overland trade between the American settlements in Missouri and the Mexican pueblos in New Mexico increased in value following the opening of the Santa Fe trail the greater necessity of adequate protection for the traders and their stocks was met by both the United States and Mexican governments furnishing military convoys. The troops acted in a capacity not unlike that of warships guarding merchant vessels from piratical attacks, for no pirates were more persistent or bothersome than the savages of the plains.

The caravans usually left Franklin and later Independence and Westport in the spring. United States troops would accompany them to the caches on the Arkansas river; then Mexican troops would guard them to Taos, and sometimes even to Santa Fe. The return trip later in the summer was similarly protected. Sometimes two trips each way would be made in a year.

The presence of troops usually kept the Indians from making a direct assault on the trains. Even in his bravest moments an Indian has small relish of a fight on anything like equal terms; consequently the savages developed their aptitude for treachery and deceit.

Every sort of ruse their fertile brains could devise was used to separate the various divisions of a train or lure a small part away from the main convoy, where it could be plundered and the whites murdered without serious danger to the attackers.

A favorite plan and one which many times hoodwinked large parties into suffering some loss was for a small party of Indians to appear at the camp with protestations of peace. For diplomatic reasons the reds would be hospitably received and their request to eat and sleep in the camp oftentimes granted. That night the small party of Indians would attempt to stampede the live stock of the train. If successful a large force of savages would be concealed near by to aid.

Some ruses were far cleverer than that. One which completely fooled a Mexican officer and came near being the cause of his death was believed by the traders to deserve the palm. That officer, Colonel Viscarro, with 100 troopers, was escorting an American wagon train through the foothills of what is now southern Colorado when a party of Indians appeared and asked for a parley.

The American traders refused the request. The Indians withdrew and held a consultation. When the convoy reached the Cimarron river the savages appeared again. One rode forward with an arrow tied transversely across the shaft of a spear, a symbol of the cross. Viscarro was a Catholic and honored this novel banner. He rode out and spoke to the brave.

"If the Americans will move aside to some distance we will lay down our arms and surrender," the Indian said.

"Certainly, red brother," the colonel replied. He ordered the wagons to retire beyond a ridge. Hardly had they disappeared when a large force of Indians rose from concealment behind the sand dunes and poured a destructive fire into the Mexican ranks. Only the heroism of a Pueblo Indian guide with the troops saved the colonel from death. He heard one of the Comanches yell, "Now for the chief!" which was the signal for the treachery to begin. The Pueblo jumped in front of his colonel and received a charge of shot aimed at the officer.

The firing was heard by the Americans, who returned to the troops. They rode swiftly to the flanks of the attacking Indians and charged. Caught between two fires, the savages soon scattered in flight, but not until they had been handled severely in a hand to hand encounter, where clubbed rifles and tomahawks played a part. Colonel Viscarro was profuse in his thanks to the Americans.—Kansas City Times.

Quarrel No. 1.

"Confound it all," the bridegroom muttered angrily as he and his bride were returning from a ten days' honeymoon trip, "why do people stare at us so?"

"Probably wondering, just as we are, why we married each other," replied the bride.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

LEFT MANY MONUMENTS.

Late Thomas C. Keefer, of Ottawa, Was an Eminent Engineer.

The announcement of the death of Thomas C. Keefer, C.M.G., of Ottawa, caused deep regret throughout Canada in all parts of which he was well known.

The late Mr. Keefer was one of the best known civil engineers in the Dominion and his name is connected with many important public works.

Thomas Coltrim Keefer was born November, 1821, and was in his 94th year when he died. His grandfather was a United Empire Loyalist and took part with the royal troops in the war of 1776. He lost his life and his property was confiscated. Later his two sons settled in the Niagara peninsula where George, one of the sons, was granted 400 acres of land by the Government. He cleared the land and in conjunction with other United Empire Loyalists founded the village of Thorold, where he brought up a family of 10 sons and five daughters. The last survivor of this large family was the eminent engineer, Thomas C. Keefer, C.M.G., of Ottawa.

Thomas Keefer was educated at Upper Canada College and was a member of the first cricket club of that academy in 1836. He began his career as an engineer on the Erie Canal in the United States and later was employed on the Welland Canal, remaining on that work until 1845. He was then engaged to take the chief position in connection with the Ottawa river works, the object of which was to facilitate the immense lumber trade of that river and its tributaries. He carried on these works until 1894, designing important improvements which are in use at present. In 1849 he produced his Philosophy of Railways, a work which had a great influence on the policy of the Government in respect to the construction of railways in Canada. In the following year he won Lord Elgin's prize for the best essay on The Influence of the Canals of Canada on Her Agriculture, and subsequently published various essays and reports, among them one favoring the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway and another dealing with Canadian waterways from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic.

In 1850 he was employed by the Government in making a survey of the rapids of the St. Lawrence with a view to their improvement; also in examining the river below Quebec for a harbor of relief and in exploring routes with a view to the building of a canal or railway between the St. Lawrence and the upper St. John waters of Lake Temiscouata. He was afterwards engaged in preliminary surveys for the Grand Trunk Railway between Montreal and Toronto and in preparing plans for the famous Victoria bridge at Montreal, which was undertaken on his survey and report.

Later he was employed in constructing water works for the cities of Montreal, Hamilton and Ottawa. For some years he was the engineer of the Montreal Harbor Commission. He served as chairman of the Royal Commission on ice floods. It was through his efforts that the railways of Canada adopted the standard gauge in place of the narrow. In 1857 he was Canadian commissioner for the first international exhibition in London and again for the exhibition of 1862 and 1878 he was executive commissioner of the Paris exhibition. He was elected an officer of the Legion of Honor and a Companion of St. Michael and St. George.

Mr. Keefer was elected vice-president of the Society of American Engineers in 1886 and 1887 and president in 1888. He was one of the founders of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers in 1887 and was its first president. His engineering works have made his name familiar throughout Canada and his writings have stamped him as a man of remarkable foresight in public affairs.

The late Mr. Keefer was married in 1848 to Elizabeth, daughter of the late Hon. Thomas McKay, M.L.C. Of this union one son, Charles H. Keefer, of Ottawa, is the sole survivor. His first wife having died, the deceased married in 1873 Annie, widow of John McKinnon, of Ottawa. She died in 1906. Besides his son, C. H. Keefer, he leaves two grandsons, T. C. Keefer, jr., and Allan Keefer, both well known in Ottawa. The late Mr. Keefer was an Anglican in religion.

Many Relatives at Front.

Madame Pierre Charton, aged 80, St. Denis street, Montreal, has 144 relatives engaged in fighting on the side of France in the war. Her late husband suffered imprisonment in the German town of Stettin, where for three weeks he was confined in an underground cell in 1870, being promoted in the French army on his release. One of Madame Charton's sons, Pierre, a professor at the Montreal Ecole Polytechnique, is a lieutenant in the French army and another is an officer with the Turcos. On August 10, when Pierre Charton left Montreal for France, the war experience his mother gained in 1870 stood her son in good stead, for Madame Charton had the foresight to provide her son with a special purse of unique design, in case he should be short of money. A local shoe maker was commissioned to make a pair of boots for Mr. Charton, and these had a special design. In the sole of each boot was one hundred dollars in gold.

Exports To Indies.

As a result of the trade agreement between Canada and the West Indies and British Guiana, Canada shipped to British Guiana in the first nine months of this year, 113,000 barrels of flour worth $494,262 as compared with 61,000 barrels worth $275,492 for the same period the year before. The Customs Department of British Guiana has decided that Canada's flour shipped via New York must be bonded through and not be reshipped at that port. Other West Indian colonies are likely to make the same regulation in order to ensure that all flour getting the preferential tariff rate shall be Canadian flour.

WESTERN FARMERS' DISSATISFIED.

Want Saskatchewan Government to Form a Farmers' Co-operative Farm Mortgage Association

Regina, Sask., Feb. 26th, 1914.—That all the farmers are not satisfied with the treatment accorded them by the banks is evident from the fact that the banking and transportation committee of the Grain Growers' Association introduced at the Convention held recently resolutions calling for the establishment by the provincial government of a Farmers' Co-operative Farm Mortgage Association, with full banking powers, without delay. The resolution included in the report, says:—

"Whereas, the government of the Province of Saskatchewan has at the session of 1913 introduce and the Legislature pass an Act to incorporate the Saskatchewan Co-operative Farm Mortgage Association. And whereas, clause 34 of the said Act provides that the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council shall proclaim the date of the coming into force of the said Act. Therefore, be it resolved that this association strongly requests the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to make such proclamation as is necessary to bring such Act into immediate operation and effect."

A rider urged the Government to do all in its power to supplement the proposal of the Agricultural Credit Commission as contained in clause, 17, chapter 10, of its recommendation, namely:

"That the Saskatchewan Co-operative Farm Mortgage Association establish as soon after its foundation as is feasible a bank with headquarters within the province to conduct a regular banking business through the locals and officers of the association."

"Two conclusions arrived at," said Mr. Paynter, "were that the Farmers should get as a safe depository, and they should give credit to all producers who were capable managers and had sound security. He declared that this last was not being done by banks, and that the banks must change, or the farmers must organize their own bank."

PRODUCTION OF FLAX FIBRE.

Increased Growth and Improved Methods Required.

The linen industry in Ireland and Scotland is in danger as a consequence of the war. Much of the raw material, flax fibre, has come from Belgium, France and Russia, and these sources of supply are, for the time being, closed. Representatives from the large mills of Great Britain have recently visited Canada in an endeavor to enlist the co-operation of farmers in greater production of flax.

Here is an opportunity to develop the industry in this country, and by modern methods of production and handling, put it on a basis that will make it profitable under normal conditions and prices.

Flax for fibre can be grown in Canada wherever mixed farming can be carried on. In some parts of Quebec and in Western Ontario, from the days of early settlement, flax has been grown and homemade into linen. In only a few sections of Ontario in 1904 some 700 tons of fibre were produced, which sold for $201 per ton. This fibre was of poor commercial grade, owing to antiquated methods of preparation for spinning. A shipment to Belfast produced by slightly improved methods sold for $240 per ton. The average price for Irish flax fibre during the last five years has been $325 per ton, while Belgian flax has averaged $405 per ton. It is obvious that Canadian flax should supply the present deficiency and future requirements of the Empire's raw material for linen production, and that more remunerative prices will be received if improved methods of production are employed.

The average acre of flax grown for fibre, under normal market conditions, and using the new process, would yield at least $45.00 worth of fibre and seed worth $13.00, making a total of $58.00. This is about three times the usual export value of an acre of wheat. It will be three years at least before normal conditions can again be expected, and during this time higher prices are likely to prevail. The area in flax mainly for seed) in Canada, in 1913, was 1,552,800 acres and, in 1 14 1 084,000 acres. This shows a decided decrease and it also shows that what is needed in Canada is a practical method of producing fibre.

Information regarding the growing of flax for seed and fibre purposes is contained in bulletin No. 59 of the Central Experimental Farm which can be had by applying to the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

FIREPROOFING SHINGLES.

The Use of Paint Greatly Reduces Their Danger.

Building conditions in Canada are such as to make the use of shingles for roofing houses, stables, etc., almost universal. Their general use, in an unprotected condition, adds considerably to the ordinary fire risk, as well as to the conflagration hazard, and, consequently, increases the insurance rate on the buildings concerned. To overcome this disadvantage, numerous investigations and experiments have been and are still being made with the object of discovering a material the application of which will render the shingle roof fireproof, or, failing this, to secure a process of treatment of shingles whereby they may be included in the category of slow-burning structural material. Thus, it has been demonstrated that the use of a good quality of linseed oil carrying a suitable pigment will materially reduce the hazard. By the application of paint, the shingles are protected from the weather, thus preventing warping and the formation of pockets in which hot cinders may lodge; irregularities in the surface are also filed up by the paint.

Experiments have demonstrated that, under a one-minute exposure to flame, painted shingles are badly attacked. Under a three-minute test, the unpainted shingles were severely burned while the effect upon the painted ones was such that the actual burning was limited to the portion directly exposed to the flame, the paint retarding the spread of the fire and the charring of the wood. In the absence of any positive fireproofing material, the results obtained from the use of paint upon exposed shingles may be considered one of the best means of reducing the fire risk on shingle-roofed buildings.

March came in like a lamb, and if the fine weather continues we will soon be tapping the maple trees.

Mr. West Mills has gone to the West, where he has secured a situation for the summer, near Carman, Man.

Messrs. J. F. Breen and R. H. Halbert spent a few days in Toronto as delegates to a meeting of the Dominion Grange.

We regret to report the death of Mrs. John Kelly, of the 4th line, Melancthon, which took place at Toronto General Hospital on the 25th ult.. Mrs. Kelly was a daughter of Mr. Duncan McVanel, ex-councillor of Amaranth. The bereaved friends have the sympathy of the community.

Rev. C. C. Otten, pastor of the Gravel Road church, visited Toronto friends recently.

We are pleased to note that our old neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Chipchase, who moved from here to Toronto three years ago, are moving back to these parts again.

Real estate is again beginning to move in our midst. Mr. S. Sawden, now of Toronto, has sold his 150 acre farm north of the village to Mr. W. E. Graham, of Toronto, for $5000. A few years ago this land was a dense swamp, where hounds and hunters loved to race and chase rabbits and foxes. The late Michael Shoaff conducted a hotel on the corner, while James McGeowah kept the Fenian Hotel on the opposite corner and made his own whiskey a few rods back in the swamp. This is where Paddy Katan was beaten to death with an axe handle about 40 years ago.

CONNOR.

The death of Thos. Mackenzie, a well-known resident of this district, occurred on Sunday morning, Feb. 21st, after a lingering illness due to tubercular trouble. Deceased, who was 36 years of age, was a son of Mr. Mackenzie, blacksmith at Connor for a number of years. The funeral was held to Adjala Presbyterian Church Cemetery on Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 23rd. Rev. J. A. Black, of Mono Mills, conducted the funeral services, Rev. C. H. Quaife assisting.

George Eves has got the woman at last, although we understand that she is only here on trial. She arrived from Toronto on Monday night and the neighborhood is wondering if her stay will be a lengthy one.

Will you allow us a little space in your columns for a few items from this vicinity.

We are glad to see March coming in so nice for we know our young people will enjoy the fine weather.

Mr. Hugh and Miss Ena Lee attended a fine party near Orangeville last week.

Mr. Leonard Purdon has returned home after spending a few weeks in the city.

Miss Mabel Atkinson and friend spent Sunday at Mr. Goldie McCulloch's.

The skating is fine around here, but we do not suppose it will last very long on account of the fine weather.

Mr. W. Montgomery, of Orangeville, spent a few days at Mr. Wm. Lee's last week.

Mr. Roy Varey entertained a number of his friends one night last week. A dainty lunch was served about 12 o'clock after which the dancing was continued until four o'clock in the morning. Splendid music was provided by Messrs. V. Armstrong, J. Varey, B. Carey and E. Wilson. When all was over everyone started for home well satisfied with the evening's entertainment.

WEST MONO.

Divine service will be held (D.V.) in West Mono parish next Sunday as follows:—St. Matthew's, 11 a.m.; St. George's, 3 p.m.; St. Luke's, 7 p.m.

"THE DANGER SIGNAL."

Old Caledon Dramatic Club Heard in Comedy Drama Thursday Night.

An Appreciative Audience Greeted Visitors in Opera House.

Although running under the name of a melodrama "The Danger Signal," staged by the Old Caledon Dramatic Club under the auspices of Lord Dufferin Chapter, Daughters of the Empire, in the Opera House on Thursday night last, was, in reality a comedy drama. The plot, while really of a serious nature, was lost in the uproarious laughter produced by the hilarious pair of actors, Pat Maloney and Persimmons. Pat, of course, was an Irishman, and Persimmons, a "'spectable colored gen'man." These two actors acted together throughout the play and were continually greeted with loud applause. They could dance, sing and play melodious tunes on instruments called "bazoons." The play had two villians, Dr. Valerian and Mr. Enfield (alias Williamson), who matched their wits against Mother Foresight, an old dame with a remarkable gift of second sight. The play starts off by Stella Enfield, the heroine, unfolding a mysterious dream forboding terrible things. Stella loves Chester, the son of a very rich Colonel, Chas. Norman. Stella's father, Henry Enfield, objects to the match on the ground that Chester's father ruined his life, when he (Enfield) was Captain of the Northern Bell, which ran on the rocks while under his command. On the Northern Bell at the time of the disaster were Chas. Norman (the Colonel), who was the owner of the ship, Dr. Valerian, and Stella, who was a baby at the time, and was supposed to have been drowned, but was picked up by Captain Enfield. Enfield steals Stella and brings her up as his own daughter. Enfield was blamed for the wreck by the Colonel, whereupon he secretly swears to have the Colonel's life. Dr. Valerian, during the Civil War, had been a victim of the Colonel's harsh discipline, and also swears to get even. The two plot together with a view of taking the Colonel's life. The first plot, in which they attempt to drown the Colonel, fails, the Colonel being rescued by his son, Chester, who in return asks his father's permission to marry Stella, to which proposition the Colonel objects on account of the girl's supposedly low birth. In the second plot, Dr. Valerian refuses to be Enfield's accomplice, but is forced by threat of exposure of his past life by Enfield, who holds incriminating papers. The plot is hatched and the Colonel's doom practically sealed, but the sudden appearance of Mother Foresight, swinging a prearranged "Danger Signal" (a red light), accompanied by the hero, the heroine, and a party of willing helpers, capture the villians as they are about to throw the Colonel over a terrible looking cliff. The haughty Colonel demands an explanation, and Enfield tells his story of the wreck of the Northern Bell and the rescue of Stella, whom the Colonel thought drowned. The Colonel reclaims his daughter, who is now in despair at the thought of losing her lover, Chester, and, thinking of the narrow escape she has had of marrying her brother, swoons, falling into Chester's loving arms. But Cupid was not to be forestalled for the Colonel now explains that Chester is only his adopted son. Joy reigns supreme and before the curtain drops forgiveness is granted to all the wicked conspirators.

One of the most difficult roles of the play, that of Dr. Valerian, a psychologist, theorizer and a smooth gentleman, was most cleverly acted by Mr. "Shorty" Dodds. Mr. Rutledge Wallace, as Chester Norman, the hero, and Miss Irene McArthur, as Stella Enfield, the heroine, made love seem worth while even to the wary bachelor. The make-up of Mother Foresight, was realistic, and the role was portrayed by Mrs. John Warnock in a most creditable manner. Mr. Robt. McKim, as the Colonel, looked like a real old war veteran, his pride in his rank and station showing to advantage. Mr. W. J. Brown, as Henry Enfield, the poor deluded ship's captain, had a difficult part to play, but upheld the role very well. Dr. F. R. Stubbs, as Pat Maloney, could easily be classed as a professional actor. Persimmons, the darkey, was very cleverly interpreted by Mr. Norman Harrison. Miss Jessie K. Groat as Nora, Miss Cardwell Stubbs as Miss Angie, and Mr. Wesley Spears as Peter Bullock presented their parts with commendable ability.

The proceeds of the concert were in aid of the Red Cross and Lord Dufferin Hospital funds.

Hillock-Irwin.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. B. Irwin, Mill St., was the scene of a very interesting event at 3.30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, when their eldest daughter, Florence Elizabeth, was united in marriage to Mr. Joseph Edmond Hillock, of Caledon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. M. Morris, pastor of both contracting parties. The bride looked charming in her dainty wedding gown and her little sister, Gladys, made a sweet looking flower girl. After the wedding breakfast, the happy couple left on the evening train for a brief trip, the bride travelling in a navy suit of gaberdine with small French hat and Persian lamb furs, the gift of the groom. On their return the newly wedded couple will make their home in Caledon. The bride, who is a most estimable young lady, received numerous beautiful gifts indicative of the esteem of her friends. The Banner joins their many friends in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Hillock happiness and good fortune.

Mrs. J. A. McElmon and two children, who have been spending the winter with the former's mother, Mrs. Thos. Bowen, of Amaranth, have returned to their home near Regina. Mrs. McElmon's brother, Mr. Aldrich Bowen, accompanied them to the West.

Mr. Robt. Clark, of Alton, and Mrs. (Dr.) S. T. White, of Shelburne, are in Hamilton this week attending the funeral of their aunt, Mrs. Wm. Aikens, who died in that city on Saturday at the ripe age of 93 years. The funeral took place on Tuesday. Mrs. Aikens was a sister of Mr. John Clark and the late Mr. William Clark, of Alton.

Mr. T. C. Dryden, ex-Warden of Dufferin, passed through town last Thursday morning on his way to attend the funeral of his cousin, Mr. J. G. Murdock, reeve of Lucknow. Reeve Murdock passed away quite suddenly a week ago Monday night, succumbing to an attack of acute indigestion. Deceased was born in Waterloo County in 1858. He leaves a widow and three sons.

Young People's Meeting.

The subject taken at St. Andrew's Young People's meeting on Tuesday night was "The Man with One Talent." A very interesting Paper was given by Miss Moody. The two talented men, Miss Moody held, was the more common and the man with five talents was of more benefit to future generations, so that it was left to the one talent man to bear the heat and burden of everyday toil and to see that he made the very best use of his modest endowment.

An invitation to visit Alton Young People's Society was received, but the date of its acceptance was left open for the present. It was decided to entertain the Grand Valley Society on March 16th, a St. Patrick's entertainment to be provided.

THE COOPER CASES.

Evidence Was Taken on Several Charges on Friday.

Trial Will Be Resumed on March 12.

Trial of Harry Cooper, recently committed by Police Magistrate Pattullo on several charges of theft, was commenced before Judge Fisher at 10 o'clock on Friday morning, the prisoner having previously elected to be tried without a jury. The court room was crowded with spectators who followed the evidence with the keenest interest. County Crown Attorney J. L. Island conducted the prosecution and Mr. A. A. Hughson appeared for the prisoner, who entered a formal plea of Not Guilty to each of the charges.

Evidence was first taken in the Harshaw grain theft case, in which Earl Brett, an Alliston grain merchant, and Boyd McLaine gave evidence for the prosecution. Mr. Hughson called Cooper in his own defence. The accused's evidence was a virtual confession of the theft and an account of the incidents connected with the affair. He was visiting his father's place at Mono Centre when they arranged the trip to Harshaw's. They decided to make the trip the night before January Fair, as they thought the Fair Day traffic would cover up all tracks. There was to be an equal division of the spoils. They left his father's place about 12 o'clock at night with the younger Cooper's horses and sleigh and reached Harshaw's place about 1.15 a.m. They were 2½ hours loading the grain and started for Mono Centre about 4 o'clock in the morning. Near Camilla the sleigh got off the track and while they were righting matters they saw a rig approaching from the south. His father hid behind the McDonald workshop at the side of the road and witness did not see him again until he got near Mono Centre, when he met him coming with a team and sleigh to relieve him of part of the load. They unhitched and left their loads standing in a bush until Friday night when they drew them up to his father's house. His father unloaded his share of the booty and about 3.30 o'clock on Saturday morning witness started for Alliston with his load. To Mr. Island witness stated that he was 31 years of age, had been married 5 years and had 3 of a family. He had lived on a rented farm at Angus for two years. His mother was now living in Kincardine and had not lived with his father for 20 years or longer. Granary was locked and witness unlocked it with a key belonging either to himself or his father. He brought down 2 or 3 keys from home and when these were added to his father's lot they made a bunch of perhaps 30 keys.

Mrs. Harry Cooper gave evidence tending to show that her husband's wrong-doing was due to the influence and suggestions of his father.

Evidence was next taken in the Atkinson case, Mr. H. L. Atkinson and young Cooper being the chief witnesses. In this case Cooper swore that his father had brought the cow to his place early last June. Witness said he had asked his father who helped him with the cow and the latter had named a third party. Cooper maintained that he did not know that the cow was stolen, but supposed his father had come by the animal honestly. Mr. Atkinson swore that he booked the animal at 1000 lbs. and valued her at $75, but after keeping her tied in a swale for a couple of weeks Cooper sold her to a Stayner buyer for $50. He told the Court that he turned the whole amount over to his father, and the latter handed him back $10 to repay him for his trouble.

After taking some evidence in the second Harshaw charge the Crown consented to a dismissal of this charge. Evidence was also taken in the Baker and Canning charges, after which the trial was adjourned until Friday, March 12th. By this time the charges against Peter Cooper will likely have been disposed of at the Spring Assizes.

Caldwell-Wilson.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents at 12 o'clock noon, Wednesday, Feb. 24th, when May, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wilson, of Relessey, was united in marriage to Mr. Wesley Caldwell, of Sheldon, Ont. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. W. Dudgeon, of Rosemont, in the presence of the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties. The bride looked very charming in a dress of white satin and shadow lace trimmed with pearls and carried a bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaid, Miss Clara Wilson, sister of the bride, was becomingly gowned in white embroidered voile and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Arthur Caldwell, of Regina, Sask., and Miss Eleanor Webster presided at the piano. The gift of the groom to the bride was a gold wrist watch, to the bridesmaid a silver mesh bag, to the best man an oval tie pin and to the pianiste a gold bracelet. After the ceremony about twenty guests partook of a sumptuous repast and shortly afterwards amid good wishes Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell left for a honeymoon trip to Toronto, London and other points, the bride travelling in a navy blue suit, sand colored hat and Persian lamb furs.

After their return the bride and groom will take up their residence at Sheldon.

Presentation at Waldemar

On Monday evening the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Tolton proved the meeting place of many of their friends and neighbors, just before they are leaving this part for near Markdale. Mr. George Gier was elected chairman, while Mr. Hiram Evans read an address of appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. Tolton. Accompanying the address were two comfortable chairs, which in coming years will give them many opportunities of recalling to mind the pleasant associations in Waldemar. Mr. Tolton has had a successful business career, and has had more than ordinary success as a breeder of high-quality sheep. He has won many prizes at the surrounding shows. Mrs. Tolton, since coming to Waldemar, has endeared herself to all by her wholesome womanly character, and her ever readiness to assist in good works. Mr. Tolton's reply to the kind words expressed in the address and by others, was quite appropriate, and showed his appreciation of the sentiments of his friends. Mr. and Mrs. Tolton are leaving in a few days for near Markdale, where they have purchased a farm and where they carry with them the good wishes of all old friends in this part. —Star & Vidette.

SICK HEADACHES PERMANENTLY CURED

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Correct the Cause of This Trouble.

There are few ailments that cause more genuine misery in the home than attacks which are generally termed sick headaches. The attacks are often periodical and when the mother of a family is prostrated at intervals there is not only her own suffering to consider, but the discomfort caused the other members of the household. Sick headaches arise from a variety of causes, and most of them can be relieved or cured through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mrs. Hugh Doherty, Rocanville, Sask., says: "I suffered for years with what the doctors called nervous prostration and sick headache. When these spells came on me I could not work nor walk, and the pains in the head were almost unbearable. At times the pain in my head was so dreadful that I feared it would drive me mad. I tried four different doctors at times, and not only took bottles of medicine, but quarts of it, but to no avail. Then I quit taking medicine altogether and tried dieting, but it made no difference, I was still an agonizing sufferer. Finally my husband urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and got me a supply. After taking the Pills for some weeks I felt a little better and I gladly continued their use. My nerves began to feel stronger, the terrible headache came with less frequency, and after taking the Pills for some months disappeared altogether. From that day to this I have had no return of the trouble, and all who knew of my illness regarded my cure as marvellous. I cannot say too much in praise of the Pills as they certainly saved me from a life of almost constant agony."

It is by building up and enriching the blood and strengthening the nerves that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills work seemingly marvellous cures, and what they have done for others they will do for all ailing people if given a fair trial. If you do not find these Pills at your medicine dealers you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OFF TO CONTINENT.

Canadians Slept in Horse Stalls on Trip Across Channel.

The following are extracts from letters, which Mrs. B. McGuire has received from her son, Lieut. H. B. McGuire, who is now in France with the first Canadian Contingent:—

Bustard Camp,
Sunday, Feb. 7, 1915

My dear Mother,—

Just a few minutes to write a note. We are away at 5 a.m. to morrow, which means up at 3.30 a.m. We have been very busy all day and night making final adjustments and of course it had to rain hard all day to-day. I have been running around in the rain and mud until I am pretty well on the way to a good wetting before I reach France, if the rain keeps up, which it is bound to do.

We do not know exactly where we are going but we shall get there alright. You will have read of our departure in the papers long before you get this.

I am in good health and good shape for the camp again. I feel that I will return to you alright and will have a good long story of my experiences to tell you.

On board ship at ————.
Feb. 11th, 1915.

On account of censorship I cannot tell you the happenings of the last few days but will write fully in a week or so.

You will likely have read all about us in the papers, but just now I can say nothing as the letter is liable to seizure. We have had a rather rough voyage in a ship used mostly for horses, everyone sleeping in horse stalls. However, we enjoyed the novelty of it. The larger percentage of all on board were seasick, but as usual I could eat three meals per day.

We are anchored in the harbor at ————, and will disembark in a few hours, then entrain in box cars, likely for somewhere.

I am entering a new era in life on my birthday and I am treating it as a sign of good luck.

Your loving son,
HARRY.

SPINAL MENINGITIS

Is Causing Toronto Soldiers Plenty of Work and Worry.

The following letter is from Private S. Arnott, who is now in training at the Exhibition Grounds camp in Toronto. Pte. Arnott spent most of last summer with Mr. Jos. Kendrew, a Mono farmer:—

Editor of The Banner:

Dear Sir.—I am writing a few lines to let you know how we are getting along down here. Well we have had a busy time of late trying to check the spread of spinal meningitis. We have been doing nothing this last week, but trailing beds and blankets out on the parade grounds and disinfecting the barracks. Of course it is needless to say that we are tired of Toronto and like the first contingent we are anxious to move, which we hope to do before long. Well, if you will remember some ten men left Orangeville on Oct. 27th and sorry to say there are only four left. They are Sergt. Snooks, S. Arnott, S. Brooks and F. V. Tucker. Well, I am not going to write a long letter. I am just writing to ask you to send me one copy of The Orangeville Banner for which you will find the price enclosed. It seems that in spite of the fine time we are having I am not at home until I read it. I am sorry I never thought of this plan before, but I am afraid it is too late now, for we think the day is near when we will have to move. Well it is getting late now so will have to close.

Perhaps I will write again if we are not gone soon.

Yours Respectfully,
S. ARNOTT.

Mrs. Norman Cook.

Particularly sad were the circumstances attending the death of Mrs. Norman Cook, who passed away at her home in East Garafraxa on Monday following a very short illness. The young woman was only about twenty years of age and was the only daughter of ex-Reeve Manasseh Ferns, of East Garafraxa. She was married to Mr. Cook on New Year's Day in 1914 under auspices of the happiest character, the young couple starting out in life with every promise of many years of wedded bliss together. She leaves a heart-broken husband and a little child which was ushered into this vale of tears a few short hours before its mother's death. Mrs. Cook was a bright, light-hearted girl with a sunny, affectionate nature and was beloved by all who knew her. Her sudden demise has caused a feeling of deepest gloom and on every hand are heard words of deepest sympathy for the sorrowing husband and parents. A very large concourse of neighbors and friends attended the funeral, which was held to Price's Corners cemetery yesterday afternoon. Rev. R. S. Scott, of Hillsburg, conducted impressive services at the home and grave.

Unanimous in their Condemnation of Alcohol.

"I do not believe that alcohol in any form ever has done or ever will do anybody any good."—Lord Chas. Beresford.

"Our men enjoyed splendid health in the Soudan (Egyptian Campaign, 1881-1882) and this is due to the fact that, from the time they entered until they left, they were not supplied with spirits."—Field Marshall Lord Wolseley.

"The campaign in Egypt was a teetotal campaign. We drank Nile water and nothing added to it. I took over the rearguard on the occasion of the finish of the campaign, and in no other part of the world have I seen a force of men so fit and so well as that force which was employed on the Nile."—Sir Francis Grenfel.

"13,000 abstaining soldiers will do as much and more work than 15,000 drinkers."—Field Marshall Lord Roberts.

Yet some will read the evidence of these great men and say "I don't believe it."

PATRIOTISM and PRODUCTION

"I would urge the people of ... the farmers of Canada to do their share in preventing Great Britain from suffering want or privation."
HON. MARTIN BURRELL, Minister of Agriculture.

The Empire Needs Many Foods

In the past Great Britain has imported immense quantities of these staple foods from Russia, France, Belgium, Germany and Austria-Hungary as shown by the following:—

Average Imports Years 1910-1913
Wheat	28,439,696 bush.
Oats	23,586,304 "
Barley	15,192,268 "
Corn	7,621,374 "
Peas	703,358 "
Beans	639,653 "
Potatoes	4,721,590 "
Onions	271,569 "
Meat	26,509,766 lbs.
Eggs	121,112,916 doz.
Butter and Cheese	91,755,233 lbs.

The above mentioned sources of supply of staple foods are now, in the main, cut off as a result of the war. Great Britain is looking to Canada to supply a large share of the shortage. Every individual farmer has a duty to perform.

Millions of bushels rather than millions of acres should be Canada's aim.

That there is abundant reason to expect larger returns from the same area is conclusively shown when we compare the average production of the present time with the possible production. Note the following brief table which shows the average in 1914 and possible production per acre.

	Average	Possible
Fall Wheat	20.63	52.
Spring Wheat	14.84	33.
Barley	16.16	69.
Oats	36.30	91.
Corn, Grain	70.	200.
Corn Ensilage (Tons)	12.	19.
Peas	16.33	37.
Beans	18.79	50.
Potatoes	119.40	450.
Turnips	421.81	1000.

By "possible" is meant the actual results which have been obtained by our Experimental Farms and by many farmers. These "possibles" have been obtained under intensive cultivation methods and conditions not altogether possible on the average farm, yet they suggest the great possibilities of increased production. By greater care in the selection of seed, more thorough cultivation, fertilization, better drainage, the average could be raised by at least one-third. That in itself would add at least $150,000,000 to the annual income of Canada from the farm. It would be a great service to the Empire, and this is the year in which to do it.

Increase Your Live Stock

Breeding stock are to-day Canada's most valuable asset. The outstanding feature of the world's farming is that there will soon be a great shortage of meat supplies. Save your breeding stock. Plan to increase your live stock. Europe and the United States, as well as Canada, will pay higher prices for beef, mutton, and bacon in the very near future. Do not sacrifice now. Remember that live stock is the only basis for prosperous agriculture. You are farming, not speculating.

CALEDON COUNCIL.

Council Chamber February, 16, 1915

Council met, Reeve presiding. Members all present except Mr. Hawkins. Minutes of previous meeting read and adopted.

The following communications were received and read, viz.—

From Ontario Good Roads Association inviting Council to send delegates to Good Roads Convention to be held in Toronto, March 22nd-26th.

From Toronto General Hospital re maintenance of Jessie Cope.

From Shale Products, Limited, re taxes.

From T. Coveney Clerk of Albemarle, enclosing copy of resolution passed by Albemarle Council on Jan. 11th.

From Bell Telephone Co., stating that pile of poles at corner of Centre Road and South Townline had been removed.

A deputation headed by Rev. J. Burkholder waited on Council and asked that a larger grant be made to Caledon Public Library, also that a sum be set aside for the purpose of making grants to Public Libraries and distributed according to amount expended for books by said Libraries.

Mr. W. Stubbs addressed Council in reference to roadway opposite lot 14, Centre Road.

The Clerk reported having registered under the provisions of the Vital Statistics Act for the year 1913 as follows —Births, 69; Marriages, 24; Deaths, 41.

Moved by Mr. Kannawin, seconded by Mr. Armstrong, that the request of the deputation regarding Public Library be laid over until there is a full representation of Council. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Hillyard, seconded by Mr. Armstrong, that the usual grant of $8 be made to the Hospital for Sick Children. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Hillyard, seconded by Mr. Kannawin, that considering the large expenditure for the maintenance and repair of our country roads and whereas the automobile traffic is unduly severe, especially when the roads are not of the most firm and compact material, and whereas our country roads usually lack this firmness of texture, the consequence is that autos driven at a rapid rate in the very dry season will remove a large quantity of road material to the sides and ditches. Whereas it is only proper and right that this form of traffic, so largely interested in good roads, should contribute its fair share to the maintenance of the same. We do therefore respectfully ask the Provincial Legislative Assembly to distribute to the different rural municipalities, according to their respective mileage of roads, the full amount now collected by the Province for automobile licenses, or any increase thereon, also that our member of the Legislature be asked to support same. Carried.

A By-law to borrow money to meet the current expenditure of the Township until the taxes to be levied therefor are collected was introduced and regularly passed.

The Auditors' report for the year 1914 was presented and laid over.

The following wire fence petitions were received viz.—I. Dodds, 170 rods; T. McPherson, 40 rods; J. E. Woodland, 56 rods.

The following accounts were examined and passed and the Reeve's order issued for their payment, viz.

G. Glassford, repairing roadway in Charleston	$ 75
J. B. Aikit, P.W. for indigents	1 25
Mrs. Jas. Stubbs, work on County road	2 00
G. G. Smith, 12 O commutation due his division	33 00
Municipal World, supplies	19 26
L. H. Willis, subscription for 6 copies Municipal World	5 00
L. H. Willis, registration, births, marriages and deaths	26 80
W. S. Murphy, law costs in full for 1914	15 96
I. Dodds, bonus on 170 rods wire fence	14 75
T. McPherson, bonus on 40 rods of wire fence	10 00
J. E. Woodland, bonus on 56 rods of wire fence	14 00
H. Henderson, P.W. goods for W. Bordridge, indigent	14 11
J. Bradley, grant for gravelling 5th line, west	30 00
S. O. McDonald, one lamb killed by dogs	2 50

Moved by Mr. Hillyard, seconded by Mr. Kannawin, that when this Council adjourns to-day it stands adjourned until Tuesday, March 9th, next. Carried.

NOTICE.

Mr. Kannawin gave notice that he will, at next meeting of Council, ask leave to introduce a bill appointing Road Overseers, Pound Keepers and other officers and defining their duties.

On motion Council adjourned.

L. H. WILLIS, Clerk. THOS. QUINN, Reeve

WHEN OUR INTEREST IS GONE.

An uninterested person lives an uninteresting life. And life becomes a daily, hourly punishment when it loses its interest to us. But how many persons are suffering in just that way? The keen interest that everything had to them when they were in their teens or twenties is gone. They thought they never could have enough of life then; now they have too much of it every day. Nothing can hold their lasting enthusiasm. Life has become a landscape out of which the colors have gone. Yet for these very persons all the lost interest can be restored, better than that, a new interest can be created which shall satisfy with ever fresh and everlasting surprises. The way? By letting Christ put his hand against their worst enemies, sin and self. In Israel, one day, "the hand of Jehovah was against the Philistines," and it continued to be so "all the days of Samuel." And the cities that Israel had lost to the enemy were restored. God can restore to us what we never thought to have again. He does it when we let him replace our self with Christ. Then our life begins to be the life of God. And interest never wanes when we live the supernatural life that God lives.

NEWSPAPER MAN WON.

Frank Williams Lost Libel Action Against Peel Banner.

Report of Cases Tried at Peel Assizes Last Week.

Peel Spring Assize Court opened at the Court House, Brampton, on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock and closed at ten o'clock on Wednesday night.

Justice Lennox was the trial judge. There was no grand jury at this court there being no criminal case on the docket to require their consideration.

After congratulating the County on the absence of crime within its borders, Judge Lennox made an address on subjects arising out of the war. He urged the farmers to increase the production of their farms as much as possible and to attend the meetings being held to further this object. He urged recruiting and the necessity of contributing as much as possible to patriotic funds. The Judge's address was listened to with great interest by the large audience.

There were three cases on the docket, all actions for damages brought by Frank Austin Williams against as many defendants. One was an action for alleged slander against Dr. Lawson, another of libel against A. F. Dick publisher of this paper, and the third a double-header against Hy. Schooley for alleged slander and malicious prosecution.

The trouble arose out of the burglary at the Booth residence last November the home of Mr. Schooley. Our readers are so familiar with the particulars that there is no necessity for entering into details.

The first action tried was that against Dr Lawson. It was concluded about six o'clock when the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty about three o'clock. Mr. Hugh Guthrie, of Guelph, appeared for Mr. Dick, and made a capital address to the jury. Mr. Guthrie is a most pleasing speaker and he was in fine form, and had a good subject on the liberty of the press to which he did full justice. He read the article complained of on Nov. 12th amid a titter of laughter but when he came to the last paragraph where we gave the receipt "How to Bag Your Burglar" a gale of laughter swept the courtroom. Mr. Guthrie is "some reader" and as an elocutionist we believe he would make a hit if he had us to write pieces for him.

The last action began yesterday afternoon and ran on until six o'clock when the jury retired. The charge of malicious prosecution against Mr. Schooley was taken from the jury by the judge and they retired to consider the evidence offered in the slander action. About nine o'clock a verdict of not guilty was brought in.

Mr. McKay, of Toronto, and Mr. B. F. Justin, K.C., of Brampton, appeared for Mr. Williams in all three actions.

The results in these actions agree with the predictions generally made by the public.—Peel Banner.

Mrs. T. H. Cornett has leased her cheese factory at Conover in Melancthon township to Gilbert Horton, of Peterboro.

Thos. McKenzie, a well-known resident of Adjala, passed away at his home near Raney's Church a week ago Sunday. Deceased was 36 years old and had been ill with tuberculosis for two years. He is survived by his mother and several sisters and brothers.

Henry Gilmore, a former resident of Mulmur, died in Toronto recently at the advanced age of 82 years.

Beatty Has Won His Way to the Top By Pluck and Merit

TO Rear-Admiral Sir David Beatty has fallen the honor of commanding the British squadrons which have won the two victories thus far in the North Sea. The first was the raid on Heligoland early in the war, when three German cruisers and two torpedo-boat destroyers were sunk, and a number of German torpedo-boats badly damaged, with no corresponding loss on the British side. The second came only a few weeks ago when Beatty's fleet intercepted the raiding squadron and sank the Blucher and Kolberg and disabled two battle cruisers.

Sir David Beatty was made a Knight Commander of the Order of the Bath o[illegible] this year. The new distinction came just in time to enable Sir David and Lady Beatty to air it in St. Petersburg, in connection with the official visit to Russian waters of the first cruiser squadron which he commands. Their particularly gracious reception by the Czar and Czarina was due to the very warm regard in which they are held by Queen Alexandra, by King George, and by his consort.

The Beattys were fortunate enough to lease for several autumns in succession one or the other of the castles within driving distance of Balmoral, and as Beatty was an old naval chum and comrade of George V., Queen Mary, then Princess of Wales, while staying at Abergeldie Castle, and Queen Alexandra at Balmoral, were induced to establish neighborly relations with Lady Beatty.

These relations were further cemented by the intimacy which soon developed between the Beatty children and those of the then Prince and Princess of Wales, King Edward, too, took a great fancy to the Beattys, and appointed David Beatty to his suite, as one of his naval aides-de-camp.

It is only fair to Sir David to add that he owes his rapid promotion and his advancement to the rank of rear-admiral, at the wonderfully early age of 37, quite as much to distinguished war service as to royal favor. He was employed in Egypt for several years under Lord Kitchener, and when Admiral Sir Colin Keppel was wounded took command of the gunboat flotilla on the Nile, fighting the enemy with great persistence and courage, and winning the distinguished service order. His promotion to the rank of commander came to him two years later as a reward for his gallantry in the battles of Atbara and Omdurman in 1898.

The Boxer troubles, and the siege of the foreign legation at Pekin, found him serving as commander on the battleship Barfleur, in the China seas. And so great were the pluck and resourcefulness which he displayed, particularly in connection with the capture of a couple of Chinese batteries at the head of a small force of bluejackets, during which he was twice wounded, that he was promoted to the rank of captain, although but 29 years of age at the time.

He stands particularly well at the Admiralty, which regards him as one of its most capable staff officers, and if his advancement continues at the present rate of progress, it looks very much as if he were destined to attain the rank of admiral of the fleet, which is the naval equivalent of field marshal, long before he attains the age of 60.

One thing which commends him to the authorities at Whitehall, and more especially to King George, is his reticence and disinclination to eloquence and chatter. He is the soul of discretion, and in society is very popular, owing to his absence of manifestations of superiority, with no tiresome seriousness or strenuous nonsense about him.

Targets Are Small.

In a running sea fight between squadrons of high speed the enemy ships are hardly visible. Their hulls would probably be below the horizon so that their masts, perhaps the tops of their funnels, and a smear of smoke would make the target, which would appear about the size of a threepenny-bit. Upon that tiny and moving silhouette the great guns are trained.

THE BLOOD IS THE STREAM OF LIFE

Pure Blood Is Absolutely Necessary To Health

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" PURIFIES

These Wonderful Tablets, Made of Fruit Juices, Are The Best Of All Tonics To Purify And Enrich The Blood.

Pure, rich blood can flow only in a clean body. Now, a clean body is one in which the waste matter is regularly and naturally eliminated from the system. The blood cannot be pure when the skin action is weak, when the stomach does not digest the food properly, when the bowels do not move regularly, when the kidneys are strained or overworked.

Pure blood is the result of perfect health and harmony of stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and skin.

"Fruit-a-tives", by their wonderful action on all these organs, keeps the whole system as clean as Nature intended our bodies to be clean.

"Fruit-a-tives" tones up, invigorates, strengthens, purifies, cleans and gives pure, rich, clean blood that is, in truth, the stream of life.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

John Thompson, the genial proprietor of the Shelburne-Rosemont stage line, had a close call on Saturday last on his way to Rosemont. He was driving down Parson's hill, this side of Violet Hill, when the neck yoke broke and John was yanked out of his seat into the road quicker than you could land a speckled trout in fly time. Fortunately the four traces came undone at the same time and the horses got clear of the sleigh and ran away. R. J. Fleming, accompanied by W. J. Thompson, were at the bottom of the hill, coming westward. They stopped their team and got out of the sleigh to try and stop the runaway team. They were both knocked down and W. J. Thompson received a bad cut on the left leg. He got the wound dressed when he came to Shelburne. John received a bad shaking up but was not injured.—Free Press.

Lord Haldane Was The Real Maker of The British Army

VISCOUNT HALDANE of Cloan K.T., P.C., F.R.S., LL.D. D.C.L., etc., etc., has won fame and influence among many walks of life. As Lord Chancellor he is the official head of the profession in which for a quarter of a century he practiced with commanding distinction. No counsel of our times has carried greater weight in his arguments before the House of Lords and the Privy Council. In the six and a half years that he spent at the War Office he proved himself a reformer of a kind rare in any land. The great defect of British statesmen in the past has been their lack of philosophical training. They never looked all around a subject. For instance, they never seemed to have asked themselves why they needed an army or what sort of an army they ought to have.

Those were precisely the questions that Mr. Haldane, as he then was, inevitably put to himself on first taking charge of the War Office in 1905. "I got hold of the best men I could," was Lord Haldane' account of his methods, "and I said to them, 'Will you kindly make out a list of all the things that exist and let me survey them and then ask the question "Why do each of these things exist? What is the hole they are supposed to fit? What is the purpose of each item and its cost relative to the amount of money to be spent?"'"

VISCOUNT HALDANE.

In these and similar inquiries Lord Haldane spent a year or more of hard thinking. Then he produced his scheme. It was an extremely comprehensive, reasoned and original plan, thought out to its minutest detail, flexible, and coherent in all its parts, for remodeling the armed forces of the crown on a basis of county patriotism and county organization. Lord Haldane accomplished at the War Office all but everything he set out to do. He created the Territorials, established an Officers' Training Corps, perfected the expeditionary force, reorganized the Reserve, made the General Staff a power in the army and throughout the Empire, and restored the confidence, both of the soldiers and of the public in the spirit and also in the capacity of the War Office. And he accomplished all this, often in the teeth of opposition from his own party, without fuss or self-advertising and with imperturbable serenity and persuasiveness. "He left the army," said Sir John French two and a half years ago, "having inaugurated and made a military fighting machine and a system of national defences such as this country never had before." Lord Haldane furnished the framework of a nation in arms; time and the experience of the present war must necessarily expand or modify his reforms in many details; but their broad and deep foundations are never likely to be disturbed.

It is a favorite dogma of his that it is the all-round man who makes the best specialist. As an educational enthusiast he is constantly trying to drive it into his countrymen that the two main aims of modern education are the spread of culture for culture's sake and the application of knowledge to industry; that these two aims cannot be separated; that there can be no technical instruction which is worth anything except the basis of a sound general education; and that the best specialist is the man with the best all-round and the most catholic training. He never loses a chance of insisting that applied science in its highest form is only possible on a wide foundation of general science and of a comprehensive intellectual schooling; and that what is true of science in the narrower sense is also true of learning in the broader sense.

Cigars as Currency.

A new form of currency has been introduced into the German army. Ordinary coin has lost its value now that it is impossible to buy anything in the villages at the base, and cigars take the place of money. A piece of sausage as big as a hand costs four cigars; a pair of warm gloves or a flask of cognac, thirty cigars. Muddy boots are cleaned for two cigars.

Wearing Leather Buttons.

The Brass buttons on the uniforms of the Royal Engineers are being changed for dark brown leather buttons, which are less conspicuous on the battlefield.

COULD NOT STAND ON FEET

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief In Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich. — "I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to get a drink every few minutes, and before I did my dusting I would have to lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I showed it to my husband and he said 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong." —Mrs. ALONZO L. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Not Well Enough to Work.

In these words is hidden the tragedy of many a woman, housekeeper or wage earner who supports herself and is often helping to support a family, on meagre wages. Whether in house, office, factory, shop, store or kitchen, women should remember that there is one tried and true remedy for the ills to which women are prone, and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It promotes that vigor which makes work easy. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

PRINTED BUTTER WRAPPERS.

It has been customary to sell dairy butter in plain wrappers, but it will be seen from the appended circular issued by the Department of Agriculture that it is now against the law to sell dairy butter in pound prints, unless it is branded. The Banner has been asked to bring this matter to the notice of the farmers in this district. The circular is as follows:

"The regulations made under the authority of the Act came into force on Septem er 1st, and provide that when dairy butter is put up in blocks, squares or prints and wrapped in parchment paper, the paper shall be printed or branded with the words "Dairy Butter" in letters at least one quarter-inch square, in addition to any other wording that the buttermaker may desire to use. There is nothing in the Act or Regulations to prevent the use of the word "Separator" in addition to the words "Dairy Butter" but no such grade as "Separator" is recognized by the law. The Butter Act of 1906 defines only two grades, namely, "Dairy" and "Creamery". The Dairy Industry Act of 1914 defines a third grade as "Whey" butter. Butter makers may use form of printing or branding, including the words "Dairy Butter," which is not inconsistent with the definition of dairy butter. Butter in rolls, crocks or tubs is not required to be branded. The definition of dairy butter is found in Section 3 of the Act and is the same as it was in the Butter Act of 1903. It reads as follows:—

(d) "Dairy" means a place where the milk or cream of less than fifty cows is manufactured into butter.

(e) "Dairy Butter" means butter which is manufactured in a dairy."

Had No Power Over the Limbs

Locomotor Ataxia, Heart Trouble and Nervous Spells Yielded to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It would be easy to tell you how Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures locomotor ataxia and derangements of heart and nerves, but it may be more satisfactory to you to read this letter.

Mrs. Thos. Allan, R.F.D. 3, Stouffville, Ont., writes:—"Five years ago I suffered a complete breakdown, and frequently had palpitation of the heart. Since that illness I have had many spells, had no power over my limbs (locomotor ataxia) and could not walk straight. At night I would have severe nervous spells, with heart palpitation, and would shake as though I had the ague. I felt improvement after using the first box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after continuing the treatment can now walk, eat and sleep well, have no nervous spells and do not require heart medicine. I have told several of my neighbors of the splendid results obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

HYDRANTS NOT FROZEN

Reeve and Town Engineer Take Issue With Fire Brigade Captain Nason

Report of Proceedings at Last Town Council Meeting.

A report of the last meeting of the Town Council, which took place on Monday night, March 1st, was unavoidably withheld until this week's issue. Every member of the Council was present at the meeting, which was also attended by quite a number of spectators.

The following accounts were ordered to be paid :—J. F. Bennett, $9 ; E. C. Clarke, $27.25 ; Thos. Campbell, $2.21 ; Sam. Street, .68 ; Joseph Ogston, $1.05 ; John McConnell, $1.91 ; Dominion Express Co., .40; Victor Fire Extinguisher Co. $8.75 ; Sarah King, $15 ; C. C. G. Hannah, $9.95 ; Municipal World, $8.75 ; Pine River Light & Power Co., $139.50 ; Frampton Bros., $1. An account from the Canadian Assurance Co., was referred to the Finance Committee to bring in a report at the next meeting.

The Women's Institute and the Daughters of the Empire both wrote asking the council to give them a rebate on rent paid for the use of the Opera House. The Women's Institute paid $11 for two nights and will receive a rebate of $5.50, while the Daughters of the Empire, who paid $8, will receive $5.

Irwin Stephenson complained against a tax of $3.60, which he claims is an error in the assessment roll. The matter was referred to the Court of Revision.

The Hydro Electric Power Commission submitted a rough report on the electric wiring of the town and pronounced it in a very bad condition. The Commission suggested that an expert inspector should be employed to make a thorough examination of the business section of the town. This could be done in two days at a very small cost. The communication was referred to a committee for report.

Dr. T. H. Henry, Medical Health Officer, reported a family who are in distressed circumstances. The house, the Medical Health Officer stated, was in a very bad condition, the windows being broken and the walls and ceiling in a very unsanitary shape. Mr. Norton, Inspector of the Children's Aid Society, has taken hold of the matter and the Council decided to give him whatever assistance it can.

Capt. John Nason, of the Fire Brigade, submitted a report regarding the condition of the town's fire fighting equipment. In his report Mr. Nason stated that nearly all of the hydrants were frozen. He asked for two more fire alarm boxes, one in the East Ward and one in the West Ward. Reeve Fairbairn took strong exception to the report and told the council that on Saturday he had made an inspection of the hydrants in company with town engineer King and found that only four were frozen out of the total of twenty-four. After some discussion the Reeve, the Engineer and Captain of the Fire Brigade were instructed to bring in another report. Some of the firemen complained that they were not able to hear the fire bell when it was rung at nights. Members of the council thought that it might be necessary to make certain alterations in the belfry.

The council has decided to rent the old council chamber to Sam. Stump for use of the International Bible Association for Sunday meetings.

Mr. R. Morrow, leader of the recently organized Citizens' Band, was asked to submit a list of all instruments belonging to the town. Mayor Campbell suggested that some member of the band be bonded to look after the instruments and other band property.

Reeve Fairbairn submitted a report of the recent Hydro Radial convention in Toronto. Mr. Fairbairn, Mayor Campbell and Mr. A. E. Annis represented the municipality at the convention. The local delegates were greatly impressed with the possibilities of Hydro Radial Railways, and are honeful that Orangeville will get one of these lines in the near future.

Orangeville Presbytery.

At the meeting of Orangeville Presbytery in St. Andrew's Church on Tuesday, the Clerk, Rev. J. A. Matheson, presented the annual financial report, which showed quite a large increase in the contributions for the budget. Rev. J. Burkholder submitted an excellent report on Social Service and Evangelism. The Keldon and Levendale Home Mission field was raised to the status of an augmented charge and will probably hear candidates for pastor next month. Revs. W. M. Morris, Orangeville, R. S. Scott, Hillsburg, John Lindsay, Erin, and J. Burkholder, Caledon, were appointed Commissioners to the General Assembly, which meets in Kingston in June. Alton, Laurel, Mono Mills and Camilla congregations will send representative elders.

For Active Service.

Any persons who wish to enlist for active service may obtain full particulars upon application to Sergt. E. MacPherson at the Orangeville Public Library.

COOPER GIVEN THREE YEARS.

Was Found Guilty of Receiving Stolen Goods.

Report of Cases Tried at the Spring Assizes This Week.

The Spring Assizes for the County of Dufferin opened in the Court House here on Tuesday afternoon, with Chief Justice Sir William Mulock presiding. The only criminal business was the case of Peter Jesse Cooper, who was arrested and lodged in the County Gaol a few weeks ago on the charge of stealing a quantity of grain from a granary on Mr. John Harshaw's farm. Subsequent to his arrest, Cooper was also charged with stealing a quantity of clothing and other goods, the property of Wm. Potter & Son, of Tottenham. The charges against Cooper and his son, Harry, who was arrested at the same time had created intense interest throughout the whole district. As a consequence the court room was crowded to the doors during the trial.

County Crown Attorney J. L. Island, who acted as Crown Prosecutor, presented four indictments against the elder Cooper, who had elected to go before a jury. Two were for theft of goods from the Harshaw farm and Potter's siding near Barrie and two for receiving stolen goods knowing them to be stolen. About 3.20 on Tuesday afternoon the Grand Jury returned true bills in all four cases.

The prisoner was immediately arraigned, entered a plea of "not guilty" and stated that he was ready for trial. The selection of a petit jury to try the case occupied considerable time, Mr. C. R. McKeown, K.C., who had been appointed by the Court to defend the prisoner, objecting to some nine jurors. The jurors finally selected were Geo. Coutts, Johnston Bole, Sam. J. Brown, Wm. Campbell, John Cauthers, Wm. Ewing, E. Carscadden, Sam. Depew, Thos. O. East, W. J. Chipchase, Alex. McVanel and Robert Baird.

John Harshaw, who was the first witness for the Crown, gave practically the same evidence as at the preliminary investigation. Constable Marshall told of his visit to Cooper's place at Mono Centre and identified grain and other goods which he had found on the premises. Thos. White, Ernest Avison, Mabel Cooper, Harry M. Cooper, accused's son, Wm. Potter, Alfred P. Potter and Wm. Fleming were the other Crown witnesses.

Cooper, who entered the witness box in his own defence, denied that he had visited Harshaw's place with his son. His story was that the younger man had left his place with his team and sleigh about 11 o'clock on the night of the theft. Witness did not know where the young man went, but he returned toward morning and asked for help, stating that he had got stuck on the road. Cooper thereupon hitched up his own team and helped his son home with the load. The prisoner admitted receiving and keeping goods which the younger man brought to his place, but denied that he knew they were stolen.

The Court sat at night on Tuesday and the evidence was all in about 9 o'clock. Then followed the addresses of Counsel and His Lordship's charge to the jury. The jury retired at 10.25 p.m., and ten minutes before midnight returned with a verdict finding the prisoner guilty of receiving stolen goods. The verdict was recorded in the following terms :—

"The verdict of the jury is that the prisoner is not guilty of the charges of theft set forth in the within indictments, but is guilty of the two charges of receiving stolen goods."

Cooper broke down and wept freely when he learned the verdict. After addressing a few remarks to the prisoner on the seriousness of his offence His Lordship imposed a sentence of three years in Kingston penitentiary.

The trial of Harry Cooper, the younger prisoner, will be resumed by Judge Fisher on Friday.

There were two non-jury cases on the civil list. May vs. Crawford, an action to compel specific performance of an agreement for the sale of a 350 acre farm in Adjala, was settled out of Court, partly through the good offices of the Chief Justice, whose offer to discuss a settlement with the litigants was accepted. A half hour conference resulted in the withdrawal of the case. The plaintiffs are John W. and Albert May, farmers in Albion township, and the defendant is John Geo. Crawford, an Adjala farmer. By the terms of settlement the agreement is set aside and each of the parties pay his or their own costs. A. A. Hughson and J. L. Island for plff.; Geo. Robb, Orangeville, and W. A. J. Bell, K.C., Alliston, for deft.

Hartley vs. Dickson, the other civil case, was fought out in Court. The plaintiff, A. N. Hartley, formerly of Flesherton, brought suit against Mrs. Adeline Dickson, formerly Mrs. Gamon, for damages due to breach of an agreement for the sale of the furnishings and the lease of the Royal Hotel in Shelburne. After coming to an agreement, the parties had some further negotiations on the subject of a reduction in the amount of the deposit which the plaintiff had undertaken to make. Eventually the whole deal fell through. Judgment was given dismissing the action and reserving decision as to the costs. H. G. Tucker, Owen Sound, for plff.; C. R. McKeown K.C., for deft.

The Court concluded shortly before 12 o'clock (noon) yesterday.

The members of the Grand Jury, which found true bills against Cooper were Wm. H. Allen, A. E. Annis (Foreman), T. [illegible] Anderson, J. J. Anderson, Wesley Allen, Geo. Bruce, Dan. J. Ball, R. W. Brett, Robt. Brown, Henry Christian, John Cruikshank, Matthew McPherson, and William Harrison.

The Grand Jury's presentment, a rather important deliverance, was worded as follows :—

To His Lordship
Chief Justice Sir William Mulock:

We, your grand jurors, in making our presentment desire to express our pleasure in the fact that the criminal docket is so light, and that we are not required to deal with crimes of any nature against the person.

In your remarks and conclusions as to the importance of the Grand Jury and the position it occupies in the administration of justice for the protection of persons unfairly charged with an offence we fully concur.

In accordance with your instructions and in pursuance of our duties we have visited the jail and hospital. We found the inmates of the jail in very comfortable circumstances. Upon enquiry, no complaints were made as to the food supplied or usage received by them. The beds are clean, also the kitchen and other parts of the building. The Governor and his wife are to be congratulated on the manner in which the jail is kept and while the inmates are apparently satisfied with the treatment they are receiving it seems that some of those who are imprisoned are deserving of more consideration that can possibly be given them under the circumstances in which they are placed. They have not committed any crime against the laws of the land, yet are compelled to occupy cells which are only intended for criminals. We feel that the provision of a suitable place for such persons is a question that the County of Dufferin should face and settle as soon as possible. We realize that there are only a few who are really deserving at present to be confined, yet there are doubtless many in the county who should be looked after by the public, but who will not submit to the injustice and indignity of being placed in jail. We would suggest that strong recommendations be made to the County Council of the County of Dufferin to take this matter into consideration and provide for the unfortunate of the county.

Your grand jurors visited the hospital and found it a model of cleanliness, and it appeared to be managed in a very capable manner. Miss Barclay, the Matron, is to be congratulated on the condition of the Hospital, and her wishes for a new wing to be constructed should be complied with. It is an institution which should appeal to everyone who has the money to spare and is in sympathy with the suffering.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A. E. Annis,
Foreman.

MASONIC AT HOME.

Members of Harris Lodge Entertain Their Lady Friends.

The officers and members of Harris Masonic Lodge held a delightful At Home on Tuesday night. The invitations were limited to members of the Lodge and their lady friends. About 150 people attended the function, which was a brilliant success in every respect. The early part of the night was spent in progressive euchre and an interesting Name Guessing Contest. Luncheon was served about midnight and was followed by a short musical program, consisting of selections by St. Mark's orchestra, a couple of numbers by the Orangeville Male Quartette, a duet by Messrs. Jesson and Harding and a violin solo by Miss Clara Hulse. The orchestra also furnished delightful music during luncheon. Bro. Alex. Firth presided acceptably while the programme was being given. A toast to "The Ladies" was proposed by Bro. A. E. Annis, who spoke in a happy vein. Bro. Rev. W. M. Morris making an equally happy response. Shortly before the gathering dispersed the ladies showed their appreciation of the kindly hospitality of the Lodge by proposing a vote of thanks, Mrs. R. H. Robinson making and Mrs. J. B. Adamson seconding the motion. Handsome prizes were given by the Lodge, the winners being :—highest number of points — Mrs. Parkinson and Mr. Herb. Patterson ; lowest number of points, Mrs. Wm. Algie and Mr. A. Hill ; lone hands, Mrs. J. D. Kingsboro and Mr. E. G. Bingham ; name guessing contest, Miss Margaret Scott. The Lodge hall and refreshment rooms were attractively decorated with flags and bunting and looked very pretty indeed. The happy gathering was brought to a close about one o'clock all joining in a whole-hearted rendering of the National Anthem. Too much praise cannot be given to the Worshipful Master, W. Bro. A. N. Adams, and his energetic staff of officers for the complete manner in which they planned and carried out the arrangements for the At Home.

A Business Change

T. Wright & Son have bought back the butchering and meat business which they sold to Wm. Camplin & Son about ten months ago. Messrs. Wright have conducted this business successfully for upwards of thirty years and their numerous friends and customers will be quite pleased to see them in charge again. Messrs. Camplin & Sons are excellent citizens and first-class business men and we hope that their retirement from business will not necessarily mean that they will remove from Orangeville.

Rifle Association Annual

The annual meeting of the Orangeville Rifle Association will be held in the Public Library Auditorium on Wednesday, March 24th, at 8p.m. All former members and any wishing to join this year are urged to attend.

NEAR FIGHTING LINE

Canadians Are Within Sound of Firing in France.

Country Still Bears Marks of German Invasion.

Mr. and Mrs. B. McGuire have received the following letter, dated Feb. 15th, from their son, Lieut. H. B. McGuire, who is now in France with the 4th Battalion of the First Canadian Contingent :—

My Dear Folks :

We have been very busy for several days past, and we are now situated in territory which we must not say very much about. There is no need for my address in order that your letters reach me, for after slight delay they are forwarded to me. There is now a large mail being sorted and I hope to get your letters.

It has been a very interesting and hard journey since we left merry England. We have had very hard and heavy rain the last day at Salisbury and this made our moving rather disagreeable. We entrained for we know not where. England looked pretty good to all of us after living on the Plains so long. The day was beautiful and the country through which we passed was certainly grand. I had a heavy job detraining the wagon carts, ammunition, horses, etc., from our two trains and embarking same on the boat. My men worked like trojans and we did it in record time, which speaks well for my husky men. We had a rather rough voyage and, after considerable delay, disembarked at ——. There, too, we had more heavy work disembarking and entraining and our battalion gained praise for its discipline and order and work when travelling through a new country.

We travelled in box cars like cattle cars. They are smaller cars than at home, hardly half the size. With 40 men and equipment in each car, it was very crowded—too crowded for comfort, almost impossible for us to sit down let alone lie down. This trip was also very much delayed. I might say that the boat trip was not very pleasant, as the boat was a cattle ship, and the men slept in the cattle pens, with the horses and all over the ship. Active service comforts are with us sure, and everyone is very happy and jolly throughout. We enjoyed our trip through this country very much. Passing through each town everyone tried our new French language on the "poor" inhabitants. We can make ourselves understood alright anyway. We halted at a hald dozen points where we received hot tea and coffee and rations. The French are very friendly and will do anything for us. The country distinctly shows itself to be in a state of war, with its soldiers everywhere. Many and curious are the uniforms. Most of the male inhabitants are in uniform. As usual it rained with us and seems to follow us.

Unfortunately we had an accident on the trip. Private Norris, one of my men, overbalanced from his car and in trying to save himself swung under the car and was killed. Almost every train had an accident. This makes the third casualty in our company.

We detrained and marched four miles to this place——. Here we are billeted, more or less comfortably, some in houses, schools, barns, etc. I am very comfortably billeted in a large house with three old folk. There are 6 of us here including the Battalion interpreter, and we are endeavoring to increase our French vocabulary. They will do anything for us. To-night we are sitting beside the fire, talking about the war. I have a pair of wooden shoes on my feet as house slippers. We are only a few miles away from the trenches. We can see the flash of the guns and can distinctly hear the roar of the cannon. There seems to be a very heavy, fierce cannonade to-night.

This country and the numerous villages here were overrun with Germans at the beginning of the war. It was here that some heavy fighting took place. Many destroyed buildings and the numerous graves show the effects of the invasion. Some of our men picked up a helmet beside a grave to-day.

The folk in our billet have been telling us all about it. They did not realize the Germans were coming until they walked in and took possession of their house. They used them terribly, though not as severely as in other homes. The inhabitants were allowed to stay in the house, on account of their old age. When the British chased the Germans out they took to the cellar while the fight was on. The house is riddled with shot as are all the houses in this town.

The stories of the terrible assaults of the Germans through this country are enough to make any man rise up against them. Fifty thousand women, including young girls, were assaulted by the beasts. The stories are enough to make one's blood run hot. The way they shot the peaceful inhabitants was terrible. In one case a dozen men were made dig their own graves then shot into them.

There are many Belgian refugees in this district and it is pitiful to see the women and children, barely living. Through it all one is surprised at the cheerfulness of the inhabitants.

We shall be moving about quite often now. I will have a great deal to tell you when I return. It will be impossible to write much or often, but I shall do the best I can at every chance. Our men are very healthy and quite keen at being so close to the Germans. I know we shall do our very best when the time comes, which will be soon now. If the world could only hear of all the dastardly outrages of the Germans, as we have first hand, there would be no delay in recruiting an army. We will have them on the run soon. I have endeavored not to say too much in order that the censors will pass this.

Your loving son,
HARRY.

Sons of Canada

Messrs. Frank Eborall and S. G. Smith, of Toronto, are in town this week endeavoring to organize a local lodge of a new fraternal society known as the Sons of Canada. The Society, which recently secured a Provincial Charter, has made considerable headway in Toronto, where several Lodges have been formed. It is non-political and non-sectarian and its promoters state that its aims are purely social, fraternal and patriotic. To promote fraternalism and foster patriotism for everything Canada uses will be one of the prime objects of the new Society.

Hospital Notes

The regular monthly meeting of The Daughters of the Empire will be held at the home of Mrs. Preston on Friday, March 12th, at 3.30 o'clock.

Any old linen and cotton will be very acceptable if sent to the hospital.

Two bags of potatoes were kindly donated by Mr. Andrew Moffatt.

The Chapter desires to thank the performers of the Old Dramatic Club for their very acceptable presentation of the drama "The Danger Signal" which was given under its auspices in aid of the Hospital and Red Cross funds.

'Echoes of Ireland'

AT CALEDON, MARCH 17th, 1915.

Fine costumes, artistic setting, humor and pathos, with fine music, will combine to make this an event long remembered.

Staged and presented by The Parker Entertainment Bureau of Toronto.

JESSOPVILLE.

A large crowd from the three appointments of Riverview, Melancthon and Pleasant View gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Prior on Friday, Feb. 26th, to bid farewell to them and present them with a purse of money. After the presentation the evening was spent in games and amusements. The address was read by Mrs. Thos. Henry as follows :—

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Prior :—

We, the neighbors and members of the Methodist churches at Riverview, Melancthon and Pleasant View, on the Corbetton circuit, have assembled here this evening for the purpose of giving expression to the high esteem in which you are held in this neighborhood and of voicing the deep regret with which the whole community has learned of your decision to locate at your present home.

During your residence here you have won the goodwill and esteem of everybody with whom you have come in contact. We regret that you are leaving us. We will miss you, Mr. Prior, as a local preacher on the circuit. You have always been ready to help us when we were in need. We will miss you both in our Sunday School. You have always tried to direct our thoughts heavenward. No doubt there have been many times that you have been discouraged, but every cloud has its silver lining. We will miss you as a neighbor. You have always been kind and willing to help us in all things that tend to make a community prosper morally and socially. You have made a large circle of friends, whose memory of you will be lasting, but we realize our loss will be another's gain.

May Divine guidance be given you in making your lives a blessing in the community in which you may reside. Our desire is that prosperity, health and happiness may be granted to you in the future, wherever your lot may be cast. Please accept this purse containing $47.55 not for the value of it, but as a token of the esteem in which you are held. We pray that God's richest blessing may rest upon you, and that if we do not meet on earth again that we may meet in one great family in Heaven, where partings are no more.

Signed on behalf of the three Methodist churches on the Corbetton circuit and your friends and neighbors.

Geo. Hamilton
Archie Vance
Alex. Hogg
James Ferrier
Sam. McBride
Chas. Armstrong.

Mr. Prior made a suitable and feeling reply on behalf of Mrs. Prior and himself.

CALEDON.

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Stubbs are spending a few days at London, Ont.

Don't forget the Irish concert under the auspices of the Public Library on March 17.

We regret to say that Miss T. Arkell is at present suffering from an attack of tonsilitis.

The Old Dramatic Club will present "The Danger Signal" in Alton next Friday evening.

The Methodist church intends holding a Box Social in the Town Hall on the evening of March 23rd.

RICH HILL.

We regret to state that Mr. A. White lost his driver last week. A fall on the ice was the cause of its death.

We are pleased to hear that Mrs. W. J. Hamilton, who has been seriously ill, is recovering. Mrs. J. S. Spence, we are glad to learn, is also improving.

We noticed a cutter with a grey horse going west a few nights ago. Il was that you ?

A sleighload from the corner took in the dance on Wednesday evening.

Isaac Sproule and Doc. Hamilton were the guests of D. and W. Spence on Monday night and Tuesday morning.

Some of our respected citizens are busy with their haying just now.

MONO MILLS.

About seventy of the members of Mono Mills Telephone Association attended a special meeting on Tuesday to consider the matter of purchasing a house into which the Central Office and switch board might be moved if it should become necessary to do so at any time. After considerable discussion the meeting decided to authorize the management to buy and fit up a house. We understand that the management have several properties under consideration and do not expect to have any trouble in making a suitable selection. Mr. A. M. Speers, president of the Association, occupied the chair during the meeting.

Mr. Percy Smith and Miss Greta Harkies, well known young people of this vicinity, were married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Geo. Harkies, on Tuesday afternoon. Quite a large number of friends attended the happy event. Your scribe joins in extending congratulations to the newly wedded couple.

Mr. Will Harkies, a son of Mrs. Geo. Harkies, was married to Miss Hilliard, of West Caledon, yesterday afternoon.

CALEDON EAST.

Sunday was military day in the village, when the "home guards" met in the afternoon to attend divine service in the Methodist church. This body of civilians has been under drill instruction for months past by Lieuts. McCaughrin and Graham, and the perfection they have already attained shows the attention they have given to their instructors and must also prove gratifying to those officers for the trouble they have taken with them. At 2 o'clock, on leaving the armories, they formed up on Main St., when they were put through a number of important movements and evolutions, by the two officers who were present in their full regimentals, all of which were executed with creditable military precision. The combined bugle bands of Mono Road and Caledon East also added interest to the proceedings, being dressed in their uniform and heading the parade of the home guards through the village street. The bugle band, which is a recent organization in this place, has made rapid strides under the leadership of Mr. P. Soalls, who has had them in hand and who we understand has been a bugler in a British force, and who need not be ashamed of the manner in which the boys acquitted themselves on Sunday. At 3 o'clock all made their way to the church, where an excellent and most appropriate sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. J. H. More. A snap shot of the guards was taken on the Main St.

Miss Lilly Weir, of Newmarket, formerly of this place, is visiting friends in this vicinity.

Mr. Aubrey Boyce took possession of the butchering business which he has purchased from Mr. G. Young, and commenced business on Monday morning with a full stock of everything to be found in a butcher's shop.

Social card and euchre parties are all the go in the village and immediate vicinity.

An accident happened at Cardwell Jct. brickworks on Tuesday morning at 4 o'clock. These works are going both day and night at present owing to filling some very large orders and at the time stated a young man named John Perry, in helping to adjust a belt, was seriously injured. The young man was taken home and Drs. Graham and Allison immediately summoned, who attended to his injuries. The patient has not spoken since and lies in a critical condition, slight hopes, we understand, being at present entertained for his recovery.—Bolton Enterprise.

ROSEMONT.

The roads are fine and the sleighing good.

Most of our farmers have their yearly supply of wood gathered in.

Mr. Hammie Hunter made a trip to Whitfield for seed oats last week.

Mr. J. W. Armstrong purchased a 7½ ft. stiff leg cultivator from Mr. J. J. Ryan, of Alliston, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stephens, of Arlington, have moved into our village. Mr. Stephens has installed a gasoline chopping outfit and expects to be ready to start on Tuesday of this week.

Mrs. Ida Johnston and Miss Mary Johnston spent a few days in Toronto last week.

A few of our young people took in the presentation party at Mr. Fred. Wake's at Violet Hill on Friday evening last. They report a good time.

Mr. Robt. Johnston, of Adjala, was buzzing wood in our village this week.

Mr. R. J. Harper purchased a team of horses at Honeywood last week. The price paid was nearly $180 each.

Mr. Leonard Halbert and his sister, Miss Elma, of Granger, spent a couple of days visiting their sister, Mrs. Thos. Henderson, last week.

Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Dudgeon and little son, Edgar, spent last week with friends in Toronto.

Mrs. Jack Fletcher and children, who have been spending the past few months with the former's friends here, have returned to their home in the West. Mrs. Fletcher was accompanied by her sister, Miss Eva Gallaugher, who intends spending the winter out west.

Mrs. Wm. Ludlow and her son, Emerald, spent a few days visiting Shelburne friends last week.

THE RURAL PROBLEM

Means Suggested For Its Cure.

How Best to Keep the Boys and Girls on the Farm.

The following timely article has been contributed by a rural school teacher, who is one of the regular readers of The Banner :—

The rural problem of Ontario is "how to keep the young boys and girls in the country and to prepare them for a country life in its fullest and richest sense." It is of the greatest concern in our national welfare. In this time of strife, what are the leaders of the land strongly advocating? Why, it is for the farmers to break in new land and raise more grain. They are the backbone of the country.

There is no place in Canada for pessimism. The urban population of Canada as compared with the United States is as 34 : 21. How shall we account for this. It is because in Canada the country is building up the city. About 80 per cent. of the loss of the country population goes to the city. Money from the country is the least tribute given to the city.

There must be openings in the community for our ambitious sons and daughters if we are to keep them there. The city is the graveyard of physique and the country is the cradle. The city has the young households and the country has the aged, thus the country is drained. The home suffers as well as the community.

If every immigrant is worth at least $1000, how much more are our Canadian boys and girls worth ? The three outstanding causes for the decrease in the rural population are :—

1. Income—

Under income we see that only the thrifty, hard-working family can afford to hold the land in the face of rising values and increasing taxes. 25 per cent of the wealth of the country goes to the city.

2. Social Conditions—

In pioneer days the rural school was the social centre of the community. There they held their tea-meetings, Christmas concerts, etc. Now, they are rarely opened to social life and the school has no connection with the pupils after school hours or with those young boys and girls who do not attend school. Each teacher can see what the section lacks where she works, and have social gatherings at the school. This isn't your duty, but your opportunity, of bringing not only yourself, but every man, woman and child in the community in touch with one another.

3. Economic Conditions —

Men move to the centres where they can make the best living for themselves and their families. A great responsibility is placed upon us as teachers for the cure of this problem. We train them for city life and not country life.

After obtaining their entrance, they leave our public schools fitted only for commercial life, and without any training, which would adapt them for the surroundings in which they have been reared. The schools and all country institutions, including churches, are to blame for these conditions.

We must rapidly change our rural education and make the country boys and girls proud of being rural born, and the country people at large proud of their position as farmers ; and create in them such a spirit of enthusiasm that the rising generation will be willing to carry out their methods, and adopt other scientific methods which would add to the betterment of the community.

For a detailed account of Ontario's Rural Problem read "Rural Life in Canada," by Rev. John McDougall.

HINDU EGG DANCE.

Curious and Difficult Feat Performed by Girl Jugglers.

Of the many wonderful feats performed by Hindu jugglers one of the most remarkable is the egg dance. Usually it is executed by a girl fantastically dressed. She makes use of a willow wheel, around which at equal distances are threads, and at the end of each thread there is a noose held open by a bend.

This wheel the girl places on her head, while she carries a basket of eggs on her arm. When the music strikes up she begins to dance, and the wheel begins to spin around. She then takes an egg from the basket, places it in one of the thread nooses and throws it from her with sufficient force to draw the knot tight. The spinning of the wheel keeps the thread stretched with the egg at the end of it.

She then takes another egg from the basket, places it in another noose and repeats this until there is an egg in every noose. Her fantastic costume, her perfect motion and all the eggs swinging on stretched threads at once present a curious sight.

It requires much art to execute the dance, for one false step would cause the eggs to be dashed together and the dancer to be disgraced.

After dancing for some time with all the eggs swinging round her head she takes them out of the noose one by one, all the time keeping the wheel balanced and in motion, and again places them in the basket on her arm.

After the performance the spectators are allowed to examine the eggs to see that they are real.—London Ideas.

Railroad "Scout."

The Canadian Pacific Railroad has added to its staff a "scout," whose duty it will be to travel over the system and discover those employes who are especially worthy of advancement. Incidentally he will report those found wanting; but it is significant that his function primarily is not to make complaint, but to make doubly sure that the deserving are recognized.

Wedding Bells Ring at Mono Mills.

About forty guests had the pleasure of witnessing a very pretty wedding at the home of Mrs. Rebekah Harkies on Tuesday, March the 9th, when her daughter, Miss Marguerite Harkies, was united in matrimony to Mr. Percy Wm. Smith by the Rev. J. H. Kerr, of Mono Mills Parish.

At the appointed hour of 3 p.m. the bride, who was attired in a dainty white shadow lace over silk net costume with a long flowing veil and carrying a large bouquet of white carnations was led in and given away by her brother, Mr. Wm. G. Harkies, of Alton, who placed her beside the groom. Miss Eva Henry, costumed in a very pretty white all-over embroidery and bearing a bouquet of pink carnations, attended the bride, while the groom was ably supported by the bride's brother, Mr. Clifford Harkies.

At the close of the wedding ceremony, and after the usual round of very hearty congratulations all present partook of the rich wedding breakfast provided and a little later dispersed wishing the happy couple a pleasant honeymoon and a prosperous life.

The bride was the recipient of many useful and costly presents including a number of cheques, one of which was given by the groom for the sum of $25. The groom also presented the bridesmaid with a handsome silver jewel case and the groomsman with a watch fob.

Of the many friends present a number were from a distance—Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Henry, of Primrose, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Smith and their daughter, Laura, Mrs. Thos. Hilliard and family, Mr. W. G. Harkies and Miss Annie Hilliard, of Alton, and Mrs. I. Hillock, of Orangeville.

MISS B. REID announces her Spring Millinery Opening in her new premises east of the Adamson Hardware Co's. store on Wednesday, March 17th. Everybody is cordially invited to come.

Domestic Lectures.

For the past two weeks the Orangeville Branch of the Women's Institute have been giving Lectures on Domestic Science in the Bank of Hamilton Block.

The introduction of this Science into our town has proved an unqualified success, judging from the reports of the ladies. We understand arrangements were made for the accommodation of 40 women, while the attendance on one day in the second week reached 88. We therefore believe the Science has come to stay.

The women were very fortunate in having Miss Gray sent as their Instructress. They report her a splendid speaker, very distinct, always painstaking and ready to answer the questions asked, in the minutest detail. Miss Gray is also an Instructress of Home Art and Decoration, so the ladies hope to secure her services for that purpose in the near future.

WEST MONO.

Divine service will be held (D.V.) on Sunday, Mar. 14th, in Herald Angel Church at 11 a.m.; St. Luke's, 3 p.m. and St. Matthew's, 7 p.m.

ON A GOVERNMENT CLAIM.

Don't ask me my name, an old bachelor I am,
I'll bet all the same, I've a very good plan.
You will find me down south on the Catcham Creek plain,
A starving to death on a Government claim.

Hurrah for this country, the land of the free.
The home of the gopher, bed bug and flea.
I will tell of its joys and sing of its fame,
While starving to death on a Government claim.

My mansion is built of the natural soil,
The walls are erected according to toil.
The roof has no pitch, but is level and plain,
Will be sure to get wet should it happen to rain.

Oh I have a good time, and live at my ease,
On common jack rabbits, cakes and old cheese.
Then it's come to this country, there is a home for You all.
Where the wind never ceases, and the rain never falls.

Oh how happy I feel on that Government claim,
Where I have nothing to lose and nothing to gain.
Where the sun never sets, but sweetly remains,
'Till it burns up our crops, on our Government claims.

I have nothing to eat and nothing to wear,
So nothing from nothing is honest and fair.
It's here I did settle, and here I must stay,
For my money is all gone, and I can't get away.

Hurrah for this country, where the blizzards arise,
Where the sun never sets, and the fleas never die.
There's nothing that will make a man more profane,
Than to be starving to death on a Government claim.

Chorus.

Come join in the chorus,
We will sing of its fame;
You poor lonely settler,
That's stuck on a claim.

—J. H.—Barker N.Y. Register.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

HE HELPED TAKE CALAIS.

This "Boche" Has a Strange Idea of the Operations.

Writing to his home in London England, a professional man, who is in Northern France, says:

"I have just had a short talk with a group of German prisoners. They were men of an infantry regiment taken prisoner a day or so ago to the southeast of Ypres.

"There were 28 altogether. The railway journey seemed to have put them in good humor. They preferred the third class wooden benches of the Northern Railway of France to the mud and misery of the trenches, and no doubt found it more agreeable to receive a good ration of food from the enemy than bullets and shells.

"Looking at them one could not help feeling that to these fellows capture was a relief. Meanwhile they have been taken to the south of France, where they will find themselves fairly comfortable. The railway carriages that conveyed them were steam-heated—a luxury which is rarely provided for the unhappy Belgian and French refugees.

"Their ignorance was incredible. They did not even know the name of the town near which they were made prisoners, they had no idea where they were. As for the battle itself, it was in the main an enigma to them. All that they could say was that the order to advance was given and that they had been assured two days before that the allies had been violently attacked to the south and had been obliged to weaken the front opposed to them, and that victory would be easy.

They started by invading one of our trenches, but towards evening they perceived that the allies had completely turned them. Surrounded on every side they gave themselves up, quite glad to have come out of the matter so cheaply.

"Their appearance could not have been more neglected or wretched. Not merely did they bear marks of the life in the trenches, masses of mud and stains of dirt, but their uniforms hardly hung together.

The youngest prisoner was about 17. He learned that he was going into the fighting line only three days before he was put into the trenches.

"The oldest of them professed to be 56. He was a typical peasant, dull and stupid. His ignorance was colossal and his opinions of things very curious. He insisted that he had taken part in the capture of Calais.

"I tried to persuade him that the port he had entered was not Calais, but Ostend. For an instant his faith was shaken, but he soon recovered his tranquility of mind. "You are mistaken," he said to me. 'It was Calais I went into. My officer told me so.'

"He asked me for tobacco, but I had none. With a disappointed look he climbed up into the compartment, and the train steamed off for the sunny skies of Southern France."

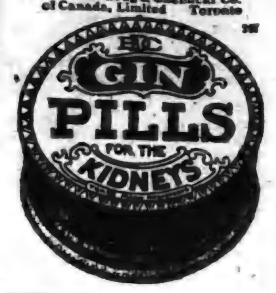
LOOKING FOR BATTERIES.

How British Cavalry at the Front Draw the Enemy's Fire.

The accompanying snapshot, which by the way shows a larger section of the theatre of the war than is usually permitted by the censor these days, shows a strategical operation which is very common along the front. It depicts a troop of British cavalry seeking the location of the guns by drawing their fire. When the Germans alter the disposition of their artillery it becomes the business of the cavalry to pretend that the guns have been found by other means and to charge across the intervening space as if they were bent on capturing the battery. The Germans believing it a bona fide attack fire and artillery officers posted in places of vantage behind note the positions of the puffs of smoke. After that, with the immense increase in the artillery of the allies, the silencing of the battery is only a matter of a few hours.

CAVALRY DRAWING FIRE.

Soldiers' Cinemas.



Letters from soldiers in the trenches tell of the cinematograph entertainments which are given to the "Tommies" in disused sheds situated in the rear of the firing line. They are organized by wealthy citizens of France to entertain the soldiers who are resting after their exertions in the trenches.

Convict Wants to Fight.

A letter to his mother from Dieudonne, the Paris auto bandit, says he is sorry he did not die on the guillotine instead of getting a commutation of sentence, because he can't go to the front and fight.

CHANGES IN BELIEF.

There has been a tremendous change in beliefs during the past generation in many things that go to make for good order. Take for one thing the question of future punishment. During the first half of the last century the belief in some form of future punishment was almost universal. There were professed infidels and atheists; but even the wicked feared the wrath to come. There was a belief that in the future a just God would punish the sinner. There was more or less arguing over the question of a literal hell, which the opponents only half understood; but those who denied usually admitted that in some way there was to be a punishment of the wicked in the future. This common belief had a restraining influence, not only on the man who might have committed crime, but in forming the habits, methods of thought and speech of the common people; and it tended to prevent crime. This belief has been greatly weakened. Those who know that there is to be a judgment to come do not emphasize the truth as formerly, and the masses of the people have lost the fear of God.—Christian Leader.

COMMON SENSE AND HOLINESS

The Christian Witness, of Boston, remarks: "A little common sense mixed in with the experience of holiness makes it more in demand and increases its market value."

Right you are, brother, only we would change the word "little" to much.

If common sense is needed anywhere it is in the profession of religion, and in the experience of holiness there needs to be almost uncommon common sense.

Were sound judgment made to accompany every claim to rich Christian experience, more persons would seek the experience, and their power over others would be greater. Michigan Christian Advocate.

GERMANS GROW RESTLESS.

They Suspect General Staff's Honesty Says Traveler.

"Though many gruesome stories of the German outrages and cruelties in Belgium and France have been published in the newspapers, the full horror of them is beyond description," said S. D. Dancey of Picton, Ont., who with his fiance Mlle. Tenaerts of Brussels and her mother visited Toronto a few days ago.

"In the few hours I have been in Toronto," said Mr. Dancey, "and in the conversations I have had with my old friends here I have noticed a tendency to underrate the stories that have been published concerning the barbarous treatment of non-combatants, including aged persons, young women and children, wantonly perpetrated by the German troops in Belgium and France. This is perhaps due to the almost unbelievable nature of the reports that have come in, but it is no exaggeration to say that no description that has yet been published gives any true idea of the appalling nature of the German atrocities.

"Last month I was able to make a trip almost as far as Berlin, protected by a passport from Brussels, and had every opportunity of feeling out the attitude of the German people, both civilian and military, toward the ultimate outcome of the war. The spirit of boastful certainty in success of German arms has given place to a spirit of serious doubt, in fact, German officers have admitted to me that it is now impossible for former plans to succeed. The temper of the civilian population in Germany is becoming a matter of serious concern to the authorities. They cannot understand how it is that if official reports from Berlin are true, scores of trains of wounded should be passing their doors every day, and hundreds of thousands of reinforcements must needs be rushed to the firing line, with alarming frequency, and that not alone are Calais, London, Paris and Warsaw now placed permanently in the category of forbidden fruit, but their forces are gradually being pushed further back.

"The Socialist element is also very restless, and this, taken in conjunction with the fact that the price of food in Germany is three times that of London, and food actually scarce, must shortly force an internal crisis. In Austria this reaction has already come. In the large cities where the people are actually starving for food, they are clamoring in the streets against the tyranny of German militarism."

In the opinion of Mr. Dancey, the war must end before September. The general turning movement will come sometime in March or April, when the allies will throw into the fight new armies which will aggregate upwards of eight million men.

A BLIND GURKHA.

Gundar Singh Is Merry Despite His Terrible Wounds.

Blind though he is, Gundar Singh, a young Gurkha, now lying with terrible shrapnel wounds at Netley Hospital, is far from being downhearted. Indeed, in the words of Nurse Ethel Nazer, he is the life of his ward, stoically indifferent to his wounds and always cheerful and gay. "Sometimes," says Nurse Nazer, "Gundar Singh, who has lost the sight of both eyes, imitates the wounded Germans, and at other times he will go through the actions of an encounter in the trenches. The last is most realistic. One can well imagine the Gurkhas creeping up to get at the enemy. The other evening when I came back from tea I found the patients in roars of laughter. Gundar Singh was out of bed performing a 'pay day' to the other men. I ordered him back to bed, and he immediately stood to attention and saluted. 'Salaam, sister sahib new pay, sister sahib; 500 rupees, sister sahib, very good.' How could I be angry with him? I had to laugh with the rest of them.

One gets very fond of the Gurkhs and the Garwhal. There is never a complaint or murmur from them, and their faith in all the doctors and sisters is quite touching. The most trying ordeal to them is when they get X-rayed. Sometimes I wonder if they think we are casting a spell over them, for they often come back counting their fingers and feeling their limbs. At first it was difficult to keep order in the ward, especially with the Mohammedans, but they soon settled down and made really excellent and very grateful patients.

"The Gurkhas are such quiet, brave little men, very like the Japanese in appearance, and the Sikhs and Garwhal Hindus are fine, handsome fellows. All the Indians have magnificent teeth, which they clean regularly after eating. In fact, in personal cleanliness they are far ahead of the average English working man. But, oh, the messes they make with their washing and meals. They like plenty of water, and an orderly has always to go round with a mop after their morning and evening toilet."

Army Supply Marvels.

An "eye-witness" at the British general army headquarters in France pays a tribute in an article given out by the official press bureau to the work of the army supply department. He calls the ordnance department a military universal provider." He says in part:

The vastness of the work of maintaining a modern army may be gauged by the fact that during the past month the supplies furnished included 450 miles of telephone wire, 530,000 sand bags and 10,000 pounds of shoe blacking, while in ten days the ordnance department supplied 120,000 fur waistcoats and 300,000 flannel belts. The average weekly issue of ointment for feet is five tons.

"The complexity of the work is illustrated by the fact that the index of the stores include 50,000 separate kinds of articles. Most of these still are obtained from England.

LOOKING AT A PHOTOGRAPH.

Better Effects Are Obtained When Only One Eye Is Used.

Photographs should be looked at with only one eye to appear best, says F. W. Marlow in an article on "How to Look at a Photograph" in the Photo Era.

"Most photographs, particularly small ones of landscapes, street scenes and interiors, fail to produce their full effect or to be estimated at their true value because they are not looked at in the most effective way," the author says. "Take as an example a print resulting from a camera with a five inch focus lens. Such a print is usually looked at with both eyes open and held at a distance of twelve inches or more. Now a camera is essentially a one eyed instrument, or, at any rate, it views the object to be reproduced from a single point, the optical center of the lens. The object must be looked at, therefore, with one eye only and from a point corresponding as nearly as possible to the optical center of the lens if its characteristics as it is to be reproduced in the camera are to be appreciated.

"Let it be remembered that when a print is looked at with both eyes open binocular vision emphasizes the flatness of the card, and this tends to offset the illusion of greater or less distance produced by the light and shade and perspective of the print. By using one eye the impression of flatness is greatly diminished. If at the same time the eye be placed at the right distance everything is seen under its natural angle or perspective, and the picture unfolds itself, the different objects receding to their proper relative distances, making details very obvious which may be unnoticed if looked at in the ordinary way.

"As a sort of corollary to the above use one eye alone to decide whether a landscape or other scene is worth taking. If with one eye the scene looks flat it will not make a satisfactory photograph."

JAPAN'S DARING WHALERS.

They Risk Drowning to Escape the Infuriated Animal's Tail.

Many of the Japanese whalemen are most expert and daring men. After a whale has been cornered, harpooned and is slowly giving out from exhaustion the nimble expert of the whaling crew must prove his mettle.

The skilled Jap, after jumping upon the animal's back and cutting two gashes in the head, one on each side, through which a rope must be run and tied, cannot always perform his work in one trial. Often the animal makes a deep dive. But the little Jap must hold fast to his quarry and dive also, trusting to his fates that his own air supply in his lungs will last as long as the whale's.

The Jap is safer from being drowned than from being crushed by the infuriated animal's tail. If the little Jap let go it usually means death, so he hangs on to the diving quarry. Frequently these whalemen lose their lives from drowning, but the members of their crew look upon this misfortune with something of a fatalistic regard.

But the main business in hand is the capture of the whale. As the fight progresses and the maddened, frightened animal grows weaker and finally is dying the boat crews row closer to the body and pray for the ease of the departing spirit. Members of the crew will call out the words "Joraku, Joraku, Joraku!" and on the third day after the animal has been hauled ashore a service is held and prayers offered for the animal's future contentment in spirit.

As soon as the animal has been towed to the shore line he is cut up, the Japs making huge excavations and penetrating inside the animal's body as though entering a mine shaft or gallery and eventually making their exit, all covered with blood. It is a grewsome sight, but is looked upon purely as a matter of course among the Jap whalemen.—Exchange.

Germany's Uhlans.

The uhlan hussar was borrowed from the Polish military system. Uhlan means simply lancer. Hussar is a word that comes from the language of the Hungarians, meaning twenty. It commemorates the time when every group of twenty men in the kingdom was required to furnish one cavalryman. So it means the representative of twenty men. The word dates from the time of Mathias Corvinus, when in national Hungarian levies every twenty men had to furnish one fully equipped horseman, who, in accordance with the fact, was called "hussar."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Place Names In England.

England can boast that no other country possesses so many Scriptural place names as it does. The name of Jericho occurs six times on the ordnance maps, Paradise five times and Nineveh, Mount Zion, Mount Ararat and Mount Ephraim three times each. In Bedfordshire there is a Calvary wood and in Dorsetshire a Jordan hill.

NEW POLITICS IN THE WEST.

The Sun does not believe that the farmers of the West wish to renounce the private ownership of land, but, on the contrary, to enhance the value of their own land. That, it believes, despite their single tax resolutions and legislation, the true purpose of which it believes to be to force the use of land kept idle by speculators and absentees. They may succeed in dispossessing the speculators and absentees, but, on the whole, they will do little to bring land into use unless they make the use of it profitable. The expulsion of the speculators will still leave their homesteads divided by unoccupied prairie. Apart from co-operation, which is in their own hands, the only means of assuring profitable use are wider markets and reduced cost. These require political effort, from which the single tax seems idly and uselessly to divert them. It is reasonably clear that land values in the West are coming quickly to their value in use. In the result the injustice of the land holdings of the C. P.R., the Hudson Bay Co., and the minor speculators, will not appear as great as in the past. If the land were filled up by settlers, the grievance, as at present stated, would not direct their agitation to making the use of their land profitable?—The Weekly Sun.

THE MONEY AMY DIDN'T EARN.

Amy was a dear little girl, but she was too apt to waste time in getting ready to do her tasks, instead of doing them at once, as she ought. In the village where she lived Mr. Thornton kept a store where he sold fruits of all kinds, including berries in their season. One day he said to Amy, whose parents were quite poor:

"Would you like to earn some money?"

"O, yes," she replied, "for I want some new shoes, and papa has no money with which to buy them."

"Well, Amy," said Mr. Thornton, "I noticed some fine, ripe blackberries in Mr. Green's pasture to-day, and he said that anybody was welcome to them. I will pay you thirteen cents a quart for all you will pick for me."

Amy was delighted at the thought of earning some money, so she ran home to get a basket, intending to go immediately to pick the berries.

Then she thought she would like to know how much money she would get if she picked five quarts. With the aid of her slate and pencil she found out that she would get sixty-five cents.

"But supposing that I should pick a dozen quarts," she thought, "how much would I earn, then? Dear me!" she exclaimed, delighted, after figuring awhile, "I could easily earn a dollar and fifty-six cents!"

Then she proceeded to find out how much Mr. Thornton would pay her for fifty quarts, then a hundred quarts, and two hundred quarts. She was getting rich at a great rate. It took quite a while to figure all this out, and then it was so near dinner time that she had to remain at home until after dinner.

As soon as the meal was over she took her basket and hurried away to the pasture. Some boys had been there before dinner and all the ripe berries were picked. She could not find enough to fill a quart measure.

As Amy went sorrowfully home she thought of what her teacher had often told her:

"Do your task at once, then think about it, for one doer is worth a hundred dreamers."—Selected.

TEMPTATION.

Temptation always makes its appeal to what is lying behind. It stirs up passions that are dormant; it awakens passions that are latent; it seeks to discover the line of least resistance, and marshals all its forces along it. But there is one wall of defense against which it always breaks, and that is the wall which is built out of our stored-up experiences. If what has gone before has prepared us for it; if there is treasured up in our sub-conscious self elements of power upon which we can draw in the hour of testing, victory is sure. For life is all a piece; what we are is the outcome of what we have been, and what we shall be will be the outcome of what we are. —Great Thoughts.

A HISTORIC TRIANGLE.

Famous Battlefields of the Plains of Hesbaye, in Belgium.

Describing the road from Brussels to Liege, which skirts the plains of Hesbaye, Baedeker quotes the old proverb, "Qui passe dans le Hesbains est combattu lendemain"—"He who enters the Hesbaye is defeated the next day." Such was the reputation of the Hesbains for strength and bravery.

The ancient province of Hesbaye is indicated on the maps as a triangle, some fifty miles from its base to its apex, Liege. The river Meuse, from Namur to Liege, forms its southern side; the railways from Liege through Tirlemont and Louvain to Brussels its northern side. A line from Namur north to Brussels is its base.

This triangle contains many famous battlefields. Besides Waterloo, there is Neerwinden, where Marshal Luxemburg defeated the allies under William II. of England in 1693 and where a century later the Austrians, under the Prince of Coburg, uncle of the late King Leopold of Belgium, defeated the French, led by Dumouries and Louis Philippe.

Then there is Quatre Bras, where Ney's division fought part of the British army and its German and Belgian allies in 1815. There had been a battle the day before at Sombreffe, and on that June night the Prussians accomplished their unparalleled retreat from Ligny. Fleurus, near by, won fame in 1622 and 1690 and again in 1794.—Newark News.

EFFERVESCENT DRINKS.

They Allay Thirst Quickly, but the Effect Is Not Lasting.

The reason why we like effervescent drinks is that the slight stinging or pricking of the palate that follows on drinking liquids charged with carbonic acid gas produces immediately an increased flow of saliva and thus diminishes for the moment the sensation of thirst.

But the relief they bring is only temporary and is followed by a reaction in which the thirst is actually increased. The salivary glands are no more susceptible to perpetual stimulation than any other, and after each period of excitement one of depression supervenes. Young soldiers on route marches quickly come to understand this and to discover that the more water they drink the more thirsty they get and that it is best, therefore, to limit the quantity of liquid swallowed. Moreover, the saliva contains matters of great importance for the digestion of food, particularly of starchy foods, and if it all be washed down the throat into the bowels as soon as it is secreted a great part of its usefulness is lost.

It would therefore seem that a less wasteful way, physiologically, of promoting the flow of saliva might be adopted with profit. The consumption of fruit containing subacid juices is about the most excellent way.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

He Got the Cheapest.

Old Hiram Pinchon was a born trader and a penny pincher besides. He was never willing to pay the price of anything he wanted, and all the shopkeepers at the village dreaded to see him enter their stores.

One day he did a little trading at Nelson's shoe store. He tried on a dozen pairs of boots, but could find nothing that was not too expensive. Then he guessed he would get a pair of rubbers. He rejected a pair that cost a dollar and another that cost 65 cents. Finally the clerk brought him a pair for 50 cents. They seemed to fit well enough, but Hiram was still dissatisfied.

"Hain't ye got any rubbers that are cheaper?" he asked.

"No, sir," declared the irritated clerk, "we haven't. That pair you've got on is the cheapest, poorest, most no account rubber there is made!"

So Hiram bought them.—Youth's Companion.

Properly Rebuked.

Emma, queen mother of the Netherlands, is the subject of many stories in her own country. During the time when she acted as regent before the present Queen Wilhelmina came of age it is said that one morning Queen Emma was awakened by a peremptory knocking at her bedroom door.

"Who is there?" she asked.

A precociously dignified voice answered, "The queen of Holland."

The queen mother quietly answered, "I am not dressed and therefore not able to receive her majesty, but if it is my little girl she may come in."—London Mirror.

Vegetable Sponges.

What are known as vegetable sponges grow freely in Ecuador during the rainy season. They grow on vines, like pumpkins. The poor people utilize them for washing dishes and when bathing, claiming they are superior to the animal sponge.

Dogs' Pants.

Dogs do not perspire. In hot weather they regulate the temperature of their blood by breathing more quickly, which produces a rapid evaporation of water from the surface of the lungs. That is the reason why a dog pants in hot weather.

Indigestion and Headaches

Arising From Constipation, Cured and Regular Habits Established by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

In the western Provinces, where so many thousands live far from doctors and drug stores, very many rely on Dr. Chase's medicines to cure disease and maintain health and strength. This letter gives some idea of what perfect control Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills exert over the most common ills of life.

Mrs. H. K. Hewer, farmer's wife, Eastburg, Alta., writes:—"For about ten years I suffered from constipation, indigestion, headache and languid feelings. Treatment from two or three doctors afforded only temporary relief, so I turned to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and with most satisfactory results. Headaches have disappeared, regular habits established and general health very much better. Both my husband and I can speak highly of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, as we have both been greatly benefited by them." NEW LIGHT ON THE SANDWICH.

The Nutritional and Economical Value of the Quick-Lunch Lunch.

Hurried methods of eating and a desire to get through with it as soon as possible, especially at the luncheon hour, have led to many preparations of quickly available food, among which the sandwich takes high rank. The filling between the two slices of bread of a sandwich usually consists of some meat or meat preparation, or else a preparation containing oil or fat, but no definite general statement can be made respecting the nutritional value of this food, because the size of the sandwich, its quantity of meat, butter, and so forth, constantly vary.

An eminent German physiologist, Rubner, thinks that the general use of the meat sandwich in Germany is due to the increased consumption of tea and coffee, which, being mainly simple stimulants, need some substantial help. He assigns as a secondary reason the increasing use of sugar and alcohol; for when one drinks freely of an alcoholic beverage and eats very sweet dishes at the table the amount of carbohydrate material or pure fuel material in diet is greatly increased. A rich, nitrogenous bread, with a good big piece of meat between its slices, tends to correct a diet of this kind and to furnish the necessary nitrogenous material. Also, a sandwich is handy in shape, it is usually readily put up in packages, and can be taken up and carried away without inconvenience.

The Journal of the American Medical Association prints a table showing the distribution of one hundred calories in the principal food elements of bread, bread and butter, and a meat sandwich. This table is as follows:

Sources of 100 Calories—
In bread—11 protein; 3 fat; 86 sugar and starch.
In bread and butter—5 protein; 58 fat; 37 sugar and starch.
In meat sandwiches—15 protein; 53 fat; 32 sugar and starch.

It will be seen that both protein and fat are relatively abundant sources of heat in the sandwich, while the carbohydrates are considerably less important than with bread or butter alone.

However, the sandwich is not an ideal food in so far as economy is concerned. The number of calories which can be bought for twenty-five cents in a good boarding house or restaurant, as compared with the number found in the same value of sandwiches, is shown in the following table by Rubner:

In a public eating house—3,990 calories, containing 108 grams protein.
In a good restaurant—1,990 calories, containing 78 grams protein.
In the form of sandwiches—1,140 calories, containing 30 grams protein.

It is not consistent with the facts to think, of the sandwich as the poor man's lunch, unless it is made at home. The ideal poor man's lunch seems to be in France, where the laborer takes with him a loaf of brown bread almost long enough to serve as a walking stick, and eats it in connection with a pint of snails and a bottle of ordinary wine. This is much more economical than the heavy meat sandwich of the United States. The wine, of course, is not an economical food at any price, but a dry loaf needs some condiment, and light wines are to a Frenchman the normal beverage. In this country some possibly cheaper, non-alcoholic drink could be substituted with such a meal.

Wouldn't Hear the Game.

An exceptionally voluble golfer was calmly endeavoring to move a ball with his driver. Pausing in his efforts he espied, watching him, a small girl, holding by the hand a still smaller boy. Immediately visions of flying golf balls flashed across his mind. "You ought not to bring your little brother here," he cautioned the girl. "Oh, it's all right, sir," came the reply. "He's stone deaf."—Exchange.

Handy Fire Killer.

A siphon of soda water is an excellent fire extinguisher, as the carbonic acid gas in the soda water helps to stifle the flames. The siphon can be tilted, and the fluid will carry to a considerable height, such as the top of a blazing curtain.

Admiral Von Tripitz

Is Undergoing a Hard Grilling These Days

FIFTY years ago a German lad named Alfred Tirpitz left his simple home in Kustrin-on-Oder, far from the salt water, and went to answer the call of the sea. He was 16 years old then, just at the end of his meager schooling. A place in his father's law office held out no great allurements to him. Consequently, in 1864, he enlisted as a simple cadet in the little collection of frigates called by the pretentious name of the Prussian navy.

To-day Alfred Tirpitz is Grand Admiral of the German navy. As commander of the fleet in the North Sea he is on test as no other man in the world. Practically all the years of this man's life have been given to the realization of one great plan,—a navy which on the day of Germany's Trafalgar should prove itself mistress of the seas. The day is at hand, but the dream is as far from realization as ever. A defeat in the Bight of Heligoland by Beatty, a victory over Cradock with his antiquated ships off Chili, another defeat at the Falklands by Sturdee, and a crushing blow to his raiders by Beatty show the German Grand Admiral what he can expect on the seas. Failing of success according to the rules of war, Von Tirpitz began his raids on unfortified towns, and more recently the barbarous submarine campaign against British shipping. Now Prince Henry of Prussia has hauled down his flag in disgust, Admiral Von Ingenohl has been removed and Admiral Von Pohl will try to win victories for the Grand Admiral.

The career of Von Tirpitz has been remarkable and in some regards unparalleled in Germany. It had been said repeatedly that the German caste system was unbreakable, one could not rise from the ranks of a commoner to an office under the Government. Von Tirpitz not only rose from the ranks, but he rose with almost unprecedented rapidity. Entering the navy as a cadet at 16, he was a lieutenant at 20, a lieutenant commander at 25 and then after 20 years of service he was flying the flag of a rear admiral.

The greater responsibilities of secretary of state for the admiralty, vice-admiral and admiral followed in quick succession. Several times his name has been mentioned in connection with the office of Imperial Chancellor.

In the positions he has held Von Tirpitz has been more powerful than chancellors and ministers. He has had a will of his own and he has dared to exercise this will even in the face of the Kaiser's opposition. The German bureaucratic world has never ceased to wonder at the way Emperor William confides in this man from the ranks and takes his advice. Those who have opposed him have done so to their own hurt. He has taken toll in scalps for all the scars which rivals and critics have inflicted upon him.

Year by year expeditures on ships climbed higher and higher, despite the fact that the nation groaned under the increasing burden of taxation. In 1898 the fatherland's fleet expenditure had been about $30,000,000. Under the constant and dominating influence of the Grand Admiral, the sum was doubled and then almost quadrupled. The navy grew to the tune of $115,000,000 last year.

It will be a bitter day in Germany when it is discovered that the vast outlay has been in vain. Berlin will be too hot for Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz.

ANY DYSPEPTIC CAN GET WELL

By Taking "Fruit-a-tives" Says Capt. Swan

Life is very miserable to those who suffer with Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach and Biliousness. This letter from Captain Swan (one of the best known skippers on the Great Lakes) tells how to get quick relief from Stomach Trouble.

PORT BURWELL, ONT., May 8th, 1913.

"A man has a poor chance of living and enjoying life when he cannot eat. That was what was wrong with me. Loss of appetite and indigestion was brought on by Constipation. I have had trouble with these diseases for years. I lost a great deal of flesh and suffered constantly. For the last couple of years, I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" and have been so pleased with the results that I have recommended them on many occasions to friends and acquaintances. I am sure that "Fruit-a-tives" have helped me greatly. By following the diet rules and taking "Fruit-a-tives" according to directions, any person with Dyspepsia will get benefit".

H. SWAN

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box 6 for $2.50, or trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

COLD ICE CREAM.

The More Fat in the Cream the Longer the Cold Taste Lasts.

An odd application of a very abstract principle of physics is to control at will the cold taste of ice cream. If an ice cream manufacturer wishes to have his ice cream taste cold a long time he can do so by making simple changes in the cream mixture. As it freezes, the actual temperature of the frozen cream has little to do with it. The scheme has been worked out by chemists of the Iowa State college.

The scientific principle is that of specific heats. The specific heat of an article is the intensity of heat needed to raise its temperature a given number of degrees or, in effect, the rapidity with which the article sops up heat. Water is taken as the standard and scientists know the specific heat of most substances compared with water. These chemists carefully worked out the specific heat of milk, cream and various other dairy products, discovering that pure cream has a low specific heat and that fatty substances do not take up heat so quickly and effectively as does water.

This explains why sherbets and other ices taste so cold when they first reach the mouth, but do not give the cold taste long. They have a high specific heat and quickly take up heat from the mouth, then melt.

With ice cream the more fat there is in the formula the lower the specific heat. Accordingly a very fat cream will not taste disagreeably cold at first, but a spoonful of ice cream in the mouth will maintain its cold taste longer. Thus the cold taste can be controlled by the amount of fat used.—Saturday Evening Post.

War Review of the Week

Of paramount interest from a strategic as well as from a spectacular point of view during the past week has been the drive of the allied fleets through the Dardanelles passage. For some days the Queen Elizabeth, Britain's great, new super-Dreadnought, has been bombarding by indirect fire the chief defences of the Dardanelles located at the Narrows, about midway between the entrance and the Sea of Marmora. The mighty warship is in no danger of a reply. She is lying out in the Aegean Sea about 18 miles north of the positions she is attacking, and the Turks have no means of directing their fire over the miles of rocky heights that lie between the ship and the forts. On Friday she hammered away at Kilid Bahr, on the European side, and on Saturday at the forts of Chanak, on the Asiatic side. The tremendous gun-power of the Queen Elizabeth may be estimated from the fact that to reach the Kale Sultanie fort on Saturday she must have thrown shells fully 18 miles.

This means that the Queen Elizabeth is firing clear across a peninsula at an object she cannot see and which cannot reply to her. Smaller vessels farther up the straits advise regarding the training of the guns. The magazine of Fort L was destroyed in twenty-nine shots. The guns are so trained that each shell goes three miles high before it falls on the fort. Each projectile weighs a few pounds less than a ton.

In the meantime reports come from Bucharest to the effect that the Russian fleet is sailing up to attack from the Black Sea side. Constantinople is terror-stricken, and Gen. Liman von Sanders, the German military commander, has taken exclusive charge of the defences. The probability is, however, that the Turks will mutiny before allowing their city to be bombarded.

The destruction of the defences of Smyrna, described as a "necessary incident" of the main operations, indicates that the allies are not disposed to leave any side entrances open for Turkish attacks upon the Dardanelles after the fleet forces a passage through the Straits. Smyrna would make an ideal point of concentration for a Turkish army seeking to reoccupy the Asiatic side of the Straits, and possession of the waterway would be of little value were the Turks to hold the southern side of the Straits. Clearly, if the allies are to have such a measure of possession as will enable Russian wheat to pass freely through the Dardanelles there must be no danger of the Turks taking pot shots at the wheat carriers with guns mounted on the heights along the shore. Smyrna cannot, therefore, be permitted to become the centre from which the Turks might advance in force to nullify by land operations all the labors of the allied fleets.

That the political effects of the capture of the Turkish capital will be far-reaching is shown by the political upheaval in Greece, where King Constantine, whose wife is a sister of the German Emperor, has come into conflict with his Ministry and people over the proposed participation of Greece in the operations against Constantinople, may prove momentous. The Greeks have been keenly desirous of securing the prestige that would be theirs were their army to aid in the driving of the Turk out of Europe, but Constantine does not want to risk another war with the Bulgars just now, and doubtless does not desire to make things worse than they are for his Imperial brother-in-law. In Greece and in Italy also the popular desire to join the allies in recasting the map of the Near East may prove too strong to be longer resisted.

The most important operations in the west have taken place in the Vosges. There for some time the Germans have been pushing up reinforcements into the mountains at points about twenty-five miles apart. The latter advance has been the more persistent. It was pushed up the valley of the Fecht, a mountain stream, on the banks of which are many hills of defensible proportions. For Sunday afternoon the French War Office announced the capture of two of these hills near Munster. The ground gained was held against two counter-attacks. The hamlet of Imberg and a hill farther north were also captured and incorporated in the French positions. In the southern part of the field the army of Thann also advanced, and the artillery blew up a German ammunition depot at Cernay, or Sennheim, as the Germans call it. These operations are distinctly important because they bring the French ever nearer to the Rhine.

From the front in Poland there is little of importance. The Germans claim that their advance toward the Niemen, in the vicinity of Grodno, continues, and that in the central Polish sphere of operations they have made a big win, taking 8,400 Russian prisoners and sixteen machine guns. The Russian official report admits that the Germans made an attack in this region, but says nothing of the results. There is no change in the situation in the Carpathians, where the Austrians continue to throw men away trying to dislodge the Russians from the passes. The garrison of Przemysl, for the relief of which the Austro-German army has spent many thousands of lives, has ceased to make sorties, and evidently no longer hopes to break through the Russian lines. The garrison is now firing off its big-gun ammunition. The Russians say that, although a thousand shells have been fired, only one man has been wounded.

Mrs. Margaret Faulkner.

Another of the old residents of Caledon passed away last week in the person of Mrs. Margaret Faulkner, widow of the late William Faulkner, whose death occurred at her home in Caledon village on Tuesday, March 2nd, after only eight days illness. Mrs. Faulkner, who was a daughter of the late Wm. Maxwell sr., was born in Toronto township between 85 and 86 years ago. When she was a girl of 7 or 8 years her parents moved to Caledon and settled on the Maxwell homestead, Lot 10, Centre Road, Caledon. After her marriage she lived on the 1st line, west, Caledon, until a year or so prior to the death of her husband about 35 years ago. She is survived by four sons and two daughters—William, Isaiah and Geo., of Caledon, Albert and Mary, with whom she lived, and Mrs. John Emack, of Orangeville. Deceased was a woman of fine qualities of head and heart and was held in high regard by the people of her neighborhood. She was a faithful member of Knox Presbyterian Church, Caledon. There was a very large attendance at the funeral, which was held to Caledon Cemetery on Friday afternoon. Rev. J. Burkholder conducted services at the house and grave and was assisted by Rev. S. R. Robinson, of Maple. The pallbearers were six nephews, Messrs. Wm. and Geo. Hammond, of Amaranth, Wm. and Robt. Thornton, of Mayfield, Lewis Clark, of Toronto, and Wm. Faulkner, of Claude.

George Brewster Dead.

Mr. George Brewster, a former resident of Caledon, died at his home in Pilot Mound, Man., on Sunday, Feb. 28th. Deceased, who had been in poor health for some time, had a paralytic stroke the day preceding his death.

The Pilot Mound Sentinel contains the following obituary notice:—

"The above well-known pioneer had been ailing for some time, so his demise was not unexpected, the end coming on Saturday evening, the 27th ultimo, at his home in Pilot Mound. He was a son of the late Captain James and Sarah Brewster, and was born in Caledon township, Ontario, on Jan. 1st, 1850. He came West in 1882, homesteading near Purves., where he resided for some ten years, then came to Pilot Mound, where he lived until death overtook him. He was a man of sterling quality, and his quiet, unassuming nature won him a large host of friends. Was married to Sarah A. Thompson, eldest daughter of the late W. E. Thompson, Orangeville, Ontario, in April, 1892, who survives him with one son, William E. The funeral on Monday was largely attended, when Rev. John Scott officiated at church and grave. Mr. Brewster was one of the oldest Masons in this district, and was also a member of the Orange Lodge and Canadian Order of Foresters, the three societies turning out in a body to pay their last respects to a departed member. A brother, Hugh, of Victoria, B.C., and four sisters—Mrs. James Hunter, of Floral, Mrs. Geo. Perfect, of Pilot Mound, Mrs. M. D. Morrison, of New Westminster, B.C., and Mrs. John McDonald, of Purves, also survive the late Mr. Brewster."

LUCILLE.

Things are certainly brightening up in this burg, as we manage to have not less than 2 parties a week. The greatest surprise to all after one party, was about half-past four in the morning, when a flock of mixed birds came,
Singing and twittering up with the dawn,
Flitting about till the moonlight was gone.
They built a wee nest just under the verandah,
When the inmates crept up and looked out of the window.
And what do you think they saw?
A black-headed fiddler and a red-headed Homer.

The Best Trophy.

Two rinks of curlers journeyed to Shelburne on Monday to take part in the annual contest for the Best trophy. A similar number of Grand Valley and Shelburne rinks competed. The locals drew a bye, which meant that Shelburne and Grand Valley were pitted against each other in the opening game. Shelburne won rather handily and repeated the trick in the Orangeville game, so that the trophy will remain in the northern town for another season. The Orangeville rinks were skipped by Dr. Carson and J. D. McMillan. McMillan finished 2 ahead but the Carson rink ran in hard luck, their opponents just doubling their score. The players and scores were:—

Shelburne—	Orangeville—
A. W. Watson	D. McLean
Dr. Davis	J. D. Kingsboro
H. Cameron	E. C. Clarke
T. H. Rutledge, skip 26.	Dr. Carson, skip 13.

A WORTHY CITIZEN.

The Late Samuel Stubbs Was Prominent in Municipal Life of Caledon Fifty Years Ago.

THE LATE SAMUEL STUBBS, J. P.

Mr. Samuel Stubbs, formerly a widely known resident of Caledon township, died quite suddenly at his home at Seven Persons, Alta., on Friday, Feb. 26th. The first intimation his friends here received of the sad occurrence was conveyed in a telegram addressed to his son, Burt, who, with Mrs. Stubbs, had arrived home from the West about six weeks ago. At the time of their departure the deceased was in the enjoyment of excellent health.

The late Samuel Stubbs was born on the w ½ of lot 15, con. 1, E.H.S., Caledon, on the 10th day of February, 1841, and was therefore 75 years of age when overtaken by death. Reared by sturdy parents, pioneers of the township, educated in the little old log school house on the old Bell farm and growing to manhood under the wholesome influence of a good home, it was only natural that the young man should possess a sound body and a strong, active mind. In November, 1865, he led to the altar Miss Sarah Morrison, a young bride of quiet but strong character, who proved a worthy and devoted helpmeet in all his endeavors. The union was blessed with a family of five sons—W. J. and Albert W., of Seven Persons, Alta., S.J., of Winnifred, Alta., Martin, of Carlstadt, Alta., and Fred N., of Taber, Alta.,—and one daughter, Maud, who died early in life. Mr. Stubbs spent 72 years of his life on the farm where he was born. For the last two years he resided with his sons in Alberta, who were with him when the end came. The deceased did much toward moulding opinion and shaping affairs during the formative period in the history of his native township. Some 53 years ago he enjoyed his share of municipal honors and assumed his part in the public burdens and responsibilities of the day. He was elected to the township council at the age of twenty-one. He was Reeve of Caledon at the time when the County Council was wont to hold its meetings in Toronto. In his public capacity he showed marked executive and administrative ability. Many a piece of good road and many a work of skilful engineering are still in evidence as proofs of his sound, practical judgement. He served his community long and faithfully in the responsible offices of School Trustee and Justice of the Peace. He was one of its earliest members and a prominent leader in the Anglican Church, when it was first established in Charleston village under the incumbency of the late Canon A. W. Spragge.

The remains were brought from Alberta to the deceased's old home in Charleston, arriving on Tuesday evening, March 2nd, accompanied by his two sons, Wm. J. and Samuel J. The funeral was held from his late residence to Charleston cemetery on Thursday afternoon, Mar. 4th. At the request of the family, Rev. S. R. Robinson, of Maple, a sincere friend of deceased, was the officiating clergyman. With the assistance of Knox Church choir, Mr. Robinson conducted impressive services at the house in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing friends and neighbors and also officiated at the grave. Profound sympathy is felt for the bereaved widow and family, his only brother and sister, Dr. Wm. Stubbs, V.S., and Mrs. Caroline Harris, and the other relatives. The late Mr. Stubbs was a man who had the loyalty of making and holding friends and by these the memory of his kindly, genial nature will be long and warmly cherished.

The Late Irwin Vanalstyne

On Feb. 16th, 1915, there passed from our midst in the death of Irwin Vanalstyne one of Weston's brightest young men. He was born on Oct. 25th, 1895, in Weston, and has made his home here ever since. He was of a very studious turn of mind, and passed into the High School when twelve years of age. He took the usual four years in the High School, and passed with credit. He taught two years before entering the Normal School, and during this time saw clearly his call to the teaching profession. He entered the Normal School in the fall of 1913, and passed in June of 1914. His ability to teach was so marked that he was entered on the teaching staff of Upper Canada College last fall, and during the five months and a half in that school made a deep and lasting impress upon the staff and scholars. With his calm, even disposition, intelligent bearing and manly ways, he became a favorite wherever he went, and he had a large circle of warm friends. He gave the promise of a bright and useful career. But disease claimed him, and twelve months ago, while attending Normal School, he was forced to take a rest, but the friends soon saw that he was smitten. Yet he returned to school and forged ahead, passing his exams in June last, and taught from the fall until the day before he died.

We think of him as the bright, clean, happy boy at the day and High Schools, the Sabbath School, Epworth League and church. He became a member of the Methodist church, and continued such until his death. It might be said of him that from a child he had known the Holy Scriptures. This was the secret of his beautiful character. His pastor, Dr. Long, on the day of his funeral, spoke very feelingly of his worth. The funeral was largely attended. The many wreaths of flowers spoke of the high esteem in which he was held by all. Six of his most intimate chums bore his remains to their last resting place to await the resurrection of the just. He leaves behind a sorrowing mother, father, a brother and sister, Mrs. J. D. Lee.—Weston Times & Guide.

Mr. Vanalstyne formerly taught school in S. S. No. 1, Mono.

Mrs. John Kelly

Although she had been in failing health for some months the news of the death of Mrs. John Kelly, Lot 4, 4th line, Melancthon, in the Toronto General Hospital on Thursday, Feb. 25th, came as a great shock to a very large circle of friends, by whom she was held in the highest esteem. Mrs. Kelly, who had been suffering from an affection of the stomach, was operated on in the hospital. For a time her condition seemed to improve and her recovery appeared certain. On Sunday previous to her death, however, she took a turn for the worse and passed away on the following Thursday evening. Deceased, who was in her 52nd year, was a daughter of the late Duncan McVanel, of Amaranth township. She was a member of Shelburne Presbyterian Church and was an active church worker. She is survived by her husband, her father, four brothers and four sisters. The brothers and sisters are Messrs. Hector, Alex. and Samuel McVanel, of Amaranth, D. McVanel, postmaster, of Shelburne, Mrs. W. K. Johnston, Shelburne, Mrs. W. H. Bradford, Blackfoot, Alta., and Miss Mary McVanel at home. The funeral was held from her late residence at Melancthon to Shelburne cemetery on Saturday afternoon following her death. Rev. H. Stevenson, of Shelburne, conducted services at the house and grave.

17th of March.

The ladies of the Methodist Church are giving a drama entitled "A Live Rink on Thursday night and invited Mr. D. McCallum, whose removal from town is reported elsewhere, with a handsome watch fob. Mr. A. A. Smith read the address and Mayor Campbell made the presentation. Mr. McCallum made a feeling reply and speeches of appreciative nature were made by Presidents Dr. Carson and J. D. Brown in behalf of the two Clubs.

Change at Sterling Bank.

Mr. D. McCallum, who has been local manager of the Sterling Bank for the past three years, has been transferred to the head office in Toronto and left for the city last week to enter upon his new duties. Citizens of Orangeville are sorry indeed to lose Mr. McCallum. During his residence here he has taken a keen interest in everything calculated to advance the business interests of the town. He has also taken an active part in all manly sports. He was a staunch supporter of the local lacrosse club, an enthusiastic curler and bowler and was an active member of the Rifle Association. In business matters he was courteous, obliging and the possessor of sound judgment. While his departure is keenly regretted it is recognized that the change is an important promotion and the local friends of Mr. McCallum look forward confidently to his further advancement in the not distant future. We understand that Mrs. McCallum, who is a general favorite in town, will not remove to the city for a few weeks. The new manager of the Bank is Mr. Elmer Still, son of Mr. Wm. Still, a former mayor of Orangeville. Mr. Still, who was born in this town, entered the service of the Sterling Bank when it established its agency here about nine years ago. Some years ago he was appointed manager of the Bank's branch at Alton, which position he filled with general acceptance until quite recently. He has extensive property interests in the town and is a useful citizen as well as a successful business man.

—A party of Orangeville young people drove to Grand Valley on Tuesday night and returned at daybreak next morning.

—Large crowds attended The McMillan Clothing Company's spring opening last night. The firm made an attractive showing of advance models of Men's Suits and Top Coats for spring, and also made a large display of New Spring Suitings. The firm showed its customary enterprise by engaging St. Mark's orchestra for the evening. Needless to say this innovation was greatly appreciated by the visitors.

"MY LADY DARRELL."

Grand Valley Dramatic Club Played to Crowded House

Performance Superbly Staged and a Big Success.

The members of the Grand Valley Dramatic Club scored a big success with their four act melodrama "My Lady Darrell" which they presented in the Orangeville Opera House on Wednesday night, March 3rd. The performance attracted a capacity house and the big audience had nothing but words of praise for the skill and ability with which the Play was presented. The Grand Valley Club, which has a number of really clever actors in its cast of amateurs, carries its own scenery and this had not a little to do with the successful character of the performance. Much of the scenery, which is said to be worth about $300, was designed and painted by Mr. G. W. Jenkins, the manager of the Club, and is quite as good as the stage setting in city opera houses. The play has plenty of action, is replete with humorous incidents and abounds in realistic scenes that are admirably calculated to arouse and hold the interest of the audience. One of the strongest members of the cast was Mr. G. W. Jenkins, whose work in the difficult role of George Vaughan, or Count Jura, the villian of the Play, was beyond criticism. Mr. Jenkins showed undoubted ability in the interpretation of his part and it is quite safe to state that as an amateur he has few equals. Miss Lila Simpson, as Alice, the pretty rustic maiden, who afterwards became Countess of Darrell, and Miss Nellie Stevenson, in the role of Viola Vaughan, George's artful sister, made an excellent impression. Both young ladies looked decidedly pretty and took their parts in a manner which showed close study and a thorough understanding of the requirements of their roles. Mrs. D. N. Brawley was stately and yet natural in the part of Lady Darrell and also appeared to advantage as Martha Paisey, the strong minded, determined wife who kept her husband and the farm help on the move. Her announcement that she intended to make her husband "either a man or a mouse" created prolonged laughter. Mrs. G. W. Jenkins gave a realistic portrayal of misery Mother Kripps, in whose coarse and shrivelled nature the greed and love of money had extinguished the springs of human sympathy. The part of Kate Kripps, who proved more susceptible to the emotions of love and passion than her mother, was acceptably taken by Miss Pearl Batters. Percy Brawley had an exacting role as Lord Roy Darrell but sustained his part with considerable skill. Alfred Menary had one of the lighter roles of the Play as Armstrong Dale, the young lawyer, whom no one could be induced to take seriously. He furnished a goodly share of the fun of the evening and his ready wit seemed equal to every emergency. E. H. Glenn looked and acted the part of Sir Geoffrey Rawdon in a way which showed successful study of the courtly manner of the the Old Land aristocrat. Wm. Buchanan looked a typical old country farmer as Joe Paisey and his acting was quite in keeping with his appearance. The other roles—Capt. Lionel Wyndham and Toby Bruce taken by Wm. Stuckey and Job Trotters and Dalton, Sergeant of Police, taken by James McDonald—were all cleverly sustained and the actors did their full share in rounding out and completing the performance.

St. Andrew's S. S. orchestra led by Mr. Thos. Presley provided excellent music before and between acts. Messrs. J. E. Jesson and E. H. Lindsay also sang patriotic songs between acts and were both rewarded with encores. The proceeds were $131. Should the Grand Valley Club decide to make another trip to Orangeville it is doubtful if the Opera House would begin to accommodate all who would wish to hear them. Every seat in the Hall was filled last Wednesday night and about 75 late comers were turned away for lack of accommodation.

Wednesday night's performance was given under the auspices of St. Andrew's Church Ladies' Aid Society.

The Enlistment Problem

One of our subscribers has asked us to publish the following letter which appeared in a recent issue of the Toronto Globe:—

To the Editor of the Globe:— The Globe should be, and is, commended, and not condemned, for its recent comment on the failure of the Canadian-born to appreciate his duty to the Empire. How anyone can question the aptness of its editorials and the justice of its criticism is inconceivable—a criticism all the more necessary because of the flattering views expressed in England of the way Canadians have responded to the call to arms. Unless we desire to act the hypocrite, and accept a praise to which we are not entitled, then it becomes the duty of the press to speak out and tell the truth. It is humiliating to a degree to pass by our saloons, billiard parlors, and other such places, and see there the many young men, principally Canadian-born, loafing about, when enlistment would make men of them. This is hardly less humiliating than to see volunteers still don their uniform when occasion offers itself, but who furbish up every possible excuse for not going (except the true one). Mr. Editor, this is a matter which should be put plainly before the public: Either they should do that which it is supposed they were ready to do when they entered the forces, namely, answer their country's call when it was made or else cease to appear in a uniform which they discredit. It should be universally understood that to volunteer in time of peace means to "fight in time of war." If this is not the understanding, then our whole militia force, with all its enormous expenditure, is a laughing farce. After enrolment is not the time to find excuses for not going; and especially not so when the reasons advanced existed before, as well as afterwards.

Mr. Tennant, in the British House of Commons, has recently said: "We want men—more men." Is the Canadian-born to turn a deaf ear to this appeal?

MARKET GARDENING.

Regina Planning to Settle Belgian Refugees.

Regina, Mar. 6th, 1915.—A comprehensive land development scheme calculated to give practical relief to the Belgians and incidentally to settle a few of the outlying subdivisions of Regina with market gardeners this year has been announced, and it is learned that two local business men are the originators of the idea and have had their plans for its development under way for some weeks. According to information gained it is the intention of these gentlemen, who propose to do business under the name of The Regina Garden City and Agricultural Company, to break two or three hundred acres of land just north of the city and rent it out in five acre plots to Belgian refugees for market garden purposes. It is claimed that the field for this produce will be practically unlimited, especially in view of the demand created through the war, and that, on the other hand, such an opportunity would be a Godsend to Belgians who could be reached. They have already got into touch with nearly a hundred Belgians in Holland, France and England, and it is felt by the local men that a large number will be brought over later on in the summer when the situation opens up.

WHY HE WAITED.

Farmer Jones stood some distance away, watching his new hired man high up in the tree, lopping off a limb. A neighbor happened along and after observing a suspicious looking mass just above the workman, said: "Have ye told him about that hornets' nest up there, Si?" "Naw. He's one of them Christian Science fellers, an' I'm jest waiting to see if there's anything in it."

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

AUDUBON'S BIRDS.

"Take care! O Ben, see what you have done!"

"I didn't mean to, Betty."

"What's the trouble?" asked mother, looking up from her book.

"Ben tipped over the ink on my lovely catbird sketch I was making for father's birthday!"

"I'm sorry, Beth!" pleaded Ben.

"You might have looked where you were going!" muttered Beth, sulkily. "Look, mother, please," and she held up her drawing all one blotch of black.

"It's too bad, dear, but what if you had a thousand bird pictures ruined instead of one?" Here mother actually smiled a little. "That's what happened to the great Audubon's first drawings for his Birds of America."

"How did it happen?" Ben and Betty cried together, settling down at mother's feet.

"Audubon," mother began, "was living in a village on the banks of the Ohio, when he had to go away on business. He took all his magnificent drawings of the native wild birds in their homes and haunts, placed them carefully in a box, and gave them in charge of a relative.

"He was away several months. On his return home he soon asked after what he called 'his treasure.' The box was brought and opened, and—"

"O, what had happened?" whispered Betty.

"A pair of Norway rats had moved in and reared a little family among the crowded bits of paper which only a short time before had represented a thousand lovely feathered folk in the air. The destruction was complete.

"Poor Audubon could neither eat nor sleep for several days. Then he took his note-book and pencil and went forth to the woods."

"Fine," cried Ben.

"He said," concluded mother, that he 'felt pleased that he might now make better drawings than before.'"

Betty looked at Ben. "Forgive me," she said, "for making such a fuss!"—Lucile Lovell, in Youth's Companion.

In setting forth an incident of local heroism a country paper reporter finished up neatly :—

"As he flung the blazing oil-stove out of the window, Perkins stumbled over a chair and sat down amidst some of the ignited shavings on the floor, the flame from which caught his clothes. By quick action and a ready wit he escaped with his life, but his trousers were burned almost beyond recognition."

A "cub" reporter on a New York newspaper was sent to Paterson to write the story of the murder of a rich manufacturer by thieves. He spread himself on the details and naively concluded his account with this sentence :—

"Fortunately for the deceased, he had deposited all of his money in the bank the day before, so he lost practically nothing but his life."

THE FIRELESS COOKER

HOW TO MAKE ONE AT HOME WITH SMALL OUTLAY.

A Box Lined With Asbestos Board Neatly Tacked In; Two Dividing Partitions of Asbestos, Three Asbestos Nests Wired Together and Some Sawdust Complete an Inexpensive Utensil.

The cooker in question was designed by a young housewife and was made by her husband under her supervision. It is a compact box about thirty inches long by fifteen deep. The cover, instead of fitting over the top, fits just inside, and it is fastened in place, when the box is closed, by two wooden buttons set on to the edge of the box by screws.

The box is lined on the inside with asbestos board, which is neatly tacked in. Two fifteen-inch squares of the same asbestos material divide the interior into three chambers or compartments of equal width. The round openings or "nests" into which the cooking utensils are made to fit are made by rolling pieces of asbestos into cylinder shape and fastening them together with a fine wire.

These round nests vary slightly in diameter, the smallest being six inches and the largest seven inches. The spaces between these nests and the sides of the compartments are filled with sawdust, which is packed closely.

A large sheet of asbestos, cut to exactly fit over the top of the box, has three round openings for the three nests. This piece is tacked firmly in place and presents a very neat appearance. It fits close in at the top of the box, so that when the cover is shut down there is no space between.

There are three small squares of the asbestos which are for covering over the nest openings when food is set in them to be cooked.

Two of the cooking vessels used in this homemade cooker are five pound lard pails, which have tight fitting covers. The third is a larger can, also of tin. The pails have wire handles and the large can has a small wire ring in the cover, by means of which it can be lifted. The smaller cans are designed for cooking cereals, puddings and vegetables and for baking round loaves of bread, while the large can is designed for cooking meats.

The feature of this cooker, which distinguishes it from most homemade articles, is that it has soapstone and iron plates, which can be heated so that roasting and baking can be done in the cooker. There are two soapstone plates, roughly cut, it is true, but they answer the purpose for which they are intended. They are made from a soapstone warmer, this having been cut in halves and the corners of each half sawed off, so that the soapstones have a hexagonal shape. The two iron plates are small, round stove covers.

The owner of this ingenious cooker declares that it is entirely practical and serviceable. By heating the two soapstones and placing one at the bottom of a nest and the other on top of the cooking vessel, after the food has been put inside and the cover put on, she can bake bread or roast meat. In doing the roasting, however, she browns the meat in a frying pan before putting it into the cooker.

In cooking breakfast cereal (which is put in the cooker the night before) and in boiling vegetables neither soapstones nor iron plates are used.

This cooker, which cost about $1.50, is expected to take the place of a range oven for its owner. She has a two burner alcohol stove, on which steaks and chops will be cooked and over which the soapstones and iron plates are heated. At night some water is heated over the alcohol stove to put into the "fireless" and kept warm for toilet use in the morning. The cereal also is brought to a boil and then set into the cooker. In the morning there is no building of fires necessary. The cereal is ready for the table and coffee can be made and eggs or fish cooked in a few minutes over the alcohol stove. While breakfast is being eaten the dishwater is heating.

After breakfast a fricassee or stew or braise is made ready for the cooker and set into it to cook for the midday meal. This does away with excessive heat in the kitchen, and the clever woman who contrived the cooker declares that it has already proved to be worth much more than the small amount of money it cost.

Mutually Appreciative.

Billings (meeting Baxter, who is walking rapidly along the street)—Hello, Baxter! Why this rush?

Baxter—I'm walking fast to keep that fellow Staggs from catching me up. He's an awful bore.

Billings (meeting Staggs, who is walking slowly)—Hello, old fellow! Why are you dawdling along in this way?

Staggs—To keep from catching up with that fellow Baxter. He's the worst bore in town.

Object of Education.

The entire object of true education is to make people not merely "do" the right things, but "enjoy" the right things; not merely industrious, but to love industry; not merely learned, but to love knowledge; not merely pure, but to love purity; not merely just, but to hunger and thirst after justice.—Ruskin.

Why He Loved Spain.

Gioachino Rossini, who was a great jester, was once seen embracing a Spaniard with great effusion. Asked the reason, he replied, "Because without Spain we would be the last nation."

He Won Her.

"I am just starting out in the city," remarked the young man.

"The world is your oyster," suggested the young lady.

"Yes, and I have found a pearl right away."

WALK AND LIVE LONG.

Doctor Says, However, Exercise Must Not Be Overdone.

Some put walking on the shelf with many others of the "lost arts." No one ever walks now except the Boy Scouts.

Dr. R. E. Castelaw believes the body should never be tired after exercise. He says never walk to the point of exhaustion, and never walk more than two miles at one time. The man who goes for a twenty-mile walk for fun is not only looked upon as a mild sort of lunatic, but really is one.

Surely the busiest business man has time to walk two miles each day! It would only take thirty minutes, and then he might never require a family physician. Even a walk once a week helps a great deal. Try it next Saturday.

"Put on an old sweater and walk briskly, but not hurriedly," Dr. Castelaw says. "Stand erect and breathe through the nose. Air taken into the body through the mouth goes direct to the lungs while cold. Air taken in through the nose-passages is warmed by the time it reaches the lungs. Make the breaths long and deep.

"Oxygen is a deadly poison to some things—chief among which are the tuberculosis and meningitis germs. Breathe deeply and kill them. Walking exercises every muscle in the body, except, possibly, the muscles of the face. And if a man looks around at the beauties of Nature while he is walking, he will exercise those. Walk and you'll never have a cold, lung trouble, or tuberculosis.

"The people who walk the most live the longest."

Tale of a Cow.

A poor tiller of the soil had owned for a number of years a valuable cow. Of a sudden he began to find that the beast always stood in her stall with her tail toward the south, where the manger was, her head toward the north. He tried various means of making the cow stand the other way, her head to the south and her tail to the north, but no matter how many times he set her properly in her stall she always turned around. Finally there was nothing to do but rebuild the stall to suit the cow.

Somewhat later war came and the poor tiller of the soil had to join his regiment and go and fight for the fatherland. His wife and children reduced to dire poverty, were forced to sell the cow to the butcher, who slaughtered her and sold her meat at famine prices to his fellow townsmen. At the same time, however, the mystery of the animal's unaccountable behavior was cleared up. In the body of the cow was found a small compass which the poor man's wife had lost some months before from his watch chain. Evidently it had fallen among the hay and been eaten.

The Bauer of Austria.

The most interesting of Austrian types and the backbone of the dual monarchy is the bauer. In social rank he occupies somewhat the same position as the old English yeoman, farming his own land and in many cases enjoying a far more substantial fortune than the nobility. The bauer has a strict social code of his own, mixing neither with the laborers on one hand nor the aristocracy on the other, is apparently quite content with his lot and takes pride in his ability to provide almost all the necessaries of life from the productions of his own land, even, in many cases, growing the flax from which his women folk weave all the household clothing.—London Mail.

False Economy.

They tell a story about a country lad who went to a big city and tried for a job on the police force. He passed the physical tests hands down, but the written examinations gave him a little trouble. One of the questions was: "A man buys an article for $12.25 and sells it for $9.75. Does he gain or lose on the transaction?" After pondering over the question our rural friend finally answered in this way: "He gains on the cents, but loses on the dollars."

Didn't Want to Be Singular.

It was in the drawing room after dinner that they discussed an absent maiden friend's bad points with the usual grim and scathing glee. Having thoroughly dissected her personal appearance, they next paid attention to her mental shortcomings.

"She is a very singular girl," spake the one.

"Yes, indeed," responded her companion; "but, then, that is not her fault, for I never saw a girl so anxious to be plural."

The One Who Was Afraid.

"Didn't marry her, eh? I suppose you were afraid you could not support her in the style to which she had become accustomed?"

"Oh, no, I was not at all afraid of that."

"Then why didn't"—

"It was she that was afraid I could not."

In Disguise.

"Do you mean to say that you flirted with your wife all the evening at the masked ball and didn't know her?"

"That's right. But she was so deuced agreeable how was I to know her?"

Renewed Vigor in Old Age

This Letter Brings a Message of Cheer to the Aged—Results of Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

New, rich blood is what is most needed in the declining years to keep up energy and vitality. That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a wonderful help in maintaining good health and prolonging life is attested by the writer of this letter.

Mr. Stephen J. Leard, North Tryon, P.E.I., writes :—"At seventy-five years of age my heart gave out and became very irregular and weak in action and would palpitate. My nerves also became weak, and I could do nothing but lie in bed in a languishing condition, losing strength and weight. In that condition I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and am cured. Had I not obtained this treatment I would now be in the box with the roof over my nose. At eighty-one I have an energy which means go, and I am writing this letter so that old people like myself may prolong their health and strength by using this great medicine." 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. LOSING YOUR SELF-RESPECT

Many a man begins to live on the day that he finally loses his self-respect. Many a man is kept in the pathway of defeat and uselessness because he believes that self-respect is a valuable thing. The man who stands up straight, throws out his chest, puts himself on the back, and says, "My self-respect is my big asset," is like a banker who is confident that he can weather a national financial panic because he has a few hundred dollars hid away in a bureau drawer. Such a banker would be a fool. No less a fool is the man who banks on his self-respect to see him through life. For our real life choice is between God and self; and self is a hopeless proposition in every man since Adam fell. If God cannot respect any man (Rom. 3: 12) what is our respect of ourselves worth? The term "self-respect" does not occur anywhere in the Bible. If, indeed, men may have self-respect, why did Christ need to die? But when, seeing self's worthlessness and helplessness, we ask God to crucify self that Christ may come in and be our life, then Life begins. Christ-respect sets free those who have been enslaved by their self-respect.

Finding Relief She Tells Others

Mrs. W. J. Maloney Took Dodd's Kidney Pills for Backache.

She Had Tried Numerous Other Medicines. But Found No Relief Till She Used the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Barachois West, Gaspe Co. Que., Mar. 5th. (Special).—Mrs. W. J. Maloney, a well known resident of this place, is recommending Dodd's Kidney Pills to those who suffer from Kidney troubles. In an interview Mrs. Maloney says :

"After suffering for many years with backache, and trying many remedies without obtaining relief I read about Dodd's Kidney Pills and decided to try them.

"After using two boxes I was greatly benefitted, and recommend them to other sufferers. I also used them for my little girl for Kidney troubles."

Mrs. Maloney got relief from her backache because Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her Kidney trouble, and that was the cause of her backache. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure diseased Kidneys. Cured Kidneys do their work and strain all the impurities out of the blood. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills cure so many diseases that are caused by impure blood.

Seven Princes Killed.

The new "Almanach de Gotha" makes known that up to now seven German princes have been killed in the war, i.e., Princes Frederick and Ernest of Saxe-Meiningen, Max of Hesse, Rudolf and Ernest of Lippe, Wolsath of Waldeck Pyrmont, and Henry XLVI. of Reuss. It is also known that two members of the Imperial Russian family have died on the battlefield, but the "Almanach" mentions only one, Prince Oleg.

WEALTH AND WELCOME.

A Story That Illustrates a Very Common Way of the World.

A young merchant went abroad and after many years, having made a large fortune, returned to his native land. When he reached home he found that his relatives had gone to a feast at a country house a few miles away. He was so eager to see them that he did not take the trouble to change his clothes and was wearing the things he had used on board the ship coming home.

When he entered the large hall where the guests were all assembled his cousins showed very little pleasure at the sight of him. It was plain to them that he had come back a poor man. A young negro who had accompanied him from abroad was quite upset by their coolness to his master and said, "They must all be very bad men to receive you so cruelly."

"Wait a minute," whispered the merchant, "and you will see a change in their looks."

He quietly put a fine diamond ring on his finger, and, lo, every face began to smile, and they pressed at once around him and called him "Cousin William."

"Has a simple gold ring the power to charm people like this?" asked the black servant in perplexity.

"It is not that," replied his master, "but the ring is worth a good sum, and they guess from it that I am rich, and riches are dearer to them than anything."

"What deluded men!" exclaimed the negro. "They think more of yellow metal and a piece of glass than all my master's virtues and loving kindness."—Baltimore News.

THE COLOR OF GOLD.

Its Shade of Yellow Depends Upon the Metal Used In Alloy.

Gold that is used in jewelry and coins is always alloyed with copper or sometimes, as in the former, with silver. Addition of copper makes the color the popular "golden yellow," orange or reddish gold. Silver turns gold pale yellow. We seldom see pure gold, but it has that indescribable yellow that so often fascinates.

The pure metal is so malleable that it can be beaten between strips of vellum into sheets two-hundred-and-fifty thousandths of an inch in thickness. In this form it is transparent and transmits green light.

When very finely divided gold is suspended in a liquid by precipitation from a solution it transmits green light similar to that of the leaf gold. Yet in ordinary well diffused light it seems purple, for this is the color it reflects. In other words, if a light is placed behind a jar containing a liquid with gold in fine suspension it looks green, whereas if the light is placed in front or at the side the color is purple. The vapor from boiling molten gold is also purple.

What, then, is the real color of gold? The color of a substance depends on its ability to reflect only light of that color, which in turn is due to the arrangement of the molecules. It seems, then, even the simple mechanical changes which we mentioned before as altering the physical properties are accompanied by radical changes among the molecules as far as their mutual relationships are concerned.—New York World.

Nest Eggs For Jam Pots.

When a large glass jar of jam or preserves is opened and it is not the housekeeper's desire to use it all at once she is often in a quandary to know how to dispose of what is left when the first few spoonfuls have been removed. The best method yet suggested is this:

Let the housekeeper have a small stock of china nest eggs, which can be bought for about a cent apiece. When she removes part of the contents of a jar let her drop into it enough of the china eggs to raise the contents to the top again; then replace the cover. Of course the china eggs should be dipped into boiling water first in order that they may not introduce the germs of decay.—New York World.

The Farmer Must Be Trained.

Today the advanced tiller of the soil must come up to his calling as fully equipped for service as the lawyer, the editor, the doctor, the captain of industry, for the curious fact has developed that the calling in which the unlettered and untrained man was once supposed to have as good a chance as the educated one is now the calling in which wide and varied knowledge is as imperative as is almost any other known among men.—W. S. Harwood.

HOW TO CURE RHEUMATISM

The Disease is Always Rooted in the Blood, Which Must Be Made Rich and Pure.

There are still many people who imagine that rheumatism can be cured by liniments and rubbing, overlooking the medical fact that the trouble is rooted in the blood. Rheumatism can only be cured by cleansing and enriching the blood, thus driving out of the system the poisonous acids which cause the rheumatic pains. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure the most obstinate cases of rheumatism because they go straight to the root of the trouble in the blood. Every dose helps to make rich, red blood, and this new blood expels the poisonous acid, bringing health and comfort to the tortured victim. Do not waste time and money in liniments and outward applications. Give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial and thus drive the disease out of your system. Here is proof of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can do in cases of this kind. Mr. Richard Palmer, Wroxeter, Ont., says : "For months my life was made miserable through a combined attack of rheumatism and sciatica. The rheumatism seemed to settle in all my joints and the sciatica pains were so great that I could scarcely hobble about. I am a farmer, and so you can understand that in my condition I was unable to do my ordinary work. Neither doctors nor various remedies I took did me any good. Finally I was induced to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and for this I have much to be thankful for, as after taking a few boxes the pains began to disappear, and by the time I had taken nine boxes every twinge of both the rheumatism and the sciatica had disappeared and I was able to go to work again as usual, and have not lost a day through illness since. I am thoroughly grateful for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me and hope my experience will benefit some other sufferer."

It is the curing of just such cases as these that has given Dr. Williams' Pink Pills their world-wide popularity. You can get the Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WHEN THE WORLD WAS YOUNG.

(By Isabel Ecclestone MacKay.)

Would I had lived when the world was young,
When its boundaries no man knew,
When mystery hung on the far sea-wall
Like a haze of quickening dew—
And a ship was lost in the Great Beyond
What time she was lost to view.

Then had I been when the world was young
The king of a shapely ship,
Full-manned with British sailor-men,
Blue-eyed and straight of limb,
With a chanty gay we had sailed her out
Where the green horizons dip.

(Sailed her out to the sparkling nights
And out to the glad, free days,
With ever the Lure, like a star, to guide
Through the ocean's tumbling maze,
And hope set up like a taper light
At the shrine where a seaman prays.)

Would I had loved when the world was young,
When love burnt fierce as hate,
When passion's draught was no brackish brew
But wine from the flask of fate—
Danger and bliss, and a man made strong
In the strength of a weaker mate!

(Then I had snatched her first quick look
As the ray parade swept by,
And mine had been the sacred trust
While the lover's moon rode high—
The vow, the hush and the ecstasy
And dawn in a crimson sky!)

Would I had faith when the world was young!
The faith of a simple creed
That a man be man with his honor clean
And a hand to help at need,
That he fear fair sons and assail his soul
With the virtue of good deed.

Would I had died when the world was young,
Ere death were a half-feared jest,
From a clean thrust sword or a strong flung pike
Or an arrow well addrest—
So had I died with a fortressed heart,
And long had I lain at rest.

COLD "BAWTH."

English men-of-war have no ice-making machines on board, as have the United States ships, and everybody knows how the English fail to understand us on the subject of the use of ice, especially in our drinks.

An English officer was aboard one of the American ships of the Asiatic fleet and, on being served with an iced drink, commented on the delights of having cool water aboard. The American officer responded with an offer of a small cake of ice which was sent the following morning. Meeting the Englishman ashore a week later, the American asked him if he had enjoyed the ice.

"Enjoy it, old top? Why, do you know, that was the first cold bawth I've had since I left England!"

SPEECH AND THE CHIN.

Maybe at One Time the Tongue Proved Mightier Than the Teeth.

In man the chin seems to project more and more as he progresses toward his modern civilized condition. This must imply that immediately the huge lower canines degenerated the part took on some other function of vital importance to the race and that the need has increased with his intellectual and social advancement.

My theory, then, is that the chin is essentially a part of the mechanism of articulate speech.

It is tempting to theorize a little further and to suggest that the human chin perhaps bears testimony to a prehistoric change from carnal weapons to others which, if not exactly spiritual, were such as appealed to the part of us where spiritual forces work, for apparently long ago before the pen proved mightier than the sword the tongue proved mightier than the teeth.

If one could only prove this one might show that even before the glacial epoch parliamentary institutions (using the terms in its widest sense) began to take the place of lethal weapons in settling disagreements and that the substitution of arbitration for war is not merely a doctrine of latter day moralists, but is a part of the ordered march of cosmic progress as inevitable as the other evolutionary changes which have brought us up from among the brutes. — Dr. Louis Robinson in North American Review.

Australian Wells.

Until the settlers in the rolling downs in western Queensland found out that they could get water by means of artesian wells they were seriously thinking of giving up their farms and ranches on account of many successive years of drought. Now there are several hundred such wells in Queensland, from which the settlers get an unfailing supply of water. The deepest well, which is at Bimerah, has a depth of 5,045 feet. The shallowest well, at Manfred Downs, has a depth of ten feet. The well at Charleville is 1,371 feet deep and produces 3,000,000 gallons a day, the largest flow in the state. The daily flow from all the artesian wells of Queensland is estimated at over half a billion gallons.

There With the Answer.

In a public school one afternoon the teacher was instructing a class in physiology, and finally, in order to test the memory of the youngsters, she closed the book and began to ask questions.

"Willie," said she, addressing a bright faced boy near the head of the class, "can you give me a familiar example of the human body as it adapts itself to changed conditions?"

"Sure!" was the confident rejoinder. "My uncle Jake gained fifty pounds in less than one year, and his skin never cracked."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Buffalo's Hump.

The hump of the buffalo is not a mass of fat as some people suppose, but is formed by means of spines of length fully double those of domestic cattle, and by the huge muscles which lie alongside and fill up the angle between these neural spines and the ribs.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

To show their appreciation of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Wake, jr., who were about to move from Mono to their farm recently purchased in Melancthon, about two hundred neighbors and friends met at Mr. Wake's home on Wednesday of last week at Violet Hill and presented them with the following address, which was read by Austin Thompson. They were presented with two handsome easy chairs and a sofa. The address was as follows:—

To Mr. and Mrs. Fred. A. Wake, jr.:

Dear Friends—We are here to-night on behalf of your many warm friends in the neighborhood of your old home to assure you of our regret that you are about to leave us and take up your residence in another part of the county. We have ever found you kind neighbors and true friends and although you will no longer be able to go in and out amongst us, we will have many happy recollections of you, and we are assured that your affable manner and genial natures will win you many friends among the people with whom you will reside in the future, many of whom are well and favorably known to you already. That you may know that these are not mere formal words, we ask you to accept these two chairs and this couch, as a slight memento of our regard for you. In conclusion, we wish you and your estimable partner in life, health, happiness and prosperity in your new home and assure you of a hearty welcome in your future visits to the haunts of your youthful days.

Signed on behalf of your friends,
Austin Thompson
Milton Reburn
Melville Little Lorne Parsons.

Violet Hill, March 3rd, 1915.

The members of the Violet Hill Women's Institute were also present at the gathering and an address was also presented by them in appreciation of Mrs. Wake's services to the Institute during the past few years. The address was accompanied by a handsome picture neatly framed.

Mr. Wake, on behalf of himself and Mrs. Wake, thanked their many friends for their appreciation and handsome presents and regretted that they had not been more worthy of the many acts of kindness showered upon them. After the presentation a very pleasant evening was spent with games, speeches, music, etc. Later in the evening an excellent lunch was served by the ladies present.—Free Press.

The Test of a Fire Insurance Policy is FIRE

Every fire tests the kind of service a company gives its policy-holders but the supreme test is the great conflagration that leaves a big city in ashes, forces many insurance companies out of business and makes policy-holders all over the country anxious about the security back of their insurance.

At such times the man who holds a policy of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company never worries. He knows that his policy is backed by ample assets and more than a century's record for the prompt payment of every honest loss.

That's one reason why we represent the Hartford here. There are other reasons equally good. May we talk to you about it?

WANTS NASON'S RESIGNATION.

Town Couucil Asks Captain of The Fire Brigade to Step Down.

Report of Proceedings at Monday Night's Meeting

Considerable business was transacted by the Town Council at its regular meeting on Monday night. Among the important items was the passing of a motion asking John Nason, Captain of the Fire Brigade, for his resignation. If Nason objects to being decapitated in this manner he will be given the privilege of appearing before the Council at next meeting and stating his objections before his official head is finally removed by further action of the Council. The motion asking for Captain Nason's resignation followed the reception of the report of a Special Committee, which was appointed to inspect the hydrants. The Committee reported that it had found three hydrants frozen and recommended that the hydrants should not be touched when in that condition and used only in case of fire. Captain Nason had previously reported that he had examined the hydrants and found half of them frozen and unfit for use. The motion was fathered by Deputy-Reeve Holmes and Coun. Henderson. Later in the evening the former gave notice of his intention to introduce a by-law for the purpose of appointing a successor to Mr. Nason.

Accounts were passed as follows—London Foundry Co., $64.50; W. Fairbairn, 45c.; Matthews & Gilmore, $2.70; W. Fairbairn, $13.89; Thos. Campbell, $2.30; Alfred Colley, $1.36; J. McIlroy, 60c.; W. O. Thomas; Dr. James Henry, $36; Geo. E. Brown and R. B. Henry, $25 each, for services as auditors.

The Council placed itself upon record as opposed to the bill which W. C. Chambers has introduced in the Legislature providing that vacant plots of land of 5 acres or more in all towns and villages of less than 3000 people shall be taxed as farm lands where they are actually used as farm lands.

Council decided to pay the annual membership fee of $10 in the Ontario Hydro-Electric Railway Association.

The usual grant of $100 was voted to the Dufferin Agricultural Society.

Mrs. E. J. Connor addressed the Council respecting her taxes.

On the recommendation of the Finance Committee the Treasurer's bond was reduced to $5000.

A lengthy resolution was introduced and passed urging the Dominion Government to declare its policy with respect to the payment of the usual Dominion subsidy of $6400 a mile to Hydro-Electric railways and to express such policy in such a manner that it will allow Provincial Public Service Commissions, with powers from the Provinces similar to those given the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, to anticipate such subsidies and proceed with the construction of the roads. Copies of the resolution will be forwarded to Premier Borden, Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways, John Best, M.P., and the Secretary of the Hydro-Electric Railway Union.

1914 Driest Year on Record But Drainage Gave Big Results.

The Ontario Agricultural College reports that the Crop year of 1914 was the driest on record in Ontario! The precipitation from harvest 1913 to harvest 1914 lacked 5¼ inches of being up to the average. This is a shortage of almost 20 per cent. The College has often stated that tile drainage was effective in a dry season as well as in a wet one, and last year it was able to prove this in a most practical way. Since 1912 the College has been installing Practical Demonstration Plots in parts of the province where little or no drainage has been done. The plan is to drain half of a field, leaving the other half undrained for comparison. Both parts are sowed to the same kind of grain and the crop from each part threshed separately. Nine plots were drained prior to 1914. The average of the nine fields showed that at market prices at threshing time the drained half produced $14.12 more per acre than the undrained half, and that in the driest year on record. In an average season the average increase due to drainage is over $20 per acre, and in a wet season even more.

For a number of years the Agricultural College has been making drainage surveys for farmers free of charge, except for travelling expenses. This offer is again renewed. Farmers having drainage difficulties may secure assistance by writing the Department of Physics, O. A. C., Guelph, for information and regular application forms.

Mr. Geo. H. Duke will offer a 200 acre farm, the east halves of lots 18 and 19, con. 3, east, Caledon, for sale by public auction at the Queen's Hotel, Orangeville, on April Fair Day, Thursday, April 8th, at 2 o'clock sharp. See bills for terms, description of property and other particulars. C. Cranston, Auctioneer.

MORTON AGAIN.

Mono Councillor States His Views on Road Improvement.

Thinks Good Roads Agitation in Interests of Auto Owners.

Glencross, Mar. 11th, 1915.
Editor of The Banner:

Please give me the use of space in your paper to answer the person, or persons, who are wasting so much ink advocating better roads for farmers so that they can draw larger loads and get to market in less time, and in that way save both time and money.

Now, let me ask these people if the farmer draws his grain or produce to market in the summer time? Does he not do that kind of teaming in the winter or late in the fall after the plough has stopped and when the roads have been hardened by the frost and worn smooth by constant travel, thus making them equal to the crushed stone roads that these people have been telling us so much about through the columns of your paper and in the Municipal World. Might I ask these good roads advocates if it would not look better on their part to be a little more liberal in the matter of their auto tax and not spend so much money advertising good roads for farmers, when it is patent to everyone that it is the auto owners and auto companies who want to get these good roads at the expense of the farmers. Just look at Caledon township for instance. When the farmer wants to get to market he prefers to take the clay road and leave the crushed stone road to the auto owners for a race track despite the fact that he was compelled to pay the greater part of the cost of building and maintaining the latter.

In conclusion I wish to say that it is not the farmer who is doing the kicking about good roads. He would be quite well satisfied with the roads in their present condition, if he could only get the Government to saddle the auto owners with the same proportion of taxes for the roads that the farmer bears, and send the money realized from this source back to the counties in which it was collected. Do you not think, sir, that this would be a fairer and more honest method of dealing with this matter? Please be plain and when you write again tell us if it is the farmer or the auto owner in whom you are interested.

Yours Respectfully,
JAS. A. MORTON.

GIVEN EIGHTEEN MONTHS

Harry Cooper Was Sentenced by Judge Fisher on Friday.

The trial of Harry Cooper, which was adjourned a couple of weeks ago until after the Spring Assizes, was concluded before Judge Fisher in the County Judge's Criminal Court on Friday. One of the witnesses called was James Hand, of Camilla, who denied emphatically that he accompanied Peter Cooper to his son's place near Angus with the cow stolen from H. L. Atkinson, of Orangeville. Evidence was also taken regarding certain letters which the younger Cooper had written in connection with the theft of the Baker steer. Following the evidence Mr. A. A. Hughson addressed the Court in behalf of the accused and County Crown Attorney J. L. Island reviewed the charges from the Crown's standpoint. After a careful review of the evidence Judge Fisher pronounced the prisoner guilty of theft in the Harshaw, Atkinson and Baker charges and imposed a sentence of 18 months in Provincial Reformatory at Guelph. Cooper is still lodged in the county gaol here but will likely be removed to Guelph in a few days.

Pastor Russell's Contracts

The following article, which appeared in a recent issue of the Canadian Churchman, makes interesting reading:—

"It is good news to hear that Pastor Russell's advertising contracts in the two chief morning daily papers of Chicago, the "Tribune" and the "Herald," have been simultaneously cancelled. The former openly apologized to its readers for having ever published the Pastor's sermons, even for cash. As a reason for rejecting further "copy" the "Tribune" cited, not the Pastor's religious teaching, but his business record, including his connection with the United States Investment Company and with "Miracle Wheat." These financial matters, and also Russell's domestic relations, were exposed in the same paper in a series of articles extending over a week. It would be a useful thing if citizens in Canadian cities where Russell is still so lavishly buying space for sermons in the daily press, would call attention to the Chicago papers' good example, and ask publishers to consider the ground on which the "Tribune" has decided not to further any longer the so-called Pastor's projects. His organization has appeared during the past few years under quite a number of names, and the latest is "Associated Bible Students." It is marvellous how any thoughtful people can be led astray by a man so personally discredited and by teaching so hopelessly lacking in the elements of correctness. This is saying nothing about the deplorable errors connected with Russellism, which denies some of the fundamental doctrines of our faith. St. Paul speaks of wolves entering in and not sparing the flock. The experiences of had are being repeated at the present time, and call for constant watching and deliberate avoidance of those whose 'word will eat as doth a canker.'"

IN THE TRENCHES.

Lieut. Harry McGuire Tells of Manner in Which His Battalion Was Initiated.

Soldiers Are Well Cared For and Happy Despite Mud and Incessant Shelling by Enemy.

We publish herewith another interesting letter from Lieut. H. B. McGuire, of the 4th Battalion, 1st Canadian Contingent:—

France, Feb. 24th, 1915.

My Dear Mother:

We have been on the move so much lately that I have not had a half minute in which to write letters. We have been on the "Flying Column" of the Canadian Division, as one of the boys has nicknamed us. Another says we are the "Sightseeing Column." Probably we have seen a lot since landing in France but it has not all been pleasure jaunts, but on the contrary, rather rough and hard journeys. When I get back I shall be ready for a little walk as far as Shelburne, with a 50 or 60 pound pack on my back, and enjoy it.

Over a week ago we packed off early on a long hike to another billet. We passed through many towns (they are quite numerous in this country). Of course it rained most of the time we marched. All the time we were drawing close to the guns. They were to the right of us until finally about 4 p.m. we halted at our billets outside a large city that has figured prominently in the war. We were only a couple of miles from the Belgian border.

Every sort of building is used for billets and we got our men in the hay and comfortably fixed for a few days sojourn. It was only a few minutes until the boys were accepting the hot cups of coffee from the inhabitants. We were only a short distance from the trenches. For two days we received instructions from officers of a famous Scotch Regiment on trench warfare. They have been in the game from the first and are a few of the lucky ones. Everyone was quite interested in the instructions and especially in the work of the Engineers. The towns are being shelled incessantly and the bursting of shells about was very interesting. Each explosion was a matter of curiosity to the men. The guns were doing little damage in the neighborhood however, except that a large shell fell in our Battalion cafe in the town and destroyed the wine shop or "estiminent" used by the boys. They were quite sore at this. The night fireworks were very interesting. Friday night, Feb. 19th, we had the pleasure and the long looked for experience of going into the trenches.

We had a little march in silence through badly devastated country. Buildings and villages were a terrible wreck. The earthquake of San Francisco was not in it with the ruins of this country. We had a guide to lead us into our section of the trenches. Everyone was very keen and anxious for what would happen next. "Mud!" It was there in abundance. We did not enjoy Salisbury mud much, but it was a picnic to this. But we did not care. There was no picking of steps. Should we have been shelled we would have been obliged to lie down in it and it was over our knees at that. The ticklish part is getting in and out of the trenches. Should we be sighted then the shots buzz around. However, we were lucky in this respect. The few shots that were fired missed us entirely. Both sides seem to carry out reliefs and working parties early at night so this is the safest time to venture in or out. Though some unlucky chaps get it, as I witnessed, going in and out. We reached the trenches safely after considerable struggling in the mud. We took our places alongside a famous Scotch regiment, which has been in the fray from the beginning. They received us in grand style—mighty glad to have us with them—and the "Tommies" did everything for the Canucks to show them the different stunts and make them comfortable, sharing each other's rations and tobacco.

The trenches are a marvel. I must not describe them, but everything is done to make the men "comfy." Dug-outs are built for the men to sleep in and braziers to warm themselves and cook their food. Ration parties and working parties go out to make improvements and it is wonderful the dare-devil courage of the men and officers. In the lull of the storm the mouth organs are heard along the trenches and an occasional shout across at the enemy. Of course a careful watch is kept. Many incidents are very interesting, but I must not mention too much.

Not one of us showed the slightest timidity, but on the contrary all were very keen and curious. Soon the artillery commenced a bombardment and this was kept up at various intervals during our sojourn there. The snipers are very dangerous people to fool with and there is no need of cautioning the men to keep their heads behind the parapet. There are various means of keeping track of any advance of the enemy. The rifle grenades and hand bombs and grenades make a frightful noise, as do the minenwerfers that have hundreds of pounds of explosives. We were very keen to watch the explosion of the heavy shells, but none fell in our trench. I managed to sleep for a couple of hours in a dug-out, sung to sleep by the boom of the guns. The bursting of the star shells remind one of the fireworks at the Toronto Exhibition. These stars illuminate the surrounding ground—then the snipers get in their work.

The same happens all day. It is rather amusing to watch the chances some of the men take. I had to laugh at a few who had gone out of the trench behind to get some water. Immediately a shower of bullets flew around them. They cheered heartily at the Germans for having missed them.

The officers have a sporting bet as to who will capture the next German and many are the chances and schemes they devise for this game. One of my friends wrote an amusing essay on how to capture a German by means of various temptations, the most likely being the placing of a jug of beer and sausage out in front for him to get.

Finally, or rather shortly, our tour of "instruction," for that was all it was, was up and we had our "get-out" to make. A few star shells burst and we missed the bullets by remaining motionless.

We arrived at our billets in good time, pleased with our experience and ready for another chance. We were covered with mud from foot to head and rather wet about the legs. It is wonderful what the troops have come through, in the trenches for 28 days at a time in rougher weather and conditions than now. Their tour in the trenches now is about a week and that is quite enough they say.

The papers publish nothing that would tell anything of the conditions or happenings. We had no casualties, but the 1st, 2nd and 3rd battalions had a total of 6.

Monday morning early we made a quick departure, marched 3 miles into the city and travelled 20 miles from there by London motor busses—43 busses in all. It was some trip through very interesting towns and cities to a large city where we billeted in a large unfinished building, which was meant for a hospital. There were no windows in the place and it was terribly cold. We got moved out in a hurry again early this morning.

Last night we had a big dinner in a large hotel "Chapeau Rouge." Monsieur Leo Durand was with us and he sang a number of his best solos as did another Frenchman. Everyone sang the Marsellaise and the National Anthem, and then went home to the hay.

We marched here to-day and arrived about 2 p.m. at our former billets. The old folks in our billet were mighty glad to see us and made a great fuss. They call Capt. Colquhoun the "Premiere Officer" or "Papa," having learned papa of the rest of us. Myself and Miller are "La Petite," and Capt. Collins "La Grand Garcon." We have some very jolly moments here. They are so amusing and I dare say we are much more so to them. They were getting frightened of the guns when we arrived but seem quite happy now.

We do not know how long we will be here as we are just as liable to be roused in the middle of the night as anytime.

Don't worry if you don't get many letters as sometimes we have no time and the Colonel keeps the officers always busy at something and there is lots for us to do.

It is now dinner time and I am hungry. I like the French fried potatoes very much as we do not always get a good dinner—sometimes army biscuits and bully beef.

Your loving son,
HARRY.

STUPENDOUS SHOE SENSATION

Through the kindness of Rev. W. E. Wilson, a former resident of Laurel, we got word of a Shoe Stock in Toronto that must be sold for cash. After going through the Stock carefully and finding it all first-class and made by two of the best makers in Canada I was fortunate in securing it at 65c on the $. On Wednesday, March 17th (St. Patrick's Day) the entire Stock was placed on Sale at Actual Cost.

Any head of any family in Amaranth bringing a letter stating that he, or she, is too poor to provide the members of their families with good shoes and having the letter duly certified to by a resident minister of any denomination, I will supply any or all of the members of that family with brand new shoes free of any charge. There is no reason in the world why any person in Dufferin should wear poor shoes.

Shoes at cost! Rubbers at cost! Slippers at cost! Come early! Come often! Best values go first!

St. Andrew's by the Sea.

Nature has done much for St. Andrew's. No prettier place can be visited by the tourist or the summer vacationist. It is the most popular of Canadian Seaside Resorts and it is now chosen by large numbers of summer visitors from New York and Boston who desire to get away from the overcrowded resorts of the United States.

There are excellent sea bathing facilities at half a dozen places in the neighborhood.

The Canadian Pacific has built the large Algonquin Hotel, while the "Inn" affords accommodation for those who desire the quietness of cottage life.

THE BIG STORE - - ORANGEVILLE

Going to Dentist's.

While coming down to his office last Friday morning, a West Broadway citizen noticed a red squirrel running down one of the large street poles at the Bank of Hamilton corner. Just then the squirrel left the pole, sped across Broadway and when last seen was climbing Dr. Bowles stairway at a rapid rate. Our informant, who is a genial son of old Ireland with a ready tongue and a lively sense of humor, avers that the little quadruped was on its way to the dentist's office to have an aching tooth attended to. Judging from its agility it should make a lively patient.

Farmer John and the Telephone

I WOULD never use a telephone," Farmer John had said when being pressed to put one in, "it will just be used for the women folks to gossip over."

And now that the telephone has been in a short time it makes Aunt Mary smile to see how Farmer John runs to use it a dozen times a day.

He is surely getting his money's worth. He gets prices daily from the nearest market on all kinds of produce and sells only when the market is right. He makes no more useless trips to town to replace broken machine parts, but finds out first from the dealer whether the part he wants is in stock. In a hundred ways the telephone is saving time and labor for Farmer John.

"Blest if I ever thought it could be of so much use to me," he says, "I could never do without the telephone now."

The telephone can help you just as it has helped Farmer John.

MARSVILLE.

There passed away at the Fergus hospital on Tuesday morning of last week, a well-known resident of this vicinity in the person of Mr. John Walker. He was born 45 years ago on lot 4, 12th line, East Garafraxa, and was the oldest son of Mr. Wm. Walker, of Eramosa, formerly of the 12th line. The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon to Price's burying ground and was largely attended. The services at the house and the grave were conducted by Rev. Mr. Lovegrove. Besides a widow he leaves one daughter, Mrs. Fred. Walters, of Orangeville.

Marsville Literary Society held its first open meeting on Wednesday in the Disciple Church and it proved a successful affair. The popular drama "The Merchant of Venice" was rendered by the teacher and young people of S. S. No. 1. All the characters took their parts well and the play throughout was highly appreciated. Miss Elsley gave an excellent paper on Canadian Authors. A dialogue, "Jack Hayseed in the City," was also well rendered. Good music added to the evening's enjoyment.

Mr. Norman Cook has disposed of his farm on the 12th line, 150 acres (the Chas. Boyle property), also stock and implements to Mr. Campbell, of East Luther, for $12,300. Mr. Campbell gets possession this week. Mr. Campbell has sold his property to Mr. Elwood Turner, son of Mr. Joseph Turner, of the 11th line.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Handley left on Friday for their home near Loverna, Sask.

Mr. John Watson, implement agent at Orton, underwent a serious operation on Monday of last week and is still in a critical condition.

Last Friday Mrs. J. Manley, of the 14th line, had the misfortune to fall and break the bones of her wrist. Mrs. Manley is now 79 years of age and has met with similar mishaps on previous occasions.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Byers have returned to the city after spending a few months in this vicinity.

WHITTINGTON

A very successful meeting was held here last Wednesday afternoon and evening under the auspices of the Women's and Men's Institute. In the afternoon, Mrs. Parsons, the government delegate, gave a very interesting address to the women on Personal Magnetism, while Mr. Dorrance gave a benefical demonstration and lecture on grain and weeds. At night a joint meeting was held in the church. Mr. Dorrance, B.S.A., of Orangeville, gave an illustrated lecture on live stock and poultry after which Mrs. Parsons again spoke. Her discourse was on the war and except for a small amount of ill-fitting sarcasm was very much appreciated.

The Rev. J. S. and Mrs. Stevenson, of Laurel, entertained our League at the parsonage last Monday evening. All report a most enjoyable time.

Miss Winnie Varcoe, of Orangeville, spent the week-end as the guest of Miss Nettie Christian.

Mr. Alex. Coyne, of Brampton, is spending a week or two at the home of Mr. G. D. Ledlow.

Miss Greta Jackson is visiting her cousin, Miss G. Matthews, of Orangeville.

CALEDON.

On Friday morning last death came very suddenly to Mr. Wm. Emack at his home, lot 13, 1st line west. He had awakened about 7 o'clock and complained of pains in the region of the heart, but did not consider it serious, but he suddenly grew worse and the doctor was called, but before medical aid could arrive he had passed away with scarcely an hour's warning. Mr. Emack was a strong robust man, in his 65th year, and a few years ago had the reputation of being the strongest man in the township, but about two years ago he suffered a sun stroke from which he never fully recovered, but had been managing the affairs of his farm and attending to other duties about as usual. He is survived by a widow, two sons and two daughters, who have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement. The funeral on Sunday to the family plot in the first line cemetery was attended by practically the whole country side and was the largest seen in Caledon for many a day. Rev. Jenkins Burkholder conducted impressive services at the home and at the grave.

Mr. David Laughlin has leased his fine farm on the 1st line west, to his nephew, Mr. Cirus McClure and will hold a clearing auction sale of his stock and implements on the 23rd. inst. Mr. W. Hull, of Erin has been engaged to wield the hammer and if he is in good form we will have "something doing every minute."

A great number of our citizens and farmers attended the great March fair in Orangeville on Thursday last and while the prices for horses were generally far below what the owners would accept and as a result of this not many horses were disposed of, yet everybody reports a good time.

The young people of Caledon Methodist Church will hold their annual Box Social in the town hall on Tuesday evening, March 23rd. A splendid programme is being prepared and a first-class auctioneer engaged to dispose of the boxes. Programme at 8 o'clock sharp. Save up your nickels, boys, and buy your best girl's box.

Mr. W. T. Harris has been confined to his home with a bad attack of la grippe and bronchitis. Dr. Thomas is in attendance and we all hope to see "Squire Morgan" himself again before long.

Mr. Patrick Garrity, Sr., is now convalescent after being laid up with lumbago.

Mrs. W. J. Limebeer is visiting her father at Mono Road this week.

Have you had the la grippe yet? Sap's running!

HALL'S CORNERS.

Mr. John Hall has purchased the Ladd farm in Mono and will move to his new property about April 1st. He has leased his farm here to Bert Bailey.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson, of Toronto, are visiting at Jeffers Bros. this week.

Mr. A. B. Galbraith, of Toronto, visited at his home here last week.

Mr. Jno. Kirkton, of Melancthon Station, is busy in this neighborhood buzzing wood with his gasoline outfit.

Mr. Ben Sproule has purchased the barn on east half lot 5 from Jeffers Bros. and is busily engaged removing it to his own place.

Mrs. J. C. Reid, of Orangeville, is spending a few days visiting her daughter, Mrs. (Major) G. F. Gabriel.

Good rogds are a thing of the past for this winter. The townline is almost bare.

Mrs. Shields and Mrs. Galbraith visited with Primrose friends on Monday.

RICH HILL.

Present indications point to an early spring. Sea-gulls and wild ducks have been seen flying over our peaceful burg recently.

Quite a number from this vicinity attended the fair in Orangeville last week and the flat prices of horses gave our local horse fanciers quite a jolt.

Mrs. T. Hamilton and son, Jackson, of Laurel, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hamilton.

The manager of our local brain factory spent the week-end at her home in Orangeville.

Mrs. A. S. Bremner and little son, Donald, of Camilla, spent a few days last week with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Little, of Maple Leaf stock farm.

Mr. W. Ferguson and sister, of Campania, and Miss Clarke, of Crombie, were the guests of Mr. Morton and Miss Jean Rintoul over Sunday.

Several of our citizens participated in the Massey-Harris delivery in Shelburne last week.

Miss Gladys White and Mr. John Ledlow, of Whittington, and Mr. A. Coyne, of Brampton, visited Mr. and Mrs. A. White last week.

Miss Winnie Varcoe, of Orangeville, was the guest of her friend, Miss Nettie Christian over Sunday.

Mr. Fred and Miss Lizzie Sproule, of Cardwell, spent Sunday at the home of their uncle, Mr. Thomas Sproule.

Misses White and Dodds, of Peterboro, have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Manning for the past two weeks.

Miss White, of Glasgow, Scotland, is renewing acquaintances with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Whitten.

Mr. Walter Caven spent Friday last as the guest of Mr. Thomas Cook.

Mr. Barnhardt, of Corbetton, was in our burg a few days ago.

A number of our young people spent a very enjoyable evening at Mr. George McCabe's Wednesday last.

Mr. Thomas Kitteringham left last week for Caron, Sask., where he will spend the summer.

Miss Tessie McCabe has secured a situation in Alex Mann's Emporium, Camilla

Owing to the soft weather, our skaters have been thinking seriously of organizing a rowing club.

Mr. Harry Hamilton purchased a cow from Mr. Sanderson, of Shelburne, last Saturday. We understand he intends to send his cream to the Laurel creamery this summer.

What we would like to know:—

Where W. S. spends his evenings?

If W. F. gets good bargains at the Emporium?

What the attraction is for R. C. at Camilla?

When H. H. is going north again?

Where T. C. spent last Sunday evening?

If E. D. is still thinking of the fair?

If H. W. is lonesome now?

Why it takes Em. L. so long to feed the cattle on the lower place?

If the yellow dog followed T. F. on Sunday night? If T. L. still goes east?

If R. McC. was afraid to come home in the dark last Sunday night?

Which J. C. likes best, the third or fourth line?

If M. R. thinks of starting to school again?

Where H. K. got all the mud on his new cutter.

Will W. C. leave his dog at home next Sunday night?

CAMILLA.

Miss Bertha Doherty, of Orangeville, visited friends here last week.

Mr. Fred Turner has returned to his home in Toronto after a month's sojourn with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Turner.

Miss Tessie McCabe, of Shelburne, was the guest of Miss Janey Howard over Sunday.

Mr. Alex. Scott, of the Queen City, was home for a few days last week.

Miss Robena Thompson, of Orangeville, spent the week-end with her brother, Mr. Fred. Thompson.

Mr. Peter Bremner is spending a few days in Buffalo, N.Y.

Miss Muriel Howard, of the Orangeville Hospital, was home over Sunday.

Mrs. Jas. McDonald, who has been ill with pneumonia, is making favorable progress under the supervision of Miss Anderson and Dr. Kyles.

Mr. William Graham, of Mono Centre, is comfortably settled in "Beena Vista," Centre Road.

Mr. Jack Galbraith attended the Orangeville Fair.

MONO CENTRE.

Mr. W. G. Martin has bought Miss Reid's farm in West Caledon and intends to run it as a poultry farm.

Mr. W. S. Martin had a successful wood bee on Monday. Seven teams were engaged hauling wood from the bush to the house. They brought in 25 loads.

ARRESTED AS SPY.

Robert W. Service Almost Faced a French Firing Squad.

Mr. E. W. Walker, head of the wholesale department of the Methodist Book Room, Toronto, returned from Europe recently. He met Mr. Robert W. Service in London and discussed with him his new novel "The Pretender," before it was issued.

Mr. Service said he was going to the front to see what he could see—he was determined to go. So about a week later Mr. Walker was surprised to again meet the Sourdough poet in London. He had got to the front but he had come back faster than he went. He had gone to Calais, from which point he took the train for Dunkirk which is "at the front." As he approached Dunkirk he thought it wise to alight at a village some miles out and walk the rest of the way, as he would be seized at the railway station and sent back, or locked up. He entered the town as quietly and circumspectly as he could, but a French soldier soon demanded his passport. The only one he possessed was a year old, and dated at Naples. The French were very suspicious of him, and concluded that he was a German spy. An officer told him that they already had two spies and that as they were shot in groups of three he would just make the required party for a regulation execution.

Mr. Service was very seriously alarmed. He speaks French quite well now, his wife being French, and he earnestly appealed to be taken to a British officer. This was done and the latter was soon convinced of the Canadian author's identity. But he was also very angry. After giving Mr. Service a tongue-lashing for trying to go to the front, although he knew of the stringent rule against correspondents accompanying the army, he put him on the first train and sent him back the way he came with dire threats in case of a repetition of the offence. The Poet of the Yukon didn't stop till he got to London.

WALDEMAR.

Mr. Wesley Gamble is leaving on Friday morning of this week for his home in the West after an absence of three months visiting his many friends in this locality. We are glad to be able to state that Mr. Gamble is much improved in health and returns to the West in good spirits.

Mr. Arthur Grieves, who has been in the employ of Mr. Geo. Gamble, is leaving for the West on Friday morning. Mr. Grieves is a very energetic young man and in the farmlands of the West will have a fine opportunity to show his skill along agricultural lines.

Talbot brothers spent Sunday out of town, being the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Sproat, North Amaranth.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Thompson, of North Amaranth, spent Sunday with friends in town as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John McLeod, Queen St., west.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Tolton left last week for their future home near Markdale. Their departure from this section has caused much regret among the people of the neighborhood. Their place in the community will be hard to fill as they have always been courteous and obliging neighbors in every way.

Mr. John McLeod, C.P.R. bridge and building master, is confined to his home here with a very sore leg. Erysipelas would have been the outcome had it not been for the skilful treatment of Dr. Henry, of Orangeville, who by prompt measures managed to prevent the malady from developing. We hope to see Mr. McLeod able to make his usual rounds again very shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Evans have purchased the old Henry Talbot dwelling on Station St. They have also purchased the Stewart McCulloch property, which adjoins. The price paid was in the neighborhood of $400.

A very nasty story, without any foundation whatever, has been in circulation in and around this section for the last month or more. As is the usual thing in such cases, the foundationless falsehood is saddled on an entirely innocent party. The facts connected with the unfortunate affair are that a certain person (or persons) residing in the village has been untruthfully charged with stealing grain from a neighboring farm outside of the village limits. The owner of the premises is at sea to know how the falsehood got started as the proprietor of the premises saw no one at any time, either night or day, making any attempt to molest any of the belongings either in the barn or outside of the building. Its a great pity some people hadn't more to occupy their attention and keep them from circulating mischievous statements. As the old adage has it idle brains are the devil's work ground.

It is reported that wedding bells will be ringing on Station St. in the near future.

Mr. Will Gamble gave the boys and girls a big hoe down last Tuesday night. Hiram Evans was chief floor manager.

ELDER.

(Intended for last week.)

The Messrs. Holmes and Thompson Bros., entertained a number of their friends and neighbors to a Ball in Mr. R. W. Holmes' fine dwelling one night recently.

The floor was waxed for the fun
By J. J. Aikens and Johnny Conn,
Now pick your partners and come along,
At R. W. Holmes' party.

The dancing it was done up neat
For everyone had good-sized feet
And the music sounded clear and sweet
At R. W. Holmes' party.

Bonny Bob Huston was there in good time,
He walked that night from the Blind Line,
His calling off was like a chime,
At R. W. Holmes' party.

Jack Maguire kept at top speed,
By his side was sweet Miss Reid,
A friend in need is a friend indeed,
At R. W. Holmes' party.

Next in line was young Sam Holmes
Who stepped to the music of Casey Jones.
The crowd did shout in lively tones,
At R. W. Holmes' party.

George Aikins was calling some that night,
And in every figure it was "hug her tight,"
John Anderson took advantage with all his might,
At R. W. Holmes' party.

Theodore Wilson got slightly mixed
It was in the act of right and left six,
He said he would do better in the next
At R. W. Holmes' party.

When Little arrived it was getting late,
He hunted the crowd for his dear little mate
Then hurried to the stairway to arrange a date
At R. W. Holmes' party.

Lorne Halbert's waltz was superfine,
With his good partner, Miss Angeline
But what happened when he came to dine,
At R. W. Holmes' party.

Add Allen was there from the South Pole
But where was he when they called the roll?
Back in the stairway, so I am told,
At R. W. Holmes' party.

Austin Thompson was down at the shine
He sported a partner from the third line
And seated her for tea in right good time,
At R. W. Holmes' party.

This all took place on a Monday night
The moon provided the best of light
And at four o'clock all took their flight,
From R. W. Holmes' party.

A Presentation Party.

On Saturday evening, March 13th, about thirty-five of the members of the Young People's Society of St. Andrew's Church, Camilla assembled at the home of Mr. J. B. Little to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. James Oliver prior to their departure for their home in Bellwood. Mr. Fred. Thompson was appointed chairman and called on Miss Nina Bremner to read the following address:—

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver:

We deeply regret to learn that you are soon to leave our congregation and our community. During your brief stay with us you have been faithful workers in our Church and Sunday School and have readily and willingly helped us in whatever way you could. We assure you that you have made a large number of firm friends whose best wishes go with you. In token of our esteem for you we wish you to accept this silver butter dish and knife as a remembrance and may your Master's best blessings be yours wherever your lot may be cast.

Signed on behalf of the Sabbath School and Young People's Society.
Nina Bremner
Norman Rayfield
James B. Little.

Mrs. Oliver responded in a very feeling manner, thanking the friends for their kindly appreciation of the services of herself and husband. A great many speeches followed, both witty and humorous. Lunch was afterwards served and the members then joined hands and sang Auld Lang Syne before dispersing to their respective homes with the feeling that they had spent a very pleasant evening together.

CARDWELL.

Mr. Fred and Miss Lizzie Sproul entertained a number of Camilla, Whittington and Cardwell friends on Monday evening. A very pleasant evening was spent in dancing and other amusements. Mr. Walter Jenkins provided the music. The guests returned to their homes in the small hours of the morning feeling that they had spent a delightful night.

Miss Gertrude Jackson spent a few days with her aunt, Mrs. W. E. Island.

Mrs. Jno Jenkins is visiting friends in Erin.

Mr. Watson, a former student in charge of Mono West parish, spent a few days visiting in this vicinity.

BABY MONKEY'S CLOSE CALL.

The affection and ingenuity of the wonderful little monkeys of India are demonstrated in an anecdote related by Harriet White Fisher in "A Woman's World-Tour in a Motor."

Some soldiers, the story runs, were camping along a river where there were a great many alligators. One morning, frisking around in the trees were two or three baby monkeys. Every now and then the mother gave a cry of warning, but venturesome like all youth, one of them insisted on jumping a little farther along the boughs.

Suddenly this venturesome monkey lost his balance, and fell down in the midst of these ferocious animals. The cries of the mother brought monkeys from all directions, and in an instant's time the mother had stretched out her paw to another, and a line was formed with the mother monkey swinging down to grasp her baby; but each attempt failed to catch the little one, and she seemed to fear to attract the attention of the alligators below. Another squad of monkeys came to the rescue and began throwing cocoanuts down at the alligators to prevent them from grasping the little one. At last the line was sufficiently long for the mother monkey to catch hold of the baby, and with a howl of joy she sprang into the tree, and the rescue squad taking a farewell fusilade at the alligators, were soon lost to sight.

An official send-off was tendered the Berlin members of the third contingent in an enthusiastic and fitting manner. Each volunteer was presented with a $10 gold piece.

EARL FITZ WOUNDED.

Lieutenant In Irish Guards Thinks He Ought to Be Dead.

Lieutenant the Earl of Kingston, of the First Irish Guards, ought, according to his own estimate, to be dead. He is now lying at the military hospital, Denmark Hill, in southeast London, suffering from the effects of three bullet wounds and a fractured thigh. Telling how that came about, he said:

"We had a bad day in Nov. 1. About half past 7 o'clock in the morning the most damnable shell fire started, salvos of their big high explosives intermittently with what they call 'universal.' It has three distant bursts—one forward, one segmental and straight down, third segmental backward. This lasted till half past 1 o'clock. I called the roll in the trench and found I had only one killed and two wounded in spite of the spiteful fusillade. Of course, if we had not had a good trench we were all in.

"I walked down to the next trench, where Captain Mulholland was, reported all well, etc., and that I expected an attack. He had not had such a bad shelling, but had lost two more men than I. About 2 o'clock suddenly they started shelling again. Our guns answererd their fire, but there was no sign of an attack. The howitzers, however, had our range exactly. Suddenly I saw the Gordons retiring, followed by thousands of Germans. We could do nothing. If we shot there was as much chance of killing our own men as the enemy, as they seemed all mixed up—Gordons, Oxfords and Germans.

"They were enfilading our trenches, so we drew back on our left fifty yards and I made our men start throwing up a lie down trench as best they could, but the enemy turned a Maxim on us and I went down before it was completed. I had a rotten time. They shot at me on the ground, and shells burst all round. I had had my hat shot away before I fell. Then my sergeant and a drummer carried me away. I hear since both chaps have been killed. It seems wonderful to be alive. Even when our medical officer was dressing me two shells came through the roof and he dropped my injured leg. How it did hurt! And, poor chap, he got covered with boiling water. I am afraid there are few left in the regiment."

KITCHENER'S HOAX.

He Is Credited With Framing Up Russian Troops Yarn.

The famous hoax of the first weeks of war, when a body of Russian soldiers, said to number from 100,000 to 200,000 men, was reported to have circled around from Archangel, landed in Scottish ports and been shipped through at night to reinforce the British force in France, originated with Lord Kitchener himself, according to a statement made by a British officer to a correspondent of the Daily Dispatch.

It is a noteworthy fact that although the myth spread like wildfire through the United Kingdom, with any number of witnesses to swear they had seen and talked to the Russians in their native language, the Press Bureau did not issue an official contradiction for a long period.

The Russian story, says the British officer, was designed to impress the German commanders in Belgium and northern France, and to keep them in fear of a surprise either in the rear or on the western flank. It accomplished its purpose, for this dread was real among the German staff, and accounts to some extent for the retreat of General Von Kluk from Paris.

To give color to the report, Lord Kitchener is said to have caused a hundred transports laden with sundry goods to be sent from Scottish ports to Archangel, after insuring them in Holland. And when the British troops were moved from various points in Scotland and the north of England to the Channel ports, he ordered the blinds of the trains to be lowered, so as to arouse popular curiosity and speculation.

Cossacks' Amazing Horsemanship.

Cossacks claim to be pure Russian stock, and point proudly to the fact that they fought for Russia as far back as the tenth century. There are really two main types of Cossacks — one known as the Little Russians, and the other as the Don Cossacks, the latter being the better and more enlightened type. Both the Little Russians and the Don Cossacks, however, who together number about 1,600,000 men, are born soldiers and splendid fighters.

They are capable of doing anything in the saddle, and amuse themselves by such feats as leaping from the saddles while the horses are going at full gallop, and then remounting, springing from one horse to another, riding double, snatching a man from the ground supposed to be wounded, and picking up coins as they hang head downwards from the saddle while the horse is traveling at full speed.

Went to Headquarters.

An amusing incident occurred before the troopships containing the New Zealand Expeditionary Force left the Dominion. One sportive soldier handed a visitor a ship's biscuit, duly addressed and marked "On active service," and asked if he thought he could get it through the postoffice. The visitor took the biscuit, and smilingly remarked that if anyone could get it through he thought he could. It happened to be the New Zealand Postmaster-General.

A Descendant of Attila.

Although most present day descendants of the Huns are to be found in Bulgaria the proudest family of the Hungarian nobility—the Esterhazys—claim lineal descent from Attila; and the earliest Hungarian records to some extent bear out this claim, they certainly show no trace of this ancestry in their appearance, for Attila was physically as well as morally one of the most hideous characters in history, while the Esterhazys are a conspicuously handsome family.

Why Archduke Joseph Paid Hurried Visit To the German Staff

WHEN the Austrian Crown Prince Charles Francis Joseph hurried a few weeks ago to Germany to confer with the German General Staff it did not take students of the situation in the allied and neutral countries long to guess the purpose of the visit. Some such conference had been expected for some time, in fact ever since the inroads of the Russians through the Carpathians. Geographically Germany could scarcely find a weaker ally than the dual monarchy of Austria and Hungary. In the first place there is little love lost between the Prussian and the Austrian. They are the two centres of force in middle Europe and they have spent the last century in robbing each other of the weaker states which lie between them. Moreover, Austria's largest dependent, Hungary, has only a small portion of devotion for either the northern or southern Teuton. Her people are Magyars, with a different history and outlook from that of the Germanic races. A third weakness of the combination lies in the fact that Hungary, the more fickle of the Kaiser's two supporters, is so fixed by nature that she is exposed on three sides to possible enemies and requires a large body of troops to protect her. When the war broke out the inevitable happened. The ill-knit Austro-Hungarian army was defeated in Galicia and the Russians began to pour through the passes into the plains of Hungary. Germany was too busy protecting East Prussia and Silesia to render any assistance to her wobbly ally and as a result the Austro-Hungarian forces were left in an unenviable position almost surrounded by the enemy. To make matters worse, just as soon as the pressure on Germany's centre grew more severe, the Austrian army was deliberately used as a support for the German right wing. There they were with no front nor any plan of campaign acting as a buffer for the German flank and taking all the knocks. They could scarcely care for themselves let alone send men to protect the rich plains of Hungary.

Then it was that the Archduke Charles hurried to see the Kaiser. What he said is a deep secret, but the import of his remarks can be guessed. At any rate Germany's reply was to send ten army corps into Hungary to stiffen up the Austrian army and the whole force engaged the Russians to the south and west of the mountains. At first they were victorious, but the Russians shifted the pressure further north and Germany, with her customary solicitude for Germany's affairs, promptly withdrew her 400,000 men from the Carpathians.

Latest advices from that area of conflict show that the Austrians have met with further defeat. The army of the Archduke Joseph is in full flight along an extended front. Whether or not the Austrian Crown Prince will make another hasty trip to Berlin remains to be seen. Even if he does he is not likely to get much satisfaction for Germany needs all the men she has these days.

The accompanying snapshot shows the Archduke Charles (on the left) at the German headquarters.

Ear Defender For Soldiers.

An interesting invention which has just been adopted by the Admiralty is the Mallock-Armstrong ear defender.

It has been found that the heavy guns cause by their terrific din such mental shock that in some cases men are incapacitated for a time.

The earpiece is no larger than the cotton-wool plugs hitherto used, but contains a diaphragm of gold beater's skin, which, while readily responsive to ordinary volumes of sound, prevents any abnormal sound from reaching the ear.

This effect is brought about by a "stop" on each side of the diaphragm, which limits the distance through which it can vibrate. While the ear receives readily and clearly a word of command, it is protected from the noise of the discharge of a gun.

THE NERVES OF THE ARMY.

Canada's Engineer Corps Thoroughly Equipped for War Service.

The Royal Canadian Engineers, who have been mobilized at Ottawa and who will soon, with other regiments of the second expeditionary force, be on the fighting line, are a splendid body of sturdy young Canadians.

They will give an excellent account of themselves in the war zone. They are mostly picked men from all parts of Canada, McGill, Queen's, Toronto and the other universities sending whole companies and as regards personnel, equipment and training it is said this body is second to no force that Canada will send to the front.

As the present war is a war of brains, skilled fighters and trained men are needed in every department, the engineers in particular will take a very conspicuous part in the various operations. In sapping, mining and siege operations, crossing streams, laying telegraphs, building railways and bridges and trench digging, the skill and knowledge of the engineers are highly essential, and that the picked men of the army are assigned to this work.

A network of telephones keeps the leaders in touch with every trench. It is the work of the engineers to keep in order this nerve system of the fighting force and to provide proper trenches built on scientific plans for protection from the big guns of the enemy. The trench homes at the fighting line are now as complicated and elaborate as if a firing line were a subterranean city. Observation stations, aeroplanes, headquarters staff, trenches, reserves, hospital bases, all have to be in close touch with one another and this important duty develops mainly upon the engineers, who may be said to be the brains and nerves of the active force of the army and the connecting link that binds all units together. The most skilled technical men the country can produce are none too good for this vitally important work in modern warfare.

The men will have plenty of work ahead of them when they land in France, as no doubt they will be moved there in time to take part in the advance movement of the allies this spring. The force here has had a thorough training in all classes of engineering work this winter and is well prepared for the strenuous work of active service.

All the officers are university graduates. They possess the brains, physique and skill, and with their men, a large proportion of whom are also university graduates, will no doubt reflect credit upon themselves and glory on their native land when they reach the fighting line.

THE RIFLE GRENADE.

Marten Hale's Invention Invaluable to British Troops.

A weapon which has proven invaluable to the British army in France since the outbreak of the war is the Marten Hale grenade, a new military device which has revolutionized trench warfare. The siege operations which have marked the present fighting in the western theatre have seriously militated against the efficiency of the rifle loaded with a bullet. In the deep earthwork there is very little by way of target for the soldier and his rifle is used mostly to keep the enemy in a safe place. It is not convenient to carry many pieces of small artillery into the trenches, and the hand grenade, which is hurled into the enemy's lines, can only be used at very short range. Marten Hale's device, which is a shrapnel grenade about five inches in length and an inch and a half in diameter, is fitted to a rod, like a rocket stick, and the rod is thrust into the barrel of the rifle. The point of the grenade has a cap which explodes the "shell" by percussion. When a bullet strikes the bank behind a trench it buries itself harmlessly in the earth, but the grenade explodes on contact and radiates missies around it into the trench.

The range of the new machine is of course for less than that of the bullet, and the latter's accuracy of aim is not possible with the heavier projectile, but on the other hand the rifle grenade has a range only equalled by the mortar, and the rifle possesses the advantage over the mortar, that every every soldier carries one. Each private therefore becomes an artilleryman with a gun all his own.

London Teachers In Army.

A list compiled by the London Teachers' Association contains the names of 962 London teachers who have enlisted. Camberwell and lington share between them the honor of having sent the greatest number to the colors, each district contributing 66 men.

JAPAN'S ANTHEM.

It Has Been Used By Soldiers For Nearly a Thousand Years.

Through the courtesy of the Japanese Embassy, we are able to publish the words of the Japanese National Anthem, together with the English translation, says London Tit-Bits. Some interesting facts regarding this anthem were related by one of the secretaries of the Embassy. "The words were written," he said, "by a Japanese poet who lived in the tenth century, but whose name has never been discovered. They have been used by Japanese soldiers as they marched to war for nearly a thousand years. So far as is known, the verse was taken from a miscellaneous collection of Japanese poetry, and adopted by a bygone Emperor as the National Anthem for Japan. The music, however, to which the words are now sung was composed about fifty years ago by a Court musician. Previously there had been no real music, the words being chanted rather than sung."

KIMIGAYO.

Kimigayo wa
Chiyo ni yachiyo ni
Sazareishi no
Iwao to narite
Koke no musu made.

The translation is as follows:

THE EMPEROR'S REIGN.

May our gracious Emperor reign
Till a thousand, yea, ten thousand years shall roll,
Till the sand in the brooklet grows to stone,
And the moss from these pebbles emeralds make.

Sights Unseen.

It all happened in the smoke room of one of the liners as she was approaching Liverpool. He had during the voyage freely given evidences of his immense importance, but on this occasion he even triumphed over his former exploits. "Yes, gentlemen, I may fairly say that I have seen about all worth seeing in the civilized world. I have visited the Holy Land. I have been to Jerusalem, Rome, Athens, Paris, Vienna. I have seen the finest pictures, the grandest natural views, the greatest sculptures the"—

Just at that moment a somewhat shaky voice broke in: "Say, mister, have you ever had the D. T.'s?"

"No, sir; I am proud to say I have not," he answered in a shocked voice. "But why?"

"Well, then, all I can say is that your sightseeing has been pretty tame and you've got a lot yet to see."

The Better Part.

A delightful little story is told of Prosper Merimee, the French author. He was once a guest at a royal hunt when hares, pheasants and other game were driven before the emperor and his followers and the servants picked up the victims of the sport.

Among all the members of the hunting party Prosper Merimee alone had no trophy to display.

"How does this happen?" asked some one.

"Where game is so plenty the merit of a marksman seems to me to lie in hitting nothing," replied Merimee, with grave courtesy, "so I fired between the birds."

Stung.

The old gentleman went into the parlor the other night at the witching hour of 10.30 and found the lights out and his daughter and a dear friend enjoying a tete-a-tete in a corner by the window.

"Evangeline," said the old man sternly, "this is scandalous!"

"Yes, papa," she answered sweetly. "It is candleless because times are hard. Lights cost so much Ferdinand and I said we would get along with the starlight."

And papa turned about in speechless amazement and tried to walk out of the room through a panel in the wall paper.

Laid the Fault on Fate.

A man came before the great bestower and pleaded that he might have a flower for his own. His request was granted. Day by day he sat and watched it tenderly, glorying in its development. He dreamed of nothing else. He worshiped it.

Then it died. He had forgotten to water it.

And the man cursed a blind and prejudiced fate.—Westminster Gazette.

Hadn't Killed Him.

There is a certain young man who used to be notoriously egotistic. Some of his acquaintances were one day speaking of him before an old lady who was not "up" in the slang expressions of the day.

The next time she met him on the street she put out a congratulatory hand.

"Oh, Mr. Smith," she cried, "I am so glad you are better. I heard last week that you had a swelled head."

Bulgaria's Capital.

Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, might have been Constantinople if the Roman Emperor Constantine had adhered to the preference he felt at one time for it. Several places were thought of as the site for the new Rome before the unrivaled natural advantages of Byzantium obtained the honor—among them Troy and Serdica in Moesia, now known as Sofia.

Spring Impurities In the Blood

A Tonic Medicine is a Necessity at This Season.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all year round tonic, blood-builder and nerve-restorer. But they are especially valuable in the spring when the system is loaded with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the winter months. There is no other season when the blood is so much in need of purifying and enriching, and every dose of these Pills helps to make new, rich, red blood. In the spring one feels weak and tired—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give strength. In the spring the appetite is often poor—Dr. Williams Pink Pills develop the appetite, tone the stomach and aid weak digestion. It is in the spring that poisons in the blood find an outlet in disfiguring pimples, eruptions and boils—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily clear the skin because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. In the spring anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, erysipelas and many other troubles are most persistent because of poor, weak blood, and it is at this time when all nature takes on new life that the blood most seriously needs attention. Some people dose themselves with purgatives at this season, but these only further weaken them. A purgative merely gallops through the system, emptying the bowels, but it does not cure anything. On the other hand Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood, which reaches every nerve and organ in the body, bringing new strength, new health and vigor to weak, easily tired men, women and children. Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills this spring—they will not disappoint you.

You can get these health-renewing Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BREAKFAST IN BOHEMIA.

Where They Didn't Use a Bell to Call the Caterer.

In his published reminiscences of Henri Murger M. Felix Duquesnel tells an amusing story of a breakfast with the poet of the "Vie de Boheme."

Theodore Barriere, the dramatist, wished to adapt Murger's work to the stage. He had never met the poet, but he decided to visit him at his home and introduce himself. Murger lived on the sixth floor of a house in the Rue Gregoire-de-Tours. It was almost noon when Barriere appeared at his lodging, but Murger was still in bed.

"Pardon me, sir, for disturbing you," said Barriere. "I'm sorry to see that you are in bed. Are you indisposed?"

"No, not at all," said Murger. "I'm very well, indeed, and very glad to make your acquaintance."

"May I ask why you lie in bed on so fine a day as this?"

"I'll tell you," said Murger, laughing. "You know the story of Epaminondas, who stayed in bed while his clothes were being mended. That's my case. I have only one pair of trousers, and the porter has taken them to the tailor's next door for reenforcement, so I must wait for them in bed."

"Have you had your breakfast?"

"Yes, indeed—yesterday."

"Then we will eat together and talk the matter over."

Murger shook his head. "I haven't a sou," he said.

"Never mind. Be my guest." With these words Barriere took a five franc piece out of his pocket.

"By George, you're rich!" said Murger with admiration. "Let me see it; those things are strangers to me. Well, ring for breakfast."

Barriere looked round for the bell, but could find none.

"We haven't such a thing," said Murger. "In this place you act according to tradition—take that brick and heave it downstairs. Pere Guerin knows the signal; he'll come right up."

Barriere did so, and the man appeared. Murger then got up and threw a havelock over his shoulders, and in half an hour the two writers were eating their breakfast of pork cutlets and cucumbers.

Small Causes of War.

Nine hundred years ago a dispute between Modena and Bologna over a well bucket began a war which devastated Europe. A Chinese emperor once went to war over the breaking of a teapot; Sweden and Poland flew at each other's throats in 1654 because the King of Sweden discovered that his name in an official dispatch was followed by only two etceteras, while the King of Poland's had three. The spilling of a glass of water over the Marquis de Torey led to war between France and England, and a small boy, by throwing a pebble at the Duc de Guise, led to the massacre of Vassy and the thirty years' war.

Peruvian Sugar.

The enormous production of sugar cane to the acre is one of the surprises of Peru. Where it is grown the land is level and planting is an easy matter. When the cane reaches the height of two feet further attention in regard to cultivation is said to be unnecessary, and in from eighteen to twenty-four months maturity is reached. That the growth is luxurious may be seen from the fact that an average crop of forty tons an acre is obtained, while sixty and even seventy tons is not uncommon. In other sugar growing countries, including Cuba, twenty-five tons per acre are considered a good average, according to sugar experts.

The Word "Divan."

The word "divan" means "council of state" in Arabic and Turkish. Both Milton and Pope use the word in the sense of council in general. From meaning council the word came to mean council chamber and from that the arrangement of cushions round the chamber. A divan in this sense is strictly a row of cushions ranged along the walls of a room, either on the floor or on a raised step or on a bench. Hence we speak of a sofa or couch as a divan and of a thickly cushioned chair as a divan chair.

Contentment.

Contentment is the pearl of great price. Few persons are satisfied with their lot. No matter if they have plenty of work and good wages, they envy some one else who is doing better. The boy with the toy cart envies the lad with the bicycle, and the latter looks with covetous eyes on every motorcar that passes by. So it goes everywhere. The poor envy the rich, and the rich envy each other, and under such conditions the preacher of a gospel of envy finds it easy to gather a congregation.

Good and Bad.

A noted wag met an Irishman in the street one day and thought he would be funny at his expense.

"Hello, Pat!" he said. "I'll give you eight (in) pence for a shilling."

"Will ye now," said Pat.

"Yes," he replied.

The Irishman handed over the shilling, and his friend put eightpence into his palm in return.

"Eight in pence," he explained. "Not bad, is it?"

"No," answered Pat, "but the shilling is!"—London Tit-Bits.

See Your Own Faults.

Make sure that, however good you may be, you have faults that, however dull you may be, you can find out what they are and that, however slight they may be, you would better make some patient effort to get quit of them.—Ruskin.

Dodging the Issue.

"Why won't Miss Wombat dance with you? She seems to avoid you. Is she angry with you?"

"No, but I'm trying to get a chance to propose, and it looks as if she knows it."

Mountford-Lee.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, March 3rd, 1915, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Lee, Mono, parents of the bride, when Mr. Edward Mountford, of Shelburne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Mountford, of Mono, was united in marriage to Miss Ellie Beatrice Lee. The marriage ceremony was performed under an artistic arch. Miss Florence Lee, sister of the bride, played the wedding march, while the bride, leaning on her father's arm and accompanied by the bridesmaid, Miss Susie Mountford, approached the wedding arch. After the ceremony and congratulations the party sat down to an abundant and rich dinner, at which toasts were given. The presents to the bride were numerous and costly. The groom's gift to the bride was a pretty necklace with pearl pendant, to the groomsman, Mr. John Lee, brother of the bride, a set of gold cuff-links, to the bridesmaid, Miss Susie Mountford, an amethyst brooch, and to Miss Florence Lee, a handsome jewel case. The bride was dressed in pretty silk trimmed with overlace and wore a wedding veil caught up with orange blossoms. Her travelling suit was of navy blue zephyr cloth. Rev. Dr. Caldwell, M.A., B. D., of Shelburne Methodist Church, performed the ceremony. The young couple will reside south of Shelburne. —Economist.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

Death of John Gallaugher.

Death has once more claimed an old and respected pioneer settler of Tossorontio township in the person of Mr. John Gallaugher, who passed away on Friday, February 12th, at the advanced age of 75 years. Mr. Gallaugher was born in County Cavan, Ireland, in 1849. When 19 years of age he came to the state of Ohio to his brother David, who had already spent some years there. Two years later his father and mother and other members of the family came out. A year later they all came to Canada and after living a few months at Mono Mills they settled on the farms owned by deceased, lots 18 and 19 in the second concession of Tossorontio, where out of the forest Mr. Gallaugher hewed and cleared the farms on which he lived 53 years. His hospitable and jovial disposition and his fondness for merriment won for him a host of friends. In religion he was an Anglican and in politics a life long Conservative. The funeral took place on Monday, 15th ult., to St. David's Church, Everett, and was largely attended by the members of L.O.L. No. 472 of which deceased was a charter member, having a certificate from No. 1628, Macken Lodge in the district of Killeshandra, County Cavan, Ireland. To mourn his loss he leaves a wife, five sons and three daughters—John, William, David, Thomas and Ernest, and Mrs. Ralph Black, and Maggie and Lydia, all in Tossorontio, also one sister. The pall bearers were Thos. Irwin, R. H. Little, Geo. Lee, William Kidd, Francis Falls and John McCaffrey.—Alliston Herald.

To the Panama Pacific Exposition via the Canadian Rockies.

At the present time a great many are planning their annual tour. Considerable numbers visit the popular California Resorts, while many prefer the unsurpassed Resorts, Palatial Hotels and magnificent scenery of the Canadian Rockies. This year why not combine the two by a visit to the Panama Pacific Expositions?

Numerous people in comfortable circumstances, well able to afford this trip have mistaken the idea that a journey of this nature is most expensive. This is not so; thanks to modern railway facilities, an extensive trip, both interesting and educational, can be made with speed and comfort at a comparatively small cost. Why not investigate?

Those contemplating a trip of any nature will receive full information from any C.P.R. Agent; or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

Rennick-Tarzwell.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Tarzwell, third concession of Erin, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, March 3rd, when their youngest daughter, Emily Mildred, became the bride of Robert Mervin Rennick, son of Mr. Michael Rennick, also of Erin township. Precisely at one o'clock the bridal couple took their places under a beautiful evergreen arch, decorated with white roses, to the strains of the wedding march, beautifully rendered by Miss Myrtle Cooper, of Acton. The bride, who was given away by her father, was unattended and looked very charming in a gown of silk coline trimmed with shadow lace and pearls and wore a tulle veil, arranged in juliet cap effect. After the ceremony which was performed by Elder J. H. Taylor, of Grand Valley, in the presence of the immediate relatives, the guests repaired to the dining room and there partook of a dainty repast. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold bracelet and to the organist a gold brooch. The young couple took the evening train from Acton and expect to spend a short honeymoon in Toronto, the bride travelling in a suit of brown gabardine and picture hat with white plume. Upon their return they will reside on lot eighteen, concession two, Erin and carry with them the best wishes of their many friends.—Alliston Herald.

War Review of the Week

APART from the siege operations along the Dardanelles, whose conquest will prove the turning point in the war, the forces of interest during the past week has been on the British operations around Lille. Field Marshal French's offensive in that quarter on the western front began simultaneously with the colossal German advance on the Russians in North Poland, and seemed to have been designed only to prevent the removal of men to the east. Presently, however, the British attack was found to possess striking qualities as an independent tactical movement. It was not until Sunday, however, that anybody realized how great had been the British victory at the little village of Neuve Chapelle, outside of Lille.

A British War Office report issued on Sunday states that as a result of the struggles the British forces captured 1,720 prisoners. "The enemy's losses," it is added, "must have been very heavy, and cannot have fallen far short of 10,000 men in the three days' fighting." The official eyewitness, having something worth while to talk about, describes vividly the attack which resulted in the capture of Neuve Chapelle. The way was prepaerd for the infantry advance by a tremendous concentration of artillery fire, which practically wiped out the German trenches, and left the places where they had been covered with dead and dying men, many of them almost buried beneath the earth displaced by the exploding shells. There was not much fight left in the survivors of this terrible bombardment, although in other parts of the three-mile battle front the Germans made a vigorous and prolonged resistance.

The official report indicates that the British tacticians have taken a leaf out of the German book. The concentration of artillery in overwhelming strength at a selected point, so long as it can be accomplished with sufficient speed or secrecy to prevent the enemy making a similar concentration, gives the offensive power to break through the defending lines at any selected spot. The capture of trenches having a frontage of 4,000 yards, and the penetration of the German lines for 1,200 yards behind the first trench, marks the battle of Neuve Chapelle as the most important action on the western front since the battle of Soissons.

French official reports give details of recent fighting in the Argonne, some twenty-five miles to the west of Verdun. The capture of the village of Vauquois, occupying a position of vantage on high ground between the forests of the Argonne and of Hesse, has rid the French of one of their chief annoyances. This affair greatly encouraged the French, and seems to have moved even the enemy to praise. Some of the German prisoners talked freely of the improvement in the work of the French infantry since the earlier operations of the war.

In Alsace also the French are doing well. The German advance in the valley of the Fecht has failed entirely though vigorously pressed. A Geneva despatch states that in a recent action the Germans were decisively repulsed, and left 500 dead on the field, and probably thrice as many wounded. The French are securely in possession of the eastern slopes of the Vosges, and have, therefore, a marked advantage over the German army of the Rhine should they determine upon a general advance toward the river.

Von Hindenburg has failed to take Przasnysz on the rush. His advance guard got within 1,500 yards of the city and began to entrench there. The Russians were in so much greater force than anticipated that the Germans later withdrew hastily to a point three miles to the north of the city, where their lines are now in process of construction. For success in the drive toward Warsaw from the north rapidity of movement was vital. It is now over a week since Von Hindenburg showed his hand, and by this time Russian reserves from all parts of Poland must be moving up to the new front on the Narew and lower rivers. The German successes on the eastern campaign are all won near their own lines of railway.

Recent news from the Dardanelles is scarce. It is known that the bombardment of the forts in the Narrows was resumed on Friday, but nothing more definite has come through than a statement that Admiral Carden expects to pass the Straits before Easter. From Smyrna comes the report that the governor declares his intention of holding the city to the last. There is no news as yet of the arrival in the vicinity of the Dardanelles of the allied troops on the way from Egypt and North Africa. The Turkish high officials in Constantinople are sending the members of their households to places in the interior of Asia Minor.

German submarines were extremely active and very fortunate during Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Eight vessels in all are believed to have been lost.

The British Admiralty return indicates that up till March 10 the German, since the outbreak of the war, have sunk or captured 83 British merchant ships of 309,945 tons burden. Sixty-five were sunk or captured by cruisers, twelve sunk by mines, and twenty-two by submarines.

Japanese Army Kettles.

In the Japanese army every soldier carries with him kettles made of paper. The kettle is made of ordinary Japanese paper. It is filled with water, and then water is poured over it. It is then hung over the fire, and in ten minutes the water is boiling. This kettle can be used eight or ten times, and the cost of it is about six-pence.

BIG STORIES OF THE WAR AS TOLD BY SOLDIERS IN THEIR LETTERS HOME

Canadians Need Cigarettes, Says Officer Writing From the Front.

Dramatic Epistle of a Dying Frenchman to His Sweetheart.

THERE is unfailing interest these days in the stories of life among the troops in the trenches and on the battlefields of Europe, the more so now that every Canadian has relatives or friends in the scenes where the greatest war in history is being enacted.

One would imagine from a letter received from a Canadian officer serving with his contingent in France that neither "Jack Johnsons" nor the ubiquitous sniper, nor the unceasing German bullets cause him and his men so much concern as the absence of cigarettes.

"A smoke at night now is a great comfort, and it is hard to do without one," he writes, and then he adds: "Possibly we are not entitled to anything from the Imperial Government or from the British newspapers, but the Canadian Government has evidently not provided for us in this way."

He goes on to point out that the British Tommies get as many as 70 to 100 cigarettes a week, in addition to tobacco, while in their own particular case, for instance, twenty smokes are all they have received.

COULD HEAR THE "BOCHES."

Only a few days ago this Canadian company had the distinguished honor of being face to face with a regiment of Germany's crack army corps, the Prussian Guards. So close were they to one another that they could hear the "Boches" talking in their trenches and hurling abusive epithets at their inveterate enemy, the British.

"They are splendid shots," writes this officer, "and are very cunning. Despite the fact that the peep-holes in our trenches are concealed, they actually succeed in firing through them time and again. The other day they tried to draw our fire and locate our sentry by a clever display of dummy figures, and had we fired our volleys would have been returned tenfold. This dodge, however, like many, did not work."

A GERMAN RED CROSS DOG.

He describes the journey to and from their locations in the trenches as one of their most dangerous experiences. In one case these Canadians have to pass some distance in full view of the German trenches, which are not more than 200 yards away, and although they come and go under cover of darkness, bullets come whizzing around them. The other night the company had only just emerged from the danger scene when the Germans turned a machine gun on it for about a minute.

LIGHT FIRES WITH POWDER.

"No matter how fierce the attack, the men in the trenches are kept well nourished," writes a French soldier. "Fresh meat, beans, lentils, dried peas or rice, cheese or sardines, preserves or a cake of chocolate, a half pint of wine for each man and, since the cold weather set in, a nip of brandy in addition to our coffee; that's our fare. Troops intrenched even within 100 yards of the enemy receive the same, but as the company kitchens are two miles or more in the rear the food is nearly frozen by the time we get it.

"What we need in the trenches this freezing weather almost as much as the food itself is heat. One night our corporal came up to our squad and invited us to come into his trench at midnight for a cup of hot coffee. We laughed at the joke. Yet we felt enough curiosity to go.

"Taking an empty can of tinned beef, the corporal poured into it some grease and olive oil. He then dug a little hole in an earthen ledge he had excavated in the side of the trench. In this hole he placed the lid of a can. The bullets were then drawn from two cartridges and the powder emptied into the lid. Our cook next put a match to the powder, which flared up, poured in the grease mixture and placed a piece of rag in the middle as a wick. Two bayonet cases were stuck into the earth aslant and met above to serve as a crane for the tin bucket containing the coffee. It seemed slow work to us, but at last we drank our piping hot coffee, which tasted to us like nectar.

"Since then every man has taken to the fashion of heating his meals."

FROM A DYING FRENCHMAN.

The most dramatic letters come from the French. On one of the fields of battle, when the Red Cross soldiers were collecting the wounded after a heavy engagement, there was found a half sheet of notepaper, on which was written a message for a woman of which this is the translation:

"Sweetheart—Fate in this present war has treated us more cruelly than many others. If I have not lived to create for you the happiness of which both our hearts dreamed, remember that my sole wish is now that you should be happy. Forget me. Create for yourself some happy home that may restore to you some of the greater pleasures of life. For myself I shall have died happy in the thought of your love. My last thought has been for you and for those I leave at home. Accept this the last kiss from him who loved you."

SAFEST IN THE TRENCHES.

"The safest place at this war is in the firing line," said a British soldier who came back on leave. "It is getting into the trenches or leaving them that men get hit. Once inside you're pretty safe.

"Food is brought up once a day to the nearest convenient place behind the lines, a farm or a shelter specially rigged up. Two men from each section are told off or volunteer to go back and get the supply. It usually is a mixture of hash and beans and potatoes in a tin, and when it is warmed up it makes an Irish stew that sends a warmth down to numbed toes and frozen fingers.

"Sometimes the twenty-four or forty-eight hours of duty in the trenches is varied by a German attack. An odd night, as the men who have been through it say, those dense lines coming on, falling, wavering, breaking, closing up again, lying down at the word of command, rising on their knees to let off a ragged volley, then down again, then another advance, only to be stopped at last by the absolute certainty of death for every man if the attack is not recalled. The British Maxims rattle like an office full of typewriters, the men fire till the wood casing of their rifles is hot to the hand.

"However close the wave of foemen struggle it does not worry the British soldier now. The new principle is twenty-five yards of clear ground in front of his trench, and then, with one rifle to every yard, the British believe they can beat off any possible attack that can be delivered. That is the new principle. In fact, the British army has ceased to care much about having a big field of fire in front of its trenches. 'Let 'em come, and then pepper 'em' is the maxim in this war."

Her Great Love.

"Ah, Walter, if the ship should sink now how great it would be to die together!"

"I can swim."

"Oh, that's too bad!"

John L. Martin Dead.

The death of John L. Martin, a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Martin, of Alton, occurred at his home in Seattle on Friday, March 5th, after a lingering illness. Deceased, who was 32 years of age, had been on the staff of the Y.M.C.A. in Seattle for the last six years. He attended High School in Orangeville about 15 years ago and afterwards taught school at Granger in Mono township. He leaves a widow and one child and is also survived by his parents, three brothers and three sisters. These are Delbert Martin, West Caledon, Albert Martin and Mrs. Thos. Robinson, Mount Vernon, Wash., Mrs. Hugh Robinson, Monticello, J. Oliver Martin, Alton, and Mrs. Herbert Wilton, of Arthur. The remains were interred in Seattle. The bereaved relatives have the sympathy of many friends in their sorrow.

Mrs. James Corbett.

Mrs. Jane Corbett passed away at her residence here Sunday last after a fortnight's illness of pneumonia, at the age of 75 years. Mrs. Corbett came to Canada with her parents when ten years of age, settling with them in Scarboro. She later married James Corbett and together they became early settlers in the township of Melancthon. Her husband died fourteen years ago, and for some years deceased has been a resident of Flesherton. She leaves behind three sons and two daughters, namely, Benjamin, in Michigan, Mrs. H. Tisdale, of Leamington, Mrs. W. L. Wright, of Flesherton, James E., at the Soo, and George, whose whereabouts are unknown. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. Richard Cook, of Thornbury. The funeral took place on Tuesday morning to Shelburne, where the remains were interred beside those of her husband. Monday evening an impressive funeral service was held in the Presbyterian Church, of which deceased had long been a member. She was a woman of high character and kindly disposition, much esteemed by all who knew her.—Flesherton Advance.

George Sharpe Dead.

Ex-Councillor Geo. Sharpe, of Amaranth, died at Crosswell, Mich., on Monday, March 8th, at the age of 72 years. The remains were brought to Orangeville for interment, the funeral taking place from the C.P.R. station to Greenwood Cemetery on Friday morning. Rev. G. W. Robinson conducted the burial service. The late Mr. Sharpe lived on 5 sideroad in Amaranth township for many years. When he retired from farming he took up his residence in Grand Valley but moved to Crosswell eight or ten years ago. He took a keen interest in municipal affairs, serving in Amaranth and Grand Valley councils. He was English by birth and held very decided opinions on matters affecting personal liberties and privileges. He was a staunch member of the Orange Order and until a year ago always visited Grand Valley for the 12th of July celebration. He had been in poor health for a year or longer and his death was not unexpected. He was married three times and is survived by a widow, but no family. We understand that he has a couple of brothers living in Halton County.

Death of Thos. Speers.

A widely known resident of Mono township passed away last week in the person of Mr. Thos. Speers, whose death occurred at his home, lot 1, con. 4, east, on Wednesday evening, March 10th, at the age of 60 years. Deceased had been ailing all winter from heart trouble and was quite ill for about five weeks previous to his death. The end came peacefully with all the members of his family present at his bedside. Mr. Speers was born in Caledon township, being a son of the late James Speers. He moved to lot 1, con. 4, east, Mono, about 36 years ago and 34 years ago last August was married to Miss Margaret Cunnington, a daughter of the late Jacob Cunnington, of Caledon. He is survived by his widow and a family of three sons and one daughter. The latter are Austin Speers, of Prelate, Sask., Mrs. L. A. Blezard, Sceptre, Sask., and Harry and Bert at home. Samuel and Arch. Speers, Toronto, James, John, and Alexander, Caledon township, Mrs. Irwin Wilson, Caledon, Mrs. Geo. Wilson, Caledonia, and Mrs. Wm. Wilson, Caledon, are the surviving brothers and sisters. The late Mr. Speers was a quiet, industrious man and a successful farmer. He had a fine property and home to which he was greatly attached. As a neighbor and citizen he was held in high esteem and there is general sympathy for the widow and family in their bereavement. The late Mr. Speers was a member and staunch supporter of the Presbyterian Church. He had held the office of elder in Mono Mills Presbyterian Church for the last ten years. In politics he was a Conservative. The funeral was held from his late residence to the Forest Lawn cemetery on Saturday afternoon, when a large concourse of sorrowing friends and relatives followed the remains to their last resting place. Rev. J. A. Black, of Mono Mills, conducted the services and was assisted by Rev. C. H. Quaife. The pallbearers were the five brothers and a brother-in-law, Mr. Irwin Wilson. Among the beautiful floral tributes which bore testimony to the esteem of friends was a pillow of roses from the family, a spray from Mr. Arch. Speers, of Toronto, a wreath from the sisters and a shield from Mr. W. C. Cunnington, of Toronto.

John A. Island's Death.

John A. Island, only son of the late John Island, of Orangeville, died in Hamilton on Sunday at the age of 35 years. The remains were brought to Orangeville for burial, the funeral taking place from his late residence on Zina St. to the Forest Lawn Cemetery at 2.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Rev. G. W. Tebbs had charge of the funeral services. Deceased, who had been in ill-health for two or three years, spent several years farming in the West. He leaves a widow, who is a daughter of Mrs. Wm. Irwin, 2nd line, west, Mono, and one child.

Mr. William Emack.

Mr. William Emack, a well-known resident of the township, died very unexpectedly at his home on lot 13, con. 1, west, Caledon, about 7 o'clock on Friday morning. Deceased, who was a strong, vigorous man, had been enjoying his usual good health until the evening preceding his death when he complained of a severe pain in his chest. Later on he seemed to improve and was feeling fairly well when he retired. When he arose next morning he again complained of the pain and expired quite suddenly shortly after he came downstairs from his bedroom. The late Mr. Emack, who was in his 65th year, was a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Emack, who came to Caledon from Tyrone County, Ireland, about 70 years ago. He was a man of splendid physique and in his younger days enjoyed the reputation of being one of the strongest men in the township. He was an honest, hardworking man, a splendid neighbor, absolutely straightforward in his dealings and a kind husband and father, deeply attached to his home and family. He is survived by his wife, a daughter of the late James Rayburn, of Caledon, and a family of two sons and two daughters. The sons, George and John, and one daughter, Maggie, are at home. The other daughter, Beatrice, is attending High School in Orangeville. Mr. John Emack, of Orangeville, is the only brother. Of seven sisters, only three survive, namely, Mrs. Rose Thompson, Erin, Mrs. Chas. Hemsworth, Alton, and Mrs. Edward Greyell, in British Columbia. Mrs. Bowering, and Mrs. Tiffin, of Lucknow, Mrs. Jarvis, of Whitechurch, and Mrs. Jos. Wilson, of Erin, have all passed away. Deceased was a Presbyterian and a Conservative. The funeral, which was held to the English Church cemetery, 1st line, west, Caledon, on Sunday afternoon, was one of the largest that has taken place in Caledon for years. Rev. Jenkins Burkholder, pastor of Knox Church, Caledon, conducted the services. Messrs. John Nesbitt, Geo. Laughlin, Wm. Faulkner, Joseph Campbell, John Rayburn and Jos. Rayburn were the pallbearers.

Genial Greeting.

He—You were getting ready to go out, and I'm afraid my call is inopportune!

She—Really and truly, I would much rather stay here and talk with you than keep my engagement this afternoon!

He—I am delighted! But can the engagement be broken without inconvenience?

She—Oh, yes! The dentist won't mind!

Mrs. Robt. Marshall, of Camilla, has returned home after spending a few days with friends in Toronto.

Miss Wright, daughter of Wm. Wright, M.P. for Muskoka, is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Parkinson.

Mr. J. J. Hand, of Rosemont, a subscriber of many year's standing, was a caller at The Banner sanctum last Thursday.

Mr. R. L. Dermott, of Everett, paid Orangeville his annual visit on fair day and gave The Banner a friendly call while here.

Miss Dott McMillan, graduate nurse, who has been engaged in her profession in Toronto, is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. E. Irvine.

Mr. Lyle Campbell, who has been living in Dedrick, Northern California, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Campbell, for a few days.

Messrs. R. B. Henry and John Cameron are representing Orangeville Lodge, No. 156, A.O.U.W., at the Grand Lodge meeting in Toronto this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleve Conley, of Toronto, are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Conley, and other relatives in Orangeville and vicinity.

Mr. Chas. McLaughlin, of Norval, was a visitor at the monthly fair on Thursday and favored The Banner with a short but pleasant visit while in town.

Bandsman E. A. Brooks, of the 20th Battalion Brass Band, spent the week-end with his sister, Miss Brooks, before taking his departure with the 2nd Contingent.

Miss Bessie McQuarrie, of Caledon East, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. McMillan part of last and this week. Just now Miss McQuarrie is visiting friends in Hillsburg.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Walker, Zina St., entertained a number of their friends to a Shamrock euchre party on Tuesday night. Those present describe the party as one of the most delightful of the season.

Mr. T. H. White, W.M., of Orangeville District Orange Lodge, and Rev. A. E. de St. Dalmas attended the Provincial Grand Orange Lodge meeting in North Bay last week. They report a splendid meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McKee and family left for their home at Star City, Sask., on Monday, March 8th, after spending three months very happily with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Speers, 9th line, Erin.

Rev. Jas. H. Turnbull, pastor of Bank St. Presbyterian Church, Ottawa, paid Orangeville friends a flying visit on Monday. Mr. Turnbull conducted anniversary services in Galt on Sunday and took advantage of the opportunity to spend a day in his home town.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lewis, of Calgary, who have been spending the winter with friends in Ontario, started on their return journey on Tuesday. They were accompanied by Miss Nellie Lewis, Office Secretary of the Ontario Sunday School Association, who has been given three months leave of absence for that purpose.

Mr. Jas. J. Hubbard, of Toronto, was a visitor at the monthly fair last Thursday. Our former townsman looks well and the passing years seem to make no perceptible change in his appearance. Mr. Hubbard, himself a South African veteran, has a son, Judson, fighting the battles of the Empire with the first contingent.

Store in Toronto.

The local firm of F. T. Hill & Co. has opened a wholesale and retail grocery, produce and provision store in Toronto under the management of Mr. J. A. Langford, who has been a member of the selling staff here for several years. The new venture will give the firm an outlet for all kinds of small produce and will put it in a position to pay the highest market prices for poultry, butter, eggs, etc. Mr. Langford has proved a useful citizen as well as a capable salesman and the removal of himself and family to the city will be a loss to our town.

Daughters of The Empire.

The meeting of the Daughters of the Empire was held at the home of Mrs. Preston on Friday afternoon. After the usual business had been transacted a very enjoyable programme was given. It was decided that, as Mrs. McCallum is leaving town so soon, the next wool for soldiers' socks would be given out from the home of Miss Annie Clarke. All those wanting wool will kindly call on Monday afternoon and also leave finished work at the same time.

A Ship Surgeon.

Dr. J. Garfield Bailey, of Shelburne, who was erroneously reported killed in the first North Sea engagement, is now a surgeon on His Majesty's battleship, Hyde. Shortly after graduating from Queen's University in 1910, Dr. Bailey went to London, England, where he took a special course in surgery. He was in England when the war broke out and at once enlisted with the Royal Navy. Dr. Bailey is a son of Mrs. J. W. Bailey, Rosemont, and a brother of Dr. Trueman Bailey, of this town, and Dr. Norman G. Bailey, of Shelburne.

"The March to the Battlefields; or, Canada's Men on the Way."

The above is the title given a picture that will for many years to come be a highly prized treasure. It is a photographic reproduction showing the 32,000 men of Canada's first contingent breaking camp and on the march to join the Continental forces. It shows miles and miles of white tents and the marching men. It is a most inspiring sight. The size is 20 by 46 inches, all ready for framing. This picture is sure to be a popular souvenir of the war as far as Canada is concerned, and will be in great demand. It is owned by The Family Herald and Weekly Star, of Montreal, and a copy is being presented to all subscribers to that great national newspaper, The Family Herald, Montreal, whose subscription of one dollar a year is received from this date for a limited period.

MILLINERY OPENING.

MISS E. REID announces her Spring Millinery Opening in her new premises east of the Adamson Hardware Co's. store on Wednesday, March 17th. Everybody is cordially invited to come.

Lacrosse Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Dufferin Lacrosse Club will be held in the Public Library Building at 8 o'clock on Monday evening next. All lacrosse players and other citizens who may be interested are invited to attend.

Canadian Club.

A meeting of all citizens interested in the formation of a Canadian Club will be held in the Public Library building at 8.30 o'clock on Friday evening. Rev. Geo. Tebbs has received word from President Falconer, of Toronto University, agreeing to address the first meeting of the Club.

In The Dardanelles.

Alfred Bettis, a brother of Frank Bettis, who is living with Samuel Stinson, a farmer near Relessey, is on H.M.S. Vengeance, one of the vessels engaged in the bombardment of the Dardanelles fortifications. H. M.S. Vengeance is a sister ship of the Queen Elizabeth, the most powerful super-dreadnought sailing under the British flag. Frank has another brother, James, on H.M.S. Eden, a destroyer patrolling in the North Sea.

A Generous Offer.

Warren R. Grosskurth, owner of Laurel's Busy Store, will supply free of charge new shoes to children belonging to any family in Amaranth, who are in such poor circumstances that they cannot buy comfortable shoes themselves. The request for new shoes must be signed by a resident minister of any denomination. Last week 20 cases of Shoes were received in one shipment at Laurel's Busy Store.

Box Social at Caledon.

A Box Social will be held in the Town Hall, Caledon, on Tuesday evening, March 23rd, under the auspices of the Methodist Church. During the early part of the evening a large number of "Made in Canada" lunches will be sold by public auction, Mr. T. Scarland wielding the hammer. A programme of vocal and instrumental music, recitations and addresses will be provided. Each lady is asked to bring a box containing lunch for two. Admission will be free.

Young People Entertain

On Tuesday night the Young People's Society of St. Andrew's Church entertained the Young People's Society of Knox Church, Grand Valley. The early part of the evening was spent at The Dufferin Theatre, where an excellent programme was given under the auspices of the local Society. Some 200 people witnessed the pictures, which were exceptionally good. The films were "Billy's Riot," a screaming comedy by juvenile actors, "Uncle's Reception," a piece with a distinctly nautical flavor, and a special two reel missionary film, which was exceedingly interesting and instructive. Messrs. Jessop and Harding gave two splendid songs and received a well-merited hearty reception, both being in exceptionally fine voice. St. Andrew's S. S. Orchestra rendered fine music throughout, adding very materially to the enjoyment of the evening. After the Show the young people of the two societies repaired to the Sunday School room in St. Andrew's Church, where they sat down to a St. Patrick's lunch. The tables were very prettily bordered with Shamrocks and the decorations throughout were very pleasing. After speeches by Rev. W. M. Morris and Mr. McCulloch and Miss Buchanan, President and Vice-President of the Grand Valley society, more music was given by the orchestra also a solo by Mr. Harding and a piano solo by Miss Hazel Patterson. After expenses are paid the proceeds will be devoted to the mission fund of the Y.P.S. The success of the evening was largely due to the efforts of two committees under the direction of Miss Ruth McGuire and Mr. E. G. MacPherson, A.M.I.

CONSCIENCE

Should Be Carefully Tested by Principles of Christianity.

Friendships, Ambitions and Worldly Activities Should be Subjected to This Test

Rev. W. M. Morris, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, is preaching a series of Sunday night sermons on the Higher Powers of the Soul, including Conscience, Memory, Reason and Will. Last Sunday night he delivered the first discourse of the series to a large and deeply interested congregation, taking Conscience as his theme.

The popular definition of Conscience, said Mr. Morris in his introductory remarks, describing it as that faculty, or power, in man which says "I ought" or "I ought not" is the best available. Conscience is the voice that prevailed with the great discoverer, the missionary and the martyr. Every human being who has learned to realize himself as a person has become aware of the presence and power of this persuasive voice that says "I ought" or "I ought not."

In that striking picture "The Dweller of the Innermost," G. F. Watts represented Conscience as an ethereal womanly figure seated upon a globe and listening intently. In her hand she holds a trumpet while a number of sharp pointed darts are laid across her knee. She is depicted as listening for a higher voice, prepared to sound forth the message when it comes and to hurl the shafts if the message is not obeyed. The picture is a striking symbolic representation of the function conscience is meant to fulfil in the life of man. It is the voice of God to the inner depths of our nature—the voice of God speaking to the soul of man.

If conscience is thus given as a means to guide our conduct then it follows that our character and conduct depend largely on our treatment of conscience. It follows too that a sound and vigorous condition of conscience is essential to real worth and happiness. In connection with the trial of the McCutcheon brothers it has been discovered that they disposed of properties to a number of syndicates for $808,000. These properties never were worth more than $90,000. Nevertheless these men show no sign of an accusing conscience. They are no doubt conscientious in some other respects, just as there are people everywhere who are honest with the butcher and baker, but have no scruples about defrauding a large corporation. In this respect they remind one of the Wahabees, a Mohammedan sect, who see no evil in theft, treachery and adultery, but deem it a sin of the deepest dye to smoke or drink.

The fact is that a man's conscience may be clear while it is in great need of enlightenment. Just as the eye may be educated, to discern greater niceties of form and color, the ear to appreciate subtler harmonies or discords in sounds and the touch to attain an extraordinary degree of delicacy of feeling, so may conscience be brought to a more reliable degree of efficiency.

When John Hunt went to the Fiji Islands in 1838 the people were as low in the state of savagery as human beings could be. Cannibalism was a universal and a religious rite. Parents ate their children, husbands ate their wives, and children ate their parents. Lesser forms of evil were not lacking. To-day no community on earth has a greater percentage of humble, devoted, kindly Christians. The Bible is in nearly every house and on Sunday nine-tenths of the people go to church. The Christian religion has so enlightened their consciences that the things they once enjoyed could be no longer tolerated. There is no Christian or Christian community beyond the necessity of the knowledge of God and Christ.

We sometimes read of a ship leaving its course and being wrecked upon the rocks because the needle of its compass did not point steadily toward the magnetic pole. It was subsequently discovered that some kind of metal in the cargo taken on board caused the needle of the ship's compass to deviate. Conscience is the moral compass for our guidance during the voyage of life. Very often a boy leaves his childhood days behind and starts out in life on his own responsibility with a conscience clear, alert and true. He is often not far on the journey until ambitions, friendships or inclinations begin to warp his conscience and blind him to the fact that his character is deteriorating and his ideals lowering.

Like the good sea captain who takes out his sextant, tests his compass and arranges his cargo accordingly it is essential for every man, if he is to steer a true course in life, to carefully test his conscience by the principles of Christianity and arrange his friendships and ambitions in harmony with these principles.

Next Sunday night Rev. Mr. Morris will preach the second sermon of the series taking Memory as his subject.

Cardinal Facts.

Everybody can do a little.
Every man should do what he can.
Every woman should do what she can.

Improved production means increased production.

Canada's future depends upon our actions of to-day.

In serving the Empire we are serving ourselves.

Markets are not created, won and held in a day.

Now is the time to prove ourselves the granary of the Empire.

We have the soil, we have the resources, we must have the energy to use them to the greatest advantage.

As we acquit ourselves at this crisis, so will be our prosperity and pride in the years to come.

With more than half of productive Europe engaged in war, and large sections decimated, other countries and especially those forming the British Empire, will have to make up huge deficiencies, both of foodstuffs and material.

Great Britain imported 31,786,915 bushels of wheat from Canada in 1913. She imported 80,013,879 bushels from the United States. She also imported 12,789,969 bushels from Russia and central Europe.

Great Britain imported 24,148,833 bushels of barley in 1913 from Russia, Roumania, Turkey, Germany and Austria. From Canada she took 5,977,535 bushels, or less than a fourth.

Great Britain took 22,454,683 bushels of oats from Germany, Russia and Roumania in 1913, of which one half was from her bitterest and most savage enemy of to-day.

Great Britain imported 185,125,000 bushels of wheat from August 1, 1913, to July 31, 1914. Russia exported 163,267,000 bushels and Roumania 46,643,000 bushels in the same time. How far is Canada going to help make up the deficiency?

Great Britain imported from August 1, 1913, to July 31, 1914, 54,307,000 bushels of oats. Russia exported 34,750,000 bushels, Germany 25,077,000 and Roumania 17,195,000 bushels. Who is going to make up the deficiency of seventy-seven million bushels?

FREE EXHIBITION.

Edison's Motion Picture Play "Hope."

We are pleased to announce that the Advance Agent of the National Sanitarium Association has been in town arranging for Mr. J. B. Watson to deliver his popular illustrated Lecture on Tuberculosis and the Work of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives. A special and entirely new feature of this Lecture will be the free exhibition of Edison's well-known motion picture play, "Hope," a convincing presentation of the awful truth that Tuberculosis may strike anywhere at any time. The Lecture will be given in the Opera House on Sunday evening, April 4th, immediately after the close of the regular church services.

Danger Signals Warn You of Approaching Paralysis

Slowly and Surely Exhaustion Goes on Until Collapse of the Nerves is the Natural Result.

You may be restless, nervous, irritable and sleepless, but you think there is nothing to be alarmed at. You have no appetite, digestion is impaired, and there is weakness and irregularity of other bodily organs. You feel tired in body and mind, and find that you lack the energy to attend to the daily task.

MRS. ALLAN.

You may not realize that these are the symptoms of nervous prostration and the danger signals which warn you that some form of paralysis is the next step of development.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the most successful restorative for the nerves that has ever been offered to the public. This has been proven in many thousands of cases similar to the one described in this letter.

Mrs. Thos. Allan, R.F.D., 3, Sombra, Ont., writes:—"Five years ago I suffered a complete breakdown, and frequently had palpitation of the heart. Since that illness I have had dizzy spells, had no power over my limbs (locomotor ataxia) and could not walk straight. At night I would have severe nervous spells, with heart palpitation, and would shake as though I had the ague. I felt improvement after using the first box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after continuing the treatment can now walk, eat and sleep well, have no nervous spells and do not require heart medicine. I have told several of my neighbors of the splendid results obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

BRUTAL ASSAULT IN ADJALA.

Drunken Man Enters House, Smashes Furniture and Turns a Woman Out.

An example of the insane actions to which liquor will drive a young man came before Mayor Mitchell last Thursday when a young fellow, gentlemanly and likeable when sober, was charged with assaulting Mrs. Rich. Davis, of Adjala. The accused pleaded not guilty and Mrs. Davis was put in the witness box. According to the story she told County Crown Attorney Cotter, the accused went into her house about 2.30 on Tuesday afternoon, when her husband was at work. He threatened to throw her out, kicked at her, seized her, threw her across the room and then shoved her out of doors. She got into the house again but was seized by the throat and as she opened the door to let the children out, the drunken fellow threw her out, using vile language all the while. Mrs. Davis managed to get in again and get her baby and followed by her children, all in their bare feet, had to walk ten minutes before reaching the house of the nearest neighbor. The children was crying with the cold. The drunken scoundrel smashed the windows and furniture, overturned a bag of flour and did other damage. This was considered by the magistrate sufficient evidence to commit the accused for trial and he was sent to Barrie where he will come before one of the county judges this week.—Herald.

Death of James Mournahan.

In the death of James Mournahan at the home of his son, Louis, East Luther, on Friday, one of the few remaining pioneers of the township passed away. He was born in "Muddy York" almost 74 years ago, and on the death of his father came to Erin township when a young lad. After spending a few years there and in Garafraxa, he set out for Luther in 1864, which at that time was beginning to attract attention. He settled on lot 28, con. 12, and at once set about clearing up the land. A few years afterwards he erected the first frame barn in the township, drawing the material from near Georgetown, there being no sawmills nearer. He was a successful farmer, and having the advantage of very meagre schooling, he made up for any disadvantage in persevering hard work and a natural quickness of wit and mind. The people soon took advantage of his shrewd ability and in 1875 elected him a councillor in the old township of Luther. This he held for ten years, during which time separation of East and West Luther took place, and the railway bonus voted to the old T. G. & B. Co. Although often nominated for Reeve and urged to stand he thought he could best serve the people as Councillor. During the last 16 years he filled the position of Collector. Mr. Mournahan was a man of firm convictions, a pronounced Conservative, but broad minded enough to recognize the same privilage to those who differed from him, and among his warmest friends were those of a different political stripe. In his earlier days he was a devout member of the Anglican church, was one of the first Wardens of St. Clement's church which he assisted to build; but of late years had been connected with the Presbyterian Church. In 1866 Mr. Mournahan married Ottie Switzer, who, with five sons, survive. He and his aged partner were devoted to their family, whom they saw started in life under more comfortable circumstances than they had enjoyed. The family are Henry, George, Louis, James and Walter, all of East Luther. The funeral took place on Monday to the Union Cemetery, Grand Valley, and the immense attendance showed the genuine respect felt for a man, who had devoted so much of his time in the early days for their welfare and prosperity.—Star & Vidette.

POOR SEED.

Canadian Farmers Lose Heavily By Not Taking Enough Care.

Only nineteen out of one thousand Canadian farmers visited last year by the representatives of the Commission of Conservation were found to be following a systematic selection of seed grain.

An alarming state of affairs is disclosed, when investigation demonstrates that less than two per cent. of the farmers visited follow a systematic selection of seed similar to that followed by members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association. It is true that quite a number keep the best part or parts of their fields for seed but, in Prince Edward Island, less than one-third of the farms visited do even this and only fifty per cent. claims to do it on the two hundred farms visited in Ontario. In Nova Scotia, forty per cent. of the farmers and, in Quebec, thirty-one per cent., bought their seed grain. Too often this purchased seed is only feed grain shipped in from the west and sold as seed. Frequently it contains fout weed seeds and, when, as in Nova Scotia, only sixty-four per cent. of the farmers claimed to clean their grain in any manner whatever, these weeds are introduced to the farms. The western oats are sometimes frosted, and, as the farmer does not test for germinating power, a poor and thin stand often results.

The purchasing of seed often brings in new and unsuitable varieties. In one district in New Brunswick, seventeen varieties were found on forty farms and, in one district in Ontario, there were nineteen varieties on fifty farms. The farmer will buy these new varieties without knowing their strength of straw, susceptibility to disease or general suitability to his district.

Seed selection is not costly. If the farmer will save the best portion of his crop and then thoroughly clean that portion, by running it several times through the fanning mill, he will not find it necessary to pay out money for seed no better than, and often not so good as, his own, well cleaned. In many tests on the Illustration Farms of the Commission, it has been clearly demonstrated that it pays to sow good seed. In the case of clover, the crops from home-grown seed have proved in nearly every instance, to surpass those produced from purchased seed. In many districts where farmers think clover and grass seeds can not be grown, it has been proven that these seeds can be successfully produced. They are often found growing to perfection on roadsides and in fence corners, which goes to show that, with care, they will grow in the fields.

During the winter months is the time to prepare the seed grain for the spring sowing. Clean out all the weed seeds and poor and shrunken kernels so that the good grain will have a chance to do its best. The question of the quality of seed a farmer shall sow is largely in his own hands. It rests with him whether it shall be clean or dirty, good or poor. Good and clean seed will pay.—Conservation.

WHY HE QUIT THE BUSINESS.

Grim Story of the Man Who Used To Be a Drug Clerk.

"I got out of the drug business because something happened that nearly turned my hair gray," said the serious-faced man.

"I used to sleep in the store, and often I had to answer night calls. One night I was awakened from a deep sleep by somebody persistently ringing the door bell.

"I found a small boy at the door, and he handed me a prescription. I was so sleepy that I could hardly see, but I filled the prescription, the boy paid me and hastened away.

"When I went to replace the bottles I had taken from the shelves my eyes were open a little wider than in the opening stages of my wakefulness, and I was horrified to find that instead of taking down the bottle of tincture of orange I had used the next bottle, a deadly poison.

"I flew out of the street door and looked up and down the street. The boy had disappeared. I had never seen him before and did not know for whom the medicine was. I wanted to rush off to the doctor and find out who the patient was, but that I decided would be useless, as it would be too late to do any good.

"I entered the store and paced up and down the floor. My hair stood on end. I saw my victim in all the agony of aconite poisoning. I saw the pale face of death. I saw the family vowing vengeance.

"My heart thumped furiously as I heard hastening footsteps. I peered through the window and saw the boy who had brought the prescription. The bottle was gone. My only hope vanished. With a trembling hand I opened the door, prepared to hear the worst.

"The lad stood hesitating. Tears were in his eyes. I dared not speak.

"'P—please, mister,' he stammered, 'I ran so fast I fell and broke the bottle, and I ain't got any more money.'

"My heart leaped into my throat. I felt like giving a yell of joy as I leaped forward and pulled that boy into the store. I wanted to hug and kiss him. When I had mastered my emotion I gave him another bottle of medicine which I most cheerfully paid for out of my own pocket, and into the bargain I gave him the biggest handful of expensive candy he ever had."

A Clerical Error.

A salesman, traveling far from home and anxious about his home affairs, wished to write his wife so that she would answer immediately. He knew an appropriate Bible verse, but did not have a Bible handy to see if he had the right reference. However, trusting to his memory, he wrote:

Dear Wife—Proverbs xxv. 24.

He received no answer to this, and when he got home he asked his wife why she had not written to him. She got the Bible and showed the verse to him.

"Good heavens!" he said. "It ought to have been Proverbs xxv. 25."

In a Perfume Factory.

Musk is perhaps the most valuable and delightful of all perfumes, yet the refiner as he opens the musk pods must wear thick cloths over mouth and nostrils, so repulsive is the odor that the pods emit. Indeed, this odor, inhaled for any length of time, causes nosebleed. Civet, karagulluc and ambergris have in small quantities a delicious perfume, but in large quantities they smell so abominable as to give the worker nausea. The hawthorn blossom is delicately sweet, and perfumers prize it highly, yet a roomful of hawthorn blossoms smells like a charnel house. This, too, is true of the tube-rose.

Fourteen Carat Love.

Into a jewelery store there came a shy, pretty young lady with her engagement ring, which had been bought there and which she would like to have changed.

The ring fitted her exactly, and she was greatly pleased with the noble sentiment of the inscription, "Whate'er betide let love abide," but she did not like its arrangement.

Examination showed that the stolid, unimaginative old engraver had carved in the sentence regardless of the ringmaker's little stamp of quality, and so it read, "Whate'er betide let 14-k. love abide."

Casual Sympathy.

"Your daughter told me to come and ask your consent to our marriage," said the nervous young man.

"She did!" responded Mr. Cumrox. "And you came hustling right along, although you knew you'd probably find me in a bad humor. And you knew also that so long as Gladys and her ma had made up their minds my consent or refusal would n't make a particle of difference. Young man, you're being put through your family discipline too early."

Watch Crystals.

A few factories in Europe make all the watch crystals used in the world. These comprise five in Lorraine, two in France, two in Switzerland, one in Alsace and one in Bohemia. The annual output is about 800,000 gross. Hand labor is employed to a great extent in making the crystals, and the wages paid are very small.

Where to Sing.

"I will sing something restful to you, dear," said a lady to her morose husband. "Shall I sing 'Far, Far Away?'"

"I wish you would," was the bitter reply. "It would save the trouble of apologizing to the neighbors."

Never Touched Him.

Landlady (to new boarder, crushingly) — Mr. Newcome, that is the cream and not the milk you are pouring on your oatmeal. It was intended for the coffee.

Mr. N.—Oh, never mind, Mrs. Balkins. I like it just as well.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Years, Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

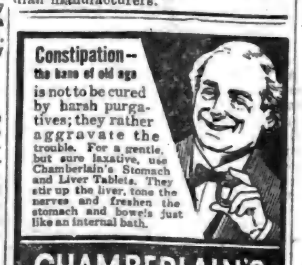
Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health:

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of womb and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully for years until I began taking your medicine. I also recommend it for nervousness and indigestion." — Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ont.

Chesterville, Ont. — "I heard your medicines highly praised, and a year ago I began taking them for falling of womb and ovarian trouble.

"My left side pained me all the time and just before my periods which were irregular and painful it would be worse. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated.

"I cannot say too much for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, for there are no medicines like them. I have taken them and I recommend them to all women. You may publish this testimonial." — Mrs. STEPHEN J. MARTIN, Chesterville, Ontario, Canada.



A SATCHEL SNATCHER.

Bobs Up in Alliston and Wrenches a Lady's Hand Bag from Her.

Four dollars and some cents, some drug purchases and a numbered railway transportation ticket was the swag secured by a young highwayman, who snatched a hand bag from a lady on her way to the C.P.R. station. The lady was Mrs. Munt, of Buckskin, who, with her sister, had spent the day in Alliston shopping. The women had noticed a young fellow apparently watching them all day. They decided to go to the depot about eight and going by way of Centre and Wellington streets they were about to ascend the steps leading up to the station platform, when Mrs. Munt's sister said to her, "Watch your purse; here comes that fellow now." The words had hardly been spoken before her hand bag was snatched from her grasp. She pluckily gave chase shouting for the police as she ran. It is strange that no person seemed to have heard her cries. The thief ran west on Wellington street along Centre to Victoria and across to the lane which leads to Queen street. Mrs. Munt followed him to Queen street where she lost sight of him as he ran into some shaded lots. She made known her predicament and to Constable J. J. Williams gave a good description of her assailant. Mr. Williams conducted her into several places, but she was unable to identify anyone as the party wanted. Mrs. Munt had to return home without recovering her purse, which contained among other things, her pass from Buckskin to Alliston. There is a likelihood that the guilty one will be brought to justice. Alliston cannot afford to have these people from up the line who come down here to shop robbed and the Mayor has instructed the constables to do their best on the case, not stopping at incurring some expense. The thief probably knew there was considerable money in the possession of these two ladies. He, however, snatched the wrong hand bag, securing only a trifle more than four dollars, while in the other lady's purse was a sum in the neighborhood of $150.—Alliston Herald.

MAIL BAG CONTAINS LETTERS FROM THE BATTLEFRONT

English Corporal Tells How It Feels to Bear a Cavalry Charge.

THE war mail bag is just now a prolific source of interest. Vivid letters from soldiers at the front or in hospital bases and scrappy notes from the tars with the "silent fleet" mirror the actualities of war with a wealth of intimate detail and picturesque personal touches impossible to the harshly censored war correspondent.

The following is written from the front by Corpl. T. Trainor:

"We have had German cavalry thrown at us six times in the last four hours, and each time it has been a different body, so that they must have plenty to spare. There is no eight hours for work, eight hours for sleep and eight hours for play with us, whatever the German may do.

IN A FRENCH RED CROSS TRAIN.

"The strain is beginning to tell on them more than on us, and you can see by the weary faces and trembling hands that they are beginning to break down.

"One prisoner taken by the French near Courtrai sobbed for an hour as though his heart were broken, his nerves were so much shaken by what he had been through. The French are fighting hard all around us with a grit and go that will carry them through.

"Have you ever seen a little man fighting a great big, bulky giant who keeps on forcing the little chap about the place until the giant tires himself out and then the little one, who has kept his wind, knocks him out? That's how the fighting here strikes me.

"We are dancing about round the big German army, but our turn will come. Our commanders know their business, and we shall come out on top all right."

Sergt.-Major McDermott does not write under ideal literary conditions, but his style is none the worse for the inspiration furnished by the shrieking shell:

"I am writing to you with the enemy's shells bursting and screaming overhead, but God knows when it will be posted, if at all.

"We are waiting for something to turn up to be shot at, but up to now, though their artillery has been making a fiendish row all along our front, we haven't seen as much as a mosquito's eyelash to shoot at. That's why I am able to write, and some of us are able to take a bit of rest while the others keep 'dick.'

AN UNEXPLODED BOMB AT KING'S LYNN.

"There is a fine German airship hanging around like a great blue bottle up in the sky, and now and then our gunners are trying to bring it down, but they haven't done it yet.

"It's the quantity, not the quality, of the German shells that is having effect on us, and it's not so much the actual damage to life as the nerve racking row that counts for so much.

A GERMAN FIELD TELEPHONE.

than for those on deck taking part in the fighting, for they at least have the excitement of the fight, and if the ship is struck they have more than a sporting chance of escape. We have none."

"We call the Germans the 'chocolate soldiers'," writes a soldier from the front, "because they appear to be always eating chocolate. When they attack or are attacked, when they are wounded or sick, by night and day, it's all the same. We have found some of their dead with cakes of chocolate between their fingers.

"During one of our Christmas armistices one of the German soldiers told me that the chocolate ration had been recommended by scientists as a convenient and exceedingly nutritious food and had sustained them very well in some of their long marches where other foods were not available."

A Horse's Medal.

A Russian artillery horse won a bronze medal at Plevna. Orders were given for some ammunition wagons to be hurried to a spot that meant crossing the enemy's zone of fire. All the time shells were crashing among the horses, bringing them down in heaps and frightening such as escaped. Times without number did the Russian drivers, sparing neither whip nor spur, attempt to urge the horses forward, but they stood cowed and shivering with fright. Some were blindfolded; but the effect was the same, and only one horse showed any willingness to go.

Thereupon the driver jumped down and, cutting the traces of the other horses, drove the willing one at full gallop through the fire. The wagon passed through without exploding, and after the war the horse was decorated in the manner described and the driver promoted.

MANY VIVID LETTERS FROM THE BATTLEFRONT

Riddled German Ship Was a Pitiful Sight, Says Gunroom Officer.

"Townsmen who are used to the noise and roar of streets can stand it better than the countrymen, and I think you will find that by far the fittest men are those of regiments mainly recruited in the big cities.

"A London lad near me says it's no worse than the roar of motorbuses and other traffic in the city on a busy day."

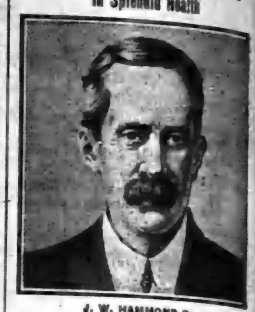
Equally interesting are some of the letters from men with the British fleet.

A gun room officer on a battle cruiser writes:

"The particular ship we were engaged with was in a pitiful plight when we had finished with her — her funnels shot away, masts tottering, great gaps of daylight in her sides, smoke and flame belching from her everywhere. She speedily heeled over and sank like a stone, stern first. So far as is known, none of her crew was saved. She was game to the last, let it be said, her flag flying till she sank, her guns barking till they could bark no more.

"Although we ourselves suffered no loss, we had some very narrow escapes. Three torpedoes were observed to pass us, one within a few feet. Four inch shells, too, fell short or were ahead of us. The sea was alive with the enemy's submarines, which, however, did us no damage. They should not be underrated, these Germans. That cruiser did not think apparently of surrender."

What naval warfare seems like to the "black squad" imprisoned in the engine room is described by an engineer of the Laurel, who went through the "scrap" off Heligoland. Writing to his wife, he says:



"It was a terribly anxious time for us, I can tell you, as we stayed down there keeping the engines going at their top speed in order to cut off the Germans from their fleet. We could hear the awful din around and the scampering of the tars on deck as they rushed about from point to point, and we knew what was to the fore when we caught odd glimpses of the stretcher-bearers with their ghastly burdens.

"We heard the shells crashing against the sides of the ship or shrieking overhead as they passed harmlessly into the water, and we knew that at any moment one might strike us in a vital part and send us below for good.

"It is ten times harder on the men whose duty is in the engine room

"Fruit-a-tives" Keeps Young And Old in Splendid Health

J. W. HAMMOND Esq.

SCOTLAND, ONT., Aug. 25th, 1912

"Fruit-a-tives" are the only pill manufactured, to my way of thinking. They work completely, no griping whatever, and one is plenty for any ordinary person at a dose. My wife was a martyr to Constipation. We tried everything on the calendar without satisfaction, and spent large sums of money until we happened on "Fruit-a-tives". I cannot say too much in their favor.

We have used them in the family for about two years and we would not use anything else as long as we can get "Fruit-a-tives".

Their action is mild, and no distress at all. I have recommended them to many other people, and our whole family uses them".

J. W. HAMMOND.

Those who have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives" are proud and happy to tell a sick or ailing friend about these wonderful tablets made from fruit juices.

Why Dodd's Kidney Pills are a Household Remedy

People Have Learned from Long Experience that by Curing the Kidneys Ills They Benefit the Entire Body.

Spry Harbor, Halifax Co., N. S., Mar. 15th (Special).—"I have taken a couple of boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and have received great benefit from them. They are certainly a fine pill for anyone suffering from Kidney trouble." So says Mrs. Alex. E. Nilchey, and she speaks the sentiments of a large number of the women of Nova Scotia.

Dodd's Kidney Pills have so long been in general use that they are recognized as the standard remedy for Kidney troubles. They have become a family medicine in thousands of homes. People have learned from long experience that if they cure their minor Kidney ills with Dodd's Kidney Pills they need not fear those more terrible developments such as Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Dropsy and Rheumatism. They have also learned that when the Kidneys are cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills the whole body benefits. For cured Kidneys mean pure blood, and pure blood is the foundation of all health. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills are universally popular.

NERVOUS DISEASES IN THE SPRING

Cured by Toning the Blood and Strengthening the Nerves

It is the opinion of the best medical authorities, after long observation, that nervous diseases are more common and more serious in the spring than at any other time of the year. Vital changes in the system, after long winter months, may cause much more trouble than the familiar spring weakness and weariness which most people suffer as the result of indoor life, in poorly ventilated and often overheated buildings. Official records prove that in April and May neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy and other forms of nerve troubles are at their worst, and that then, more than any other time, a blood-making nerve-restoring tonic is needed.

The antiquated custom of taking purgatives in the spring is useless, for the system really needs strengthening, while purgatives only gallop through the bowels, leaving you weaker. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine, for they actually make the new, rich, red blood that feeds the starved nerves, and thus cure the many forms of nervous disorders. They cure also such other forms of spring troubles as head aches, poor appetite, weakness in the limbs, as well as remove unsightly pimples and eruptions. In fact they unfailingly bring new health and strength to weak, tired and depressed men, women and children.

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DROPPED DEAD.

William Parkinson was Third Reeve of Eramosa to Pass Away Inside of a Few Months.

It is with the most profound regret that the Herald announces to-day the death of Reeve William Parkinson, of Eramosa township, which took place yesterday afternoon at his home on the Eramosa road, near the Four corners. Mr. Parkinson had been to the city during the forenoon, and had arrived home in time for dinner, and was apparently in the very best of health. During the afternoon he assisted in the killing of some hogs on his place, and when this task was over, he started to go into the house, but just as he arrived at the door he fell down and before assistance could be secured he had passed away. Death was almost instantaneous and was due to heart failure, although he appeared to be a strong and robust man.

A most remarkable coincidence in connection with the death of Reeve Parkinson is the fact that he is the third reeve of Eramosa who has passed away during the past few months. Last fall Reeve Chas. Mc-Nabb died after a short illness at his home in Rockwood, and he was succeeded by Reeve James Black, who was re-elected in January. He sat at the County Council session and in less than two weeks he died, following an operation at St. Joseph's Hospital, this city. It was only a week ago Monday that a new election was held to fill the vacancy and Mr. Parkinson was elected by a majority of seven votes. He never had the privilege of presiding over the Township Council.

The late Mr. Parkinson was the son of the late Lazarus Parkinson, of Eramosa, and was considered one of the most prosperous farmers of the township. He was honored and respected by all who knew him, and his judgment and advice was considered valuable by all his neighbors, who were greatly shocked to learn of his death. He leaves to mourn his loss a heart-broken wife and three children, the youngest of which was born the day Mr. Parkinson was elected reeve of the township. He also leaves three brothers and three sisters, all of whom are well known. His brother, Capt. George Parkinson, is on the staff of the 34th Battalion, while his brother, Howard, also resides in this city, with Edward still living on the old homestead in Eramosa. The affair has cast a decided gloom over the entire community, as the deceased was widely known and highly respected. He was about 45 years of age.—Guelph Herald.

HE MADE A HIT.

A commercial traveller had been talking his hardest, his most eloquent, his most persuasive, for nearly an hour to a shrewd Yorkshire business man. The old fellow seemed convinced and pleased, and the traveller thought he had his fish landed. But the Yorkshireman said: "There's ma lad, Jack. Ah'd laike him to hear what ye have to say. Will ye come this afternoon and go over your talk again?"

"Certainly, sir, with pleasure," replied the traveller heartily, and at the hour appointed presented himself again for the interview with father and son. Again he went over the points of the article he had to sell—forcibly, eloquently, persuasively. Never had he acquitted himself of a finer 'selling talk.'

When he had finished the old Yorkshire man turned to his son and said enthusiastically: "Do you hear that, Jock? Well, now, that's the way I want ye to sell our goods on the road."

The Test of a Fire Insurance Policy is

—FIRE—

Every fire tests the kind of service a company gives its policy-holders but the supreme test is the great conflagration that leaves a big city in ashes, forces many insurance companies out of business and makes policy-holders all over the country anxious about the security back of their insurance.

At such times the man who holds a policy of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company never worries. He knows that his policy is backed by ample assets and more than a century's record for the prompt payment of every honest loss.

That's one reason why we represent the Hartford here. There are other reasons equally good. May we talk to you about it?

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, MAR. 25th, 1915

Canadian Club Officers.

A Canadian Club was formally organized at a meeting in the Public Library Building on Friday night. Officers were elected as follows :—

President—A. A. Hughson
1st Vice-Pres.—Mayor Campbell
2nd Vice-Pres.—Dr. R. N. Kyles
Secretary—R. H. Neilson
Treasurer—W. G. Hyland
Literary Correspondent—A. D. McKitrick.

Councillors—Rev. A. E. de St. Dalmas, O. Wilder, A. A. Smith, Rev. G. W. Tebbs and A. E. Annis.

The Club will hold its inaugural meeting on Wednesday night, April 14th. The meeting will take the form of a Banquet and President Falconer, of Toronto University, will be the speaker of the evening.

The objects of the Club may be clearly gathered from the following extract from the Constitution :—

"This Club shall be non-political and undenominational and it is the purpose of the Club to foster patriotism by encouraging the study of the institutions, history, arts, literature and resources of Canada, and by endeavoring to unite Canadians in such work for the welfare and progress of the Dominion as may be desirable and expedient."

There are two classes of members —active and honorary. Any man, at least eighteen years of age, who is a British subject by birth or naturalization, and who is in sympathy with the objects of the Club, is eligible for membership.

Board of Trade Officers.

A general meeting of the Orangeville Board of Trade was held in the Public Library Auditorium on Friday night. The nominating committee, which was appointed to select officers for 1915, submitted its report. The meeting adopted the Report, which named the following as the Officers and Standing Committees :—

President—Mr. H. A. Dorrance.
Vice-President—Mr. A. E. Annis.
Council—Messrs. R. H. Robinson, O. Wilder, H. E. Thomas, Thos. Henderson, J. B. Adamson, B. McGuire, A. Walker, R. H. Neilson, Dr. Campbell, D. B. Brown, J. Foley, A. McPherson, T. A. Howard and Rev. G. W. Tebbs.

German Atrocities in France

The Patriotic Publishing Company, 1713 Park Avenue, Montreal, has just published the English translation of the official report of the French Government on the German Atrocities in France.

It is a tragic story, one that will draw tears to your eyes. It is an authentic document which shows what the Germans are and what they are doing.

Stories of brutal murder of peaceful citizens, outrages of the most horrible nature upon women and children, robbery, pillage of entire villages are told in the most simple and vivid form in this booklet.

A beautiful picture in two colors of Generals Kitchener and Joffre suitable for framing is offered free of charge with each book which is mailed in exchange for 12 cents in stamps to any one in Canada.

The book is worth while having and preserving. It is history of the most fearful and realistic kind.

Co-Operative Associations

Saskatchewan Has a Large Number in Operation.

Regina, Mar. 20th, 1915.—Agricultural co-operative associations in operation in Saskatchewan at the present time number 135, according to returns to the department of agriculture at Regina. The report submitted gives detailed information as to the accomplishments of the various associations. An indication of the possibilities of co-operation is furnished in the case of the Davidson Co-operative Association. In a period of less than eight months this association handled 27 carloads of cordwood, six carloads of lumber, one carload of fence wire, one carload of potatoes, one carload of apples, one carload of fence posts, and quantities of other materials and supplies. The government report shows that considerable profit resulted from this co-operation.

TREATING THE WOUNDED

Conditions Under Which Medical Men Do Their Work at the Front.

Dr. "Art" Snell Tells of Life in and Near the Trenches.

The Banner has secured permission to publish the following interesting letter which Mrs. Snell, of Bolton, has just received from her son, Dr. Arthur Snell, one of the medical men who went to the front with the first Canadian contingent. Dr. Snell is a brother of Mrs. (Dr.) W. H. Bowles of this town and played lacrosse with The Dufferins for a season some 15 years ago. Before volunteering for service abroad he was connected with the Permanent Force Medical Corps, holding the position of Inspector of the Western Division and having his headquarters at Wolseley Barracks in London. He was Staff Officer to Col.-Brydges at Valcartier. Dr. Snell's letter reads :—

France, Feb. 28th, 1915.

Dear Mother :

Well as you probably know we have arrived in France and as a matter of fact in Belgium. We have been here two weeks to-day and have seen the real thing at last. We first came up to our billets about 15 miles from the trenches and had hardly got settled when three of us—Maj. Beatty, Hardy and myself and 14 men and 3 ambulance wagons—were sent up here to work with this English field ambulance. We have been here now just a week and our men have been in the trenches four days. The troops go in for four days, so in this way they get a rest. This No. 2 Brigade of Canadians, with which we are working, has been in most of this week. You will have heard by the time you get this that we have had some killed and wounded. I guess I was the first one to dress a wounded Canadian—certainly of the 2nd Brigade. I was out at the Advance Dressing Station, which is about 900 yards behind the fighting line. The night our fellows went in one Canadian from the 5th Battalion from out West came in shot through the cheek bone, then down and across through his tongue. The bullet lodged in his neck under the angle of his jaw on the opposite side. He was a sorry looking spectacle as his face was much swollen. He ought not to die. The next night two others were shot through the brain—one dead and the other pretty bad. Our fellows at this time had not learned to keep their heads down. Another Canadian in the other Brigade was shot through the stomach. These are all I have heard of, but I believe there have been about twenty wounded.

The other day word came in here that an engineer officer named Irving had been killed. Well, I was quite worked up about it, as Tommy Irving, I knew, was with this Company. I went to the Advance Dressing Station to the funeral and saw Tommy Irving and was quite relieved. The dead man was a Lieut. Bill Irving. It was his first day in the trenches—pretty hard luck. He was shot through the brain.

The first day we arrived was foggy and we went right up to the Regimental Headquarters, which is just behind the first line of trenches and perhaps 400 or 500 yards back. Of course bullets are flying there, but at present things are very quiet and it is only the snipers who are busy. This is a funny war, as here we are in a fairly good-sized town with the people going around and every once in a while shells drop. Of course the Germans are searching out for the guns.

There is a lot of artillery here and there is an understanding apparently not to shell the billets. The Germans did once and our men gave them a hot time and they have not repeated the dose. We are pretty strong here and especially now since the Canadians are here, but of course this is only temporary. Our men have done pretty well in the trenches and one of the Generals complimented them on their work. One man, who was shot through the head, fired 45 rounds through the one loop-hole. The Germans finally got on to him and he got it. If one did not see the wounded men it would be easy to think that this was just a sham fight. There is a continual big gun fire and the rattle of the rifles but you do not see anything.

It is rather interesting to hear the British officers talk about the retreat in the beginning of the war and then the advance. Things were pretty lively then and I guess we will see something of the same again. Just at present, as I am writing, we have an officer from another unit and he is quite a talker—perhaps too much so. The officers of this unit are very nice and not too talkative.

Our Advance Dressing Station has had a couple of shells through it right into the dressing room. You see the artillery have a battery in the garden and other batteries are a little farther off. The Germans are after the guns and of course we are in the line of fire. The day I was out no less than 12 shells went over the building and landed in the water. It is surprising how these shells seem to fall in fields. Of course there are any number of houses hit and especially in our street, called "plug" street as it is all shot up. This trip up here is just to get our men used or broken into the smell of blood and powder and give them some idea of what the game is like. I think they have enjoyed it and it will do them good in the way of discipline. They shoot men here for offences that we have let go repeatedly. There is no foolin'. A man gets drunk and it is either shooting or prison for six months.

The first night the Canadians went into the trenches, a voice in English called over from the German lines : "Oh, you have the Canadians to help you. Well, send them over and we will give them hell."

How they got to know we cannot understand. They lip each other back and forward across from trench to trench. As far as hardships go, just here we have it more comfortable than on Salisbury Plain. You see the people in a good many cases have left their homes and the troops simply go in and make use of them as billets. Where I am there is quite a nice house and considerable furniture has been left in it. The Germans did not have time to do much damage here as they were on the run. They blew up all the bridges and our engineers are busy now putting up new ones. I do not know how the Germans are going to be driven out as it is suicide for either side to get in the open to charge. I suppose somebody will have to be sacrificed when the time comes.

I must close now. Ettie and Evans are settled in Twickenham and were well the last I heard. Love to all,

ARTHUR.

WITH THE CANADIANS

Lieut. McGuire Tells of Experiences at The Front.

Soldiers are Happy and Cheerful Despite the Hardships of Active Campaign.

The following are portions of two letters which Mr. and Mrs. B. McGuire have just received from their son, Lieut. Harry McGuire, of the 4th Battalion, First Canadian Contingent :—

February, 18, 1915.

My Dear Folk :

A lot has happened since I last wrote you, which was only three days ago, and I expect there will be lots happen in each three days now.

On the night of the 16th we had quite a nice time in our billet. The old ladies sang the Marsellaise and other songs and we sang our anthems and a few of our foolish songs which we called hymns for their benefit. They wanted us to sing them in Church the next Sunday. Our interpreter was with us and he is a wonderful singer, teaches singing in New York. He has a marvellous voice. He sang Chinese, Japanese and French operas.

Early the next morning we left our billet for new ground. We had some march—fifteen miles over rough roads and hard stone, which is terribly cut up. We passed through dozens of villages and towns. Some showed signs of the war. Graves and trenches were along the roadway. I would like to take pictures as we go along, but photography is forbidden.

We witnessed a modern air fight. About a dozen Allies' aeroplanes were attacking a German Zeppelin. It was thrilling to see the shots being fired by each. Finally the Zeppelin 'beat it' hard for home and we lost sight of the battle.

We are now billeted quite close to the trenches and within gun-shot of the Germans. We are billeted in rather close quarters in barns, etc. My platoon is in a hay mow and quite happy. The men enjoy the many feet of hay to sleep on. As I have to be near headquarters I am billeted with three officers in a smaller house and the four of us are in a very small room with a stone floor to sleep on. I would not be able to sleep on hay, let alone a feather bed now, being so used to stone floors. This house has been shelled by the big "Jack Johnstons." We are in the zone of fire and the Germans let a few shells drop around us to-day. We were quite interested in the bursting of the shells. One large one hit a safe in the village and it was amusing to see our boys run and get souvenirs of the shell. The cannonade has not been very heavy to-day, only for an hour or so this afternoon.

We go into the trenches to-morrow night for 48 hours. We are almost safer in the trenches than out here in the open.

A German aeroplane flew over this morning and shortly after the shells started. It is wonderful how the planes work in conjunction with the artillery.

Our men have a great time with the folks of the house trying to talk French. They can ask for coffee, etc., alright.

I shall write you as soon as I come out of the trenches and tell you how frightened I was. At nights it is a regular fireworks display and I fancy it will look prettier from the trenches.

March 2nd, 1915.

We have continued to be on the move lately. Last Thursday night we were on duty all night, then paraded all day Friday and had manoeuvres Friday night. Saturday morning at 5 o'clock I got orders to report at Brigade headquarters. We went from there by motor to the firing line, where we were in consultation with a few generals and staff officers over taking over a section of the trenches. We were right down in a "warm" spot. It was late when we got back to our billets and we moved off early Sunday morning. It was a beautiful day and the men were quite happy. We marched four hours to our new billets, which proved to be deserted factories. All our Company was in a knitting factory, and the men slept amongst the machinery. It is terrible how factories are destroyed or at a standstill for lack of material and men. Four of we officers got in a very small house, which already had Belgian refugees. We were to have slept on the floor in the kitchen, but Capt. Collins had to go into the trenches for instruction and Capt. Colquhoun went to hospital sick, so Jones and I got a bed, but really I did not sleep comfortably. The bed was too great a change.

We stayed there one day and moved forward another two miles and are billeted in a farm dwelling. The buildings are not large. Some men are in the attic, others over the pig pen, others in the hay mow, and others in an open driving shed, which is very cold. My men are in the open air billet and they call it a home for consumptives. They have made up the straw to advantage, also the waggons, etc.

We had some time getting wood for a fire. Troops through here for months have burned everything—absolutely nothing to burn. Bread is one franc a loaf (20c). Of course we get an issue, but a little more helps as the issue rations are enough for an unhealthy man, and I am ready for about three rations of everything each day. We manage a good feed when we get the chance, as bully beef and biscuits or bread and jam get monotonous.

A large duty each day after all other work is done is censoring letters and, believe me, the men can write a bunch of letters, which keep us busy for hours.

The men are wonderfully cheerful and quite happy. They have many songs of their own composition, which they are continually singing. Many sentimental songs are their favorites. "I Wonder how the Old Folks are at Home," is an especial favorite.

Friday night we go into the trenches again for four days and nights. I am looking forward to it. It is wonderful what the troops have come through in five months of fighting. It has been hard. Some are in a terrible shape, and they need the relief we are giving them.

The 10th Battalion marched past here to-day and I saw my old friends Lieuts. Thomson, Duncan and Knowles. They had been shelled out of their billets and were taking up new ones. The shells have not reached us yet.

I must get between my blankets now for a much needed sleep. With love to all.

HARRY.

At Bradford Too.

The Bradford correspondent of the Beeton World says: Over 4,000 Eaton catalogues were mailed at the Bradford post office this week to towns within the twenty-mile radius. By taking advantage of the new parcel post rates in this way the Eaton firm are cutting down expenses at the rate of $10,000 a week. They have fourteen men covering the country and will get the work done in a couple of weeks.

Out From The Far North

Mr. Clarence Harper, C. E., son of Rev. Dr. Harper, has just reached here from Fort Nelson, after a month's trip. On the way out from the Fort to the eastern end of steel of the Hudson Bay Railway, the journey was made by dog sleigh. On arrival at the railway after a fairly good trip out the party found that they had missed their train and would have to wait a week, the service on this part of the Dominion Government's railway not yet being such as to write home about. The party accepted the situation as philosophically as possible and proceeded to make themselves comfortable. Mr. Harper went in to Fort Nelson with a party of engineers last summer.—Collingwood Bulletin.

Thos. Harshaw's Estate.

Thomas Harshaw, of Toronto, who died on Feb 23rd last, intestate, left an estate of $18,260, comprising $800 in household goods and furniture, horses and rigs worth $125 and $80, respectively, $9,671 secured by mortgage, $583 in cash in bank, one-half interest in lots on Runnymede road, worth $1,500, and a house and premises at 805 Indian road worth $6,000. Letters of administration have been applied for in the Surrogate Court, and the estate will be divided to give Augusta F. Harshaw, the widow, one-third, or $6,086, and two sons, Albert Charles and Victor A., and three daughters, Fanny Maher, 846 Keele street, Erminie Carson, High Park avenue, and Georgina E. V. Miss Myrtle Scarland, of Nashville, Ont., spent Sunday at the home of her parents, here.

Mr. James Payne, a former resident of our village, is again taking up his abode among us.

We are sorry to hear that Fred. Malyon, a former Caledon boy, who went to the front with the 48th Highlanders of the First Contingent, has been wounded.

Miss Vida Warnock entertained a number of her young friends at her home here on Tuesday evening last.

Mrs. Geo. Jackson, of Mono Road, spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. Wm. Morris.

The funeral of the late Wm. Emack, which took place last Sunday, was very largely attended.

—The Banner has clubbing arrangements with all the city dailies.

RICH HILL.

Mr. A. White has purchased a fine driver to replace the one lost a few weeks ago.

One of our respected citizens intends holding an auction sale to dispose of his stock and implements. For further particulars see posters.

Mr. George Budd is busily engaged this week shingling his house.

Mr. W. J. Hamilton, President of the D.F.I., attended a directors meeting in Shelburne on Saturday.

A number of our young people spent a very enjoyable evening at the home of Mr. Isaac Sproule last week.

Mrs. W. J. Hamilton is recovering from an attack of bronchitis.

Miss Lottie McCabe has secured a situation in Shelburne.

Mr. Richard Caven spent a few days last week with Mr. Thomas McNabb, of Melancthon.

Miss Etta May Budd visited Miss Annie Kingsley last week.

Miss Harrison, of Shelburne, was the guest of Miss Jean Rintoul over Sunday.

Mr. Emerson Little spent a few days last week with his brother-in-law, Mr. James Trimble, of Whittington.

The young men of the burg had a "bachelors' party" at Thomas Cook's last Thursday evening.

Miss Tessie McCabe spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McCabe.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

General Merchant - Alton, Ont.

ALTON.

On Friday night, March 12th, the Guild of the Alton Presbyterian Church gave an entertainment in Science Hall, at which the Caledon Dramatic Club presented its well-known play "The Danger Signal." The Play was ably given before a large and appreciative audience.

On Sunday night last during church hours two cutter loads of hoboes put in an appearance from the neighboring town to our north and caused a disturbance by entering the Dixie House and misconducting themselves in a disgraceful manner. They will appear before P. M. Crawford on Tuesday, the 23rd inst. to answer for their doings.

We are sorry that Mr. W. D. Rogers, our storekeeper, is leaving our village. We understand that he has sold out to Mr. S. A. Shaw, of Malton. During his residence here Mr. Rogers has won the esteem of all classes and all are sorry to learn of his departure.

There has been a great deal of sickness in the village and surrounding country during the past month.

Mrs. R. Pegg has been seriously ill with bronchitis, but is recovering.

Councillor Wm. Hawkins has been confined to the house for the last four weeks with a severe attack of rheumatism. He is now on the way toward recovery, although still unable to leave the house.

The large and commodious two story addition, which the Barber Carriage Co. recently made to their already large works, furnishes convincing evidence of the large expansion that has taken place in the firm's business during the last two or three years. It also shows the faith the company has in the future of the business and the further growth they are confidently looking forward to in the years to come. This year's output will be considerably larger than that of any preceding year.

The Alton Knitting Mills are once more operating with their full complement of employees. The business outlook is very promising at present. Sufficient orders have been booked to keep the mills busy for the next six months.

Mr. Wylie Houston, our bustling and popular miller, reports business very brisk in his line. Wylie is always on the job and much of his success as a business man is attributable to his courtesy and close attention to the wants of his customers.

A. Dick & Son, proprietors of the Alton foundry, anticipate a brisk trade this season and are preparing for the usual output of wagons and sleighs.

Mr. G. L. Chamberlain has taken over and will operate The Alton Creamery this season. Mr. Chamberlain is an affable, courteous young man, as well as an experienced butter maker, and should make a success of his undertaking. Here's good luck!

The Dixie House is fast regaining its obltime popularity with the travelling public. Mr. Bowerman, the new landlord, is putting up good meals and first-class accommodation.

Patrons of the local skating rink report having had a very pleasant winter on the ice. Manager Peacock looked after the ice very closely and usually had it in first-class shape. With so much interest taken in skating and hockey a covered rink may be built in the near future.

ROSEMONT.

A flock of wild geese passed over our village last week.

Mr. Albert Stephens has his chopping mill going now and is doing good work. It is very handy for the farmers around our village.

Cecil Bailey fell against a circular saw on Mr. W. H. Hunter's farm last week and got his arm cut from the elbow to the wrist. Thirteen stitches were required to close the wound. We are glad to be able to state that he is doing as well as can be expected.

Only a short time to Easter now and then the eggs will catch it.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Stephens and family, who have sold their farm at Arlington to Mr. Ross Horsley, of Shelburne, have moved into our village. Mr. and Mrs. Horsley moved down the same day that Mr. Stephens moved out.

Everyone is rushing to the village now to get chopping done.

Mrs. Thos. Gallagher, of Alliston, who spent the past few weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Ernest McNabb, has returned home.

Mr. Thos. Henderson has purchased another farm near Granger. Mr. Henderson intends keeping the place for pasture.

The assessor for Mulmur, Mr. Dave Elder, of Lisle, paid us a flying visit last week.

Mr. Alex. McDowell had a very successful wood bee last week.

Mrs. John Breedon attended the funeral of her sister in Allandale last week.

Mrs. Wm. Hand, of Alliston, is visiting her daughter, Miss Hill Little.

CRANEVILLE.

Lovely weather, but keep off the grass I say.

Mr. William Smith has returned from the city and is feeling fine.

Miss Greta Jackson has returned home after spending a two weeks' vacation with Springbrook friends.

There have been a number of parties around here this winter, but suppose they are all over for this season.

Miss Vera Jackson was staying with her sister, Mrs. T. Duke, the latter part of last week.

Mr. Harold McArthur and Mr. Geo. Irwin were guests on the townline on Sunday.

Mr. Geo. Johnston, who has been visiting Mr. Wm. Smith jr., has secured a situation in the city.

We would like to know what the boys in this burg are going to do with all their potatoes.

CANADIANS ADD A LARGE SHARE TO THRILLING STORIES OF THE WAR

Intense Zest Arises After a While, Says Lieut. R. D. Ponton.

A Brampton Officer Calls the Prussians Vindictive Fighters.

THE war mail bag with its grist of human interest stories and oddities, humorous and grim from the front is of never failing interest these days, the more so because letters are beginning to arrive from the Canadians in the trenches.

"It was great," is the expression of Lieut. R. D. Ponton, writing from France to his father, Col. W. N. Ponton, Belleville, in describing his first experience under fire. "After the first half hour is over it becomes something indescribable. A great intense zeal arises and one immediately begins to call all his thinking powers together in order to outshoot and outpost the enemy. We went into the trenches at 3 a.m. on Friday amid bursting shells and machine gun fusilades in addition to searchlights and huge star shells. Such a sight and sound, it is wonderful."

SORTING CLOTHES FOR WAR SUFFERERS.

NIGHT WAS TOO FINE.

Former Detective William Miller of the Toronto police force, who is attached to the 48th Highlanders, in a letter to Inspector Kennedy tells of his experience in the trenches in a most interesting manner.

He says that he first entered the firing line on February 25. "We divided our men," he writes, "with the Westminster and Derby regiments. It was a lovely night, the moon shining brightly. I thought it was an ideal night, but soon found out it was the worst kind we could have had as the enemy's trenches were only about three hundred yards from ours, and it is in going in and out of the trenches that so many men are lost."

"This is not a very healthy pastime," writes Lieut. Conover, of Brampton, in a letter to his father, "as the Germans are fine shots with their rifles. They are equipped with telescopic sights and they can hit a man's head every time it appears.

M. POIRET AT FRONT.

Fortunately the Saxons occupied the trenches opposite us and they are rather less vindicative than the Prussians, who are regular devils."

A HEROIC BOY.

An instance of juvenile courage, worthy of a Henty novel, is related of a small boy on board H.M.S. Tiger during the last fleet action in the North Sea: "The periscope glasses of a turret were fogged by smoke and spray, making it difficult, if not impossible, to train the guns satisfactorily. A volunteer was asked for—would someone venture outside the turret and wipe the glasses? A boy, 1st class, climbed outside and cleaned the periscope. Firing recommenced, and the boy was forgotten. He remained on the turret and cleaned the glass throughout the action, being practically deafened by the roar of the guns."

AN ARMY DOG.

The Paris Figaro makes itself responsible for the following story of the adventures with the French army of a dog that rejoices in the name of Fend l'Air. Fend l'Air, it explains, was born in Algeria of unknown parentage, a street arab, that fended for itself from puppyhood. Intelligent and affectionate, he devoted himself passionately to the master that chance gave him. The war called his master to serve under the colors, and the dog managed to get on board with him. From Marseilles he crossed France and went to Belgium, taking part in the grand retreat. He was in the victory of the Marne, shared the life of the regiment in the trenches, and one night the trench which his master was helping to guard was blown up by a shell. Fend l'Air's master was buried, wounded. The dog scented out the exact place where he lay and started digging until at last he succeeded in summoning the stretcher bearers, who saved the wounded soldier from what seemed certain death. The man has been taken to the American hospital at Neuilly and is recovering, while the hospital rules have been relaxed so as to avoid the separation of the two friends.

UNOFFICIAL NEGOTIATIONS.

The Journal des Debats describes an exchange of messages between the GERMAN SENTRY NEAR YPRES.

French and German soldiers, written alternately on a blackboard in the schoolroom of a village between the opposing lines.

First the Germans wrote:

"You French fools! Do you not realize that you are working for the English and Russians? Sign peace with us, who do not wish you harm. Answer."

Next morning an adventurous Frenchman answered:

"You poor idiots, used as tools of the ambition of William and the doddering Austrian! Come over here; you'll find a good supper, lodging, and rest. The sooner the war is ended the sooner you will rejoin your wives and children."

The Germans replied:

"Brave Frenchmen, you are being fooled. Join us; let us fight the British together, and afterward live happily, hand in hand. Answer."

The French response was brief and unprintable.

"Tipperary" is now so popular in Brussels, writes a Dutch correspondent of The London Daily Express, that small boys in the street invariably whistle it when they pass a German soldier. One of the Landsturm asked a boy the other day what tune it was they were so fond of whistling. "Why, don't you know?" said the boy. "It's the national anthem of your allies, the Turks!"

PAUL POIRET AT FRONT.

An interesting figure among the notables serving with the French army is M. Paul Poiret, the celebrated dress designer. M. Poiret, who, by the way, visited several of the larger Canadian cities recently on a lecture tour, is possibly the greatest of modern costume artists, but like most Frenchmen has done his time in the army and is a highly trained officer.

Military Rattles For Alarm.

The sounding of military rattles is to be the signal at Gravesend, in the event of hostile aircraft appearing, for the inhabitants to seek cover. The military rattle makes a noise like machine-gun fire. It is used at training centres to accustom troops to interpret orders under fighting conditions and to test the penetrative powers of officers' voices.

CALEDON EAST

Leonard Rawn, only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Rawn, who has been under tuition of Mr. R. G. Cowan, G. T. Agent for the past fifteen months, has made such excellent progress in the operating line that he has been appointed as assistant agent, at the important railroad depot of Creemore, and left last week to take his new situation. This is considered an exceptionally brilliant record in the short time, and with attention to the interests of both the company and the public, Leonard seems to be assured of a bright and prosperous career ahead of him. This is the second village youth that our agent has tutored and secured in good situations.

Mr. Thos. Matthews attended the funeral of his aunt, Mrs. Abel Scott, last week at Beeton. The old lady was formerly a resident of this vicinity and with her husband lived at Scott's Lake.

The sale of merchandise in the old Cranston store last Friday and Saturday drew together a large crowd both days, who were not backward in bidding for the various articles offered for sale. The sale will be continued on Friday and Saturday next. Mr. Jas. Patterson, of Orangeville, sold the hard goods on one side of the store and Mr. C. J. Cranston the soft goods on the other. This was the latter's debut in this business, and many wondered what kind of a figure he would cut as an auctioneer, but if his initial trial may be taken as an example, he will certainly make his way as a knight of the hammer, and anyone contemplating having a sale need not hesitate to employ him.

Miss Smith, of Guelph, is a visitor at the Methodist parsonage as the guest of her sister, Mrs. (Rev.) J. H. More.

Rev. Mr. Purchase of Mono Road, is down with a rather severe attack of the grippe, and Mrs. Purchase is also a little under the weather. The Rev. gentleman was unable to take his ministerial duties on Sunday and Mr. Wilson and Mr. Steele officiated for him in the morning and afternoon while Rev. Mr. Wallace took the night appointment. At latest inquiry Mr. Purchase is greatly improved.

Mr. and Mrs. Watson, of Tottenham, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Matthews on Monday. The two ladies are sisters.

Robins made their appearance in the village on Sunday, making their presence known by plaintive chirps.

Quite a few in the village and vicinity are laid up with the grippe.

Closing Up The Gaps

The telephone is fast closing up the gaps between farm houses, making farmers neighbors in as real a sense as are townsfolk.

And it is not alone in this increase of neighborliness that the telephone proves a boon to the farmer. In the every-day business of farming it is a priceless aid. In the single item of enabling the farmer to keep in touch the markets in selling his produce the telephone has often saved ten times its cost.

In emergencies, the use of the telephone has saved lives, checked fires, summoned timely help and effected such economies of time and labor at critical moments as to make it invaluable.

Have you a telephone? It can prove its worth to you as it has done to others.

TINY AIRSHIPS ARE FAST.

New "Tabloid" Biplanes Fly a Hundred Miles an Hour.

On several recent occasions the British Royal Flying Corps have penetrated into German territory and succeeded in dropping bombs on the Zeppelin sheds, despite the fact that these shelters are protected by numerous anti-aircraft guns. Although these daring raids reflect much credit on the plucky aviators attached to the British air service, it is doubtful whether they could have been so successfully carried out had not the Flying Corps been recently provided with a new type of aeroplane, which can give points to any German machine. This is the tiny British-built biplane known as the "tabloid," owing to its diminutive size, and on machines of this type the British air raiders have been able to carry out their hazardous feats. The machine is a very light aeroplane, fitted with an 80-h.p. engine, and the high power forces the frail machine through the air at a normal speed of one hundred miles an hour. Over the engine is fitted a big armored cowl, and the body of the aeroplane tapers almost to a point, so that in appearance it resembles a big bullet piercing the atmosphere.

Owing to the enormous speed at which these machines can travel, they present most elusive marks to the German gunners, and also the slower Taube monoplanes cannot overtake them in the air.

The manner in which the Flying Corps use the Sopwiths for bomb-dropping purposes is to approach their ground target at a height of about 5,000 feet, then they bring down the nose of their little machines and dive almost vertically earthwards at a speed of 140 miles an hour. When within 500 feet of the object they desire to destroy, they drop several bombs in rapid succession, and then shoot skywards again, aided by the tremendous momentum gained by their swift descend. It was thus that Lieut. Marix recently dropped bombs on the Zeppelin shed at Dusseldorf, when he destroyed one of the Kaiser's airships, and, although hundreds of rounds of ammunition weer fired at his machine, the gunners could not register a hit owing to the terrific speed of the tiny machine which he flew. These British biplanes are the fastest and most dangerous fighting machines participating in the war, and are better than any of the Kaiser's aeroplanes.

THE MOUNTAINEERS.

France's Chasseurs-Alpins Are a Remarkable Corps of Fighters.

The famous Chasseurs-Alpins of France, the mountain riflemen, who with their flat Tam-o'-Shanter caps and long alpenstocks are some of the smartest troops of the French army are well described by a correspondent of the Paris Temps, who dined with their officers shortly after the corps had distinguished itself at the taking of Steinbach, in Alsace.

In five and and a half months the Alpine Rifles have fought everywhere along the front from Alsace to the Yser. They are brought up to each point in turn to make the final effort. Wherever they go they throw themselves on the German line with a fury that the enemy has learnt is almost irresistible, and then, having won their ground, they set to with equal vigor to secured it by digging themselves in.

"The Germans have learned by now not to do much in the way of counter-attacking until we have gone," said one of their officers with pardonable pride. "And all the same," he went on, "it isn't child's play to deliver an assault. You know how that's done. The men are gathered in the trenches and it is arranged that at a given signal everyone shall bound out of them and make a rush for the nearest enemy trench. Our men know the fate that awaits many of them.

"However well the ground has been prepared by the gunners, some of the first of them are sure to be hit. And then there is the mud, and it's not a pleasant thing to fall wounded in the mud with a bullet in your body. And then our fellows know, too, that even when they have taken the trench they will be exposed to death from hand grenades, that they will have to clear the communication trenches and saps still held by the enemy, which he can sweep with machine-gun fire. They've seen all that twenty times.

"And yet when the signal's given there's not a single instant of hesitation. The only man who stayed behind in the last charge was a poor devil who'd lost his reason."

Record In Hospital Work.

A London specialist, who is employed by the War Office as a consulting physician to the R.A.M.C. and Red Cross hospitals, says that the transport of the wounded from the front is now working so efficiently that one day recently a wounded man stepped into his consulting-room who had received his injury only eight hours previously. This is said to be a record.

No Overtime For Officials.

The British Admiralty have decided that the salaried officers of departments have a claim to consideration in the matter of overtime. The normal week is fixed at fifty-two hours, and overtime payment will be limited to twenty-four hours a week. Those who receive up to £200 a year will get 1s. 6d. an hour over time; up to £300, 2s. an hour; and up to £350, 2s. 6d. an hour.

Taxi-Drivers at the Front.

The taxi-drivers of London and the provinces have responded in large numbers to the call for service at the front. It is estimated that at least 3,000 of these men have joined the forces, many of them, of course, in the special transport services for which their training had particularly equipped them.

The Navel Orange.

The first we know of the navel orange, which is very valuable not only on account of its fine quality and taste, but also because of its being seedless, is of a single tree that was found growing on the northern shore of the Mediterranean Sea. This was about the year 1565. Grafts of this tree were taken to Spain by the Moors several hundred years ago, and from Spain the trees were carried to South America by the Spaniards.

THEY LEARNED THE TRICK.

East Indian Troops Soon Adapted Themselves to Modern Warfare.

The readiness with which the Indian troops adapt themselves to the altered conditions of modern warfare is the subject of a letter from Count D'Hincourt, who is with the British forces in France. He says:

"In their first encounter, the Indians impetuously made frontal attacks, ignoring the obstacles, and throwing themselves on the enemy. But they quickly learned the formidable character of the defence of modern warfare. This resulted in the restraint of their natural ardor, and the use of the inventive genius of Oriental cunning.

"Recently, in a valley bristling with traps and snares, they showed their adaptiveness. It was a night black as ink. Without waiting for the word of command, the Ghurkas crept forward toward the enemy's lines. The wind drowned the silent noise as they moved along the ground, and the darkness hid them. They advanced a long line which extended the whole length of the opposing trenches.

"Arriving at the barbed wire, on which the Germans had placed small bells and other means of warning, they cut one by one, using remarkable skill and care, making no noise to disturb the enemy.

"As soon as they had finished their work they returned to their own trenches. They explained to the subadar (captain) that the barbed wire now offered no resistance, and after a rapid inquiry, the British did not hesitate to take part in the adventure.

"An Indian lieutenant gave some orders in a low voice. A slight grating sound was audible from one side of the trench to the other; the men were fixing their bayonets. The officer by a silent signal, gave the order to advance.

"The Indians threw themselves on the ground, planting their kukris silent in the soil so as to draw themselves along. The British followed on bended knees, listening intently.

"When they came to the enemy's trenches the Ghurkas threw themselves against the stakes, which were no longer protected by the barbed wire barricades, and leaped like demons into the trenches.

"In the morning, as a feeble ray of sun filtered timidly through the great grey clouds, one could see the British seated on the edge of the newly captured trench, smoking their pipes, while the impassive Ghurkas draped in their woollen banas, dreamed of fresh nocturnal expeditions and new victories."

MME. CURIE AT FRONT.

Discoverer of Radium Is Hard at Work In French Hospitals.

Among the notable women who are taking an active part in behalf of the allies in the present war none is so devoted to the cause as Madame Curie, the discoverer of radium. She is now working in hospitals near the front with a complete radiographic equipment. Her labors in locating bullets and fractures are unremitting and the military surgeons are taking full advantage of her skill.

Mme. Curie is a Russian woman. Her maiden name was Marie Sklodowska, and she was born in Warsaw fifty-seven years old. Her father was a professor at the Lyceum in Warsaw, and it was there she received her preliminary scientific training which she completed at the Sorbonne in Paris. Shortly after graduation she married the French physicist, Pierre Curie, who met death in an accident in 1906. It was during her labors in conjunction with her husband that Mme. Curie discovered the element radium, the knowledge of whose radioactive properties is the greatest contribution to science in modern times. There are scientists who believe that the finding of radium is the greatest scientific discovery of all time and marks a turning point in human history, beside which even the present colossal war fades into insignificance.

Taking Precautions.

Acting on the advice of the military authorities the Withersea, Yorkshire, Eng., council has called on all shopkeepers in the town to close their shops and cease business for the day at 6 p.m. A dug-out is being made to shelter children in the event of a bombardment.

New Zealand's Reinforcements.

In order to maintain at its full strength the New Zealand forces engaged on active service out of the country the Government has decided to send drafts of 1,800 men every two months throughout the war. Plenty of men and horses of magnificent stamp are available.

WHEN ELIZABETH SCORED

Or a Case of Too Many Lovers.

By AGNES G. BROGAN

In all his trying experiences as an editor Richard West had never faced so peculiar a situation. The two young men had burst in upon his privacy, accusing and gesticulating in an incoherent manner. After much questioning their cause of complaint was found to be the recent publication of the following astonishing communication:

Mr. Robert Wells and Mr. John Glegg of Woodborough announce their engagement to Miss Elizabeth Thornton of this city.

Twice the perplexed editor read the paragraph, then rubbed his eyes.

"This is out of my province," he remarked at last, "but I'll see the society editor about it."

"No use," snapped Robert Wells. "We went to her first, and she says the clipping was inadvertently copied from the Woodborough Suburban. Any joke goes in that home town paper, but how a thing like that could 'get by' in a responsible daily"—

"Such blamed carelessness might bring a pretty suit against your paper," hotly interrupted John Glegg; "made things hot enough for us in Woodborough, but it was rather too much to have it repeated when we came to the city."

In a spirit of relief the managing editor turned to answer his telephone. "Editor Daily News?" questioned an aggrieved feminine voice. "Well, this is Mrs. William Thornton. I called up to ask explanation of that vulgar notice regarding my daughter which appeared in last night's paper. Yes; unfortunate mistake no doubt, but I will call to see you personally this afternoon—at 4 o'clock."

Viciously Richard West banged the receiver into its hook. "So there is a Miss Thornton!" he exclaimed.

"There is indeed," Mr. Glegg remarked feelingly.

"And you have both, perhaps, been paying her attention."

"Well, rather," this from Mr. Wells.

"I can only express, then, my regret for the occurrence and suggest a public contradiction."

"Contradiction," groaned the blond one of the two. "Good heavens, it's been rubbed in enough now!"

"If anything of the kind happens again"— vaguely threatened his companion, and the door closed with an eloquent slam.

Suddenly the editor's annoyed expression changed to one of irrepressible amusement. The smile still lingered as he returned to his work. But as the hour of 4 drew near and his clerk announced a visitor he glanced apprehensively toward the door and arose stiffly. It was only a girl who confronted him, however, not the dreaded Mrs. Thornton, whose important name figured so largely in social circles—just a slip of a girl with appealing blue eyes and a sensitive mouth.

"Are you the editor?" she asked naively and, uninvited, settled herself in the editor's chair. "I came about that engagement notice. Had to get here before mother, who will probably make a fuss. I am Elizabeth Thornton."

Bowing, the editor waited. "It was I who wrote the announcement," she calmly stated.

"You?" He swung about in unbelief. The girl nodded.

"It was one of my jokes," she said ruefully. "They always turn out the wrong way." She leaned forward confidentially. "Do you know what it means to have reckless impulses, Mr. West—doing or saying a thing you are bound to be desperately sorry for next day? Well, that's me. Let me explain about that foolish announcement." Miss Thornton's suddenly embarrassed gaze sought the toe of her foot.

"You see, I have known those two boys, Bobbie and Jack, for some time, and we've gone around a lot together, more or less. One afternoon unexpectedly and 'right out of a clear sky'—Bobbie asked me when—we were—going to be—married. Why, I'd never even thought of such a thing. When I tried to tell him so he insisted quite stubbornly that the marriage question had always been understood between us; said when he talked about it I had never contradicted him." Miss Thornton raised aggrieved eyes to the editor. "Now, wasn't that unreasonable," she demanded, "to be expected to marry a man just because one had not gone round denying being engaged to him? And that very evening"—she paused impressively — "Jack Glegg comes walking over to ask me when I'm going to marry him; declared I knew all along that the house he was building was for me.

"I had encouraged Jack in the building," Miss Thornton admitted, "because he's naturally idle, and I like to see him busy. But it seems Jack had told me the roof would never go on his house until he had the promise of a wife to occupy it, and, of course, any one would have advised him to put on the roof. So," she sighed, "it ended by both boys accusing me of falsely leading them on while being engaged to the other, and when I emphatically denied this to each they settled back comfortably, believing me to be still their 'own betrothed.'" Miss Elizabeth Thornton laughed.

"It was all so perfectly ridiculous," she continued, "that I decided to give them enough of the subject and wrote that silly notice, hurrying it off to their home town paper to greet them when they arrived. Woodborough enjoys publishing amusing personalities, and I expected the affair to end in a laugh." She regarded the editor accusingly. "But, oh, when the awful thing came out in your paper!" Miss Thornton threw out her hands. "Now I'm afraid—for you," she said.

Richard West followed the girl to the door and then surprised himself by continuing to follow into the elevator and on down to the street, where he stood an unnecessary length of time assuring her of his regret and of his ability to soothe the ruffled feelings of her mother. Again, in his office he stooped to pick up a bunch of faded violets which had fallen from the girl's belt and to place them carefully in his desk. Then he leaned back in his chair, falling into a pleasant reverie. Each fragrant breath from the violets seemed to bring back in an indefinable way the piquant charm of the girl's presence—that one laughing gleam from her bluebell eyes. And so for days the winsome face haunted his memory.

Richard West formed a habit of gazing eagerly down at the passersby or of falling into brown studies before his desk. Then, one day, the girl's well remembered name caught his eye, seeming to stand out in glowing letters upon the social column of his own paper. When he had read the passage a second time he summoned the social editor.

"Let me know," he requested, "if this announcement has been duly authorized." The social editor peered through her glasses.

"The engagement of Miss Elizabeth Thornton to Mr. Robert Wells," she quoted. "Oh, yes, that is correct! The notice was copied by request from a Beechwood paper. Miss Thornton has been a guest at the Balmoral, returning this week, as the notice says, to be married in the city. I will send you the original copy."

Swiftly the editor's practiced eye scanned the bold signature. "Authorized for publication by Robert Wells." Undecidedly his hand went out toward the telephone. Then, as if in answer to his thought, the office door was opened to admit a small figure.

"May I come in?" asked a diffident voice. Richard West's heretofore well behaved heart beat a rapid tattoo as the vision in blue advanced to his side.

"I did not think you would do it again," she reproached him. In silent exoneration he handed to her the original signed slip of the disturbing announcement, watching in vast relief as rebellious color flooded the girl's indignant face.

"It is just as I thought," she cried. "Robert Wells wrote the wretched thing for revenge.

"And the fact stated is not true?"

Miss Thornton scorned the eager question. "I was having such a lovely time," she said—"dancing, driving, tennis! Now he has spoiled it all. If I had leprosy I could not be more avoided. 'Returning to be married in the city,'" she mocked. "I'll never be married as long as I live. This time you are not to blame, and I came down to scold you."

"One might be driven to second offense," he told her, "for the pleasure of seeing you once more."

"You may see me again sooner than you expect," she laughed, and her prophecy came true.

It was a flushed and beautiful young woman of dashing eye who burst in upon him one gloriously memorable morning.

"I hope I'm in time," she began breathlessly and waving aloft a paper. Grandmother read it last night in the Farm Gazette."

With that glowing face so near his own, it was rather difficult at first to grasp the significance of this latest message, but presently Richard West realized that "Miss Elizabeth Thornton was again reported engaged, Mr. John Glegg this time figuring as the fortunate bridegroom elect."

"Isn't it contemptible?" Miss Thornton glanced distractingly through a floating strand of hair. "You see, they have agreed together to get—even. Oh, I wish"— The resonant voice broke tremulously as the girl turned to the window.

Richard West followed, shaken, between a desire for deep sympathy and a desire for helpless laughter, wondering at the mighty emotion which surged within him at the sight of two very genuine tears creeping down the girl's averted cheek. Tightly his hand closed over hers.

"It has all been so childishly foolish," she murmured.

"Perhaps it has," the man answered gently, "but I'm afraid that I cannot be sorry, Elizabeth"—he paused, and the name was allowed to pass.

"I can't be sorry because the 'foolishness' brought you to me, and I can't be quite sorry for your tears. Tears prove the existence of a heart, and if you have one—if—I—have—I want it—to keep forever, Elizabeth."

Silence in the office while the telephone bell rang unheard; then Richard West rushed over to his desk to pen a hasty line.

"There," he cried triumphantly; "that goes into the paper tonight, and I think, dear, you've scored the boys there."

Glancing over her lover's shoulder the girl read aloud: "The engagement is announced of Miss Elizabeth Thornton to Mr. Richard West. Wedding to take place next month."

Tenderly her eyes sought those of the editor. "Authorized for publication by Elizabeth Thornton," she said.

THE WHOLE CLASS.

"It is such a rainy day I don't believe I'll go to school," said Charles B—— to his mother.

"Why, my son! You are not afraid of the rain, I hope?"

"O, no!"

"I thought you loved to go to school."

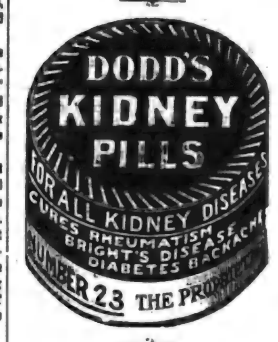
"So I do, when the other boys are there; but you know that Willie and Frank are out of town, Joseph is sick, and it is so very rainy that others cannot come so far."

"Then I should think that there would be all the more need of your going to encourage your teacher."

"Yes, I know it; but it is rather hard on a boy to be the whole class in school."

"Don't you have your lessons learned?"

"Yes, but to tell the truth, it gives the teacher such a chance to ask me close questions when she has me all to herself."



"Well," said Mrs. B—— to Charley after he had returned home from school, "were you the whole class today?"

"I was the only scholar."

"Was it as hard as you thought it would be?"

"Why, no it wasn't. The teacher said, 'Charley, it is hardly fair for you to answer all the questions, so you may ask me every other one.' So I did, and it was very nice. Sometimes she got to asking me home questions, too, and before I knew I was talking just as easy as could be. I never had such good recitations as these all by myself."

In after years Charley looked back on that rainy day in school, when he represented the whole class, as the turning point in his life, for from it he learned the habit of perseverance under difficulties.—Ex.

To the Panama Pacific Exposition via the Canadian Rockies.

At the present time a great many are planning their annual tour. Considerable numbers visit the popular California Resorts, while many prefer the unsurpassed Resorts, Palatial Hotels and magnificent scenery of the Canadian Rockies. This year why not combine the two by a visit to the Panama Pacific Exposition?

Numerous people in comfortable circumstances, well able to afford this trip have mistaken the idea that a journey of this nature is most expensive. This is not so; thanks to modern railway facilities, an extensive trip, both interesting and educational, can be made with speed and comfort at a comparatively small cost. Why not investigate?

Krupps Have Always Been a Step Behind In Big Gun Making

WHEN Krupps were thrown on their own resources and on their own genius for invention they were exceedingly slow in producing the gun that the German navy vitally needed. For years the firm had spent large sums of money in a campaign of slander against its British and French rivals. This had been done with a view to attracting orders for artillery from the small nations which lacked gun-making plant. Besides the business profit obtained in this way, the large amount of foreign work skilfully directed towards Essen enabled the Krupp plant to be extended so as greatly to increase the speed with which Germany could be supplied with cannon in war time. But when all that German intrigue could do has been done and the ordnance experts at Essen were put on their mettle to meet the challenge of British inventive genius, the result was ignominious. Our first battle-cruiser of the Dreadnought type, with eight 12-inch guns, was completed in 1908. The Germans never had a battle-cruiser with guns of equal calibre till 1914.

In connection with this there is another story, also illustrative of the wonderful efficiency of the German espionage system and the slackness of our under-paid, under-staffed Intelligence Department. As France has produced a designer of light field artillery, with a genius that no Teution can distantly approach, so our country happily contains designers of naval ordnance to throw the learned professors employed by Krupps into hysterical perplexity. What our men have done for years, and are still doing, is to make mountings for big naval guns such as the inventors in no other land can equal. The mounting makes the naval gun. It has, easily and quietly, to cushion the shock of the recoiling piece of ordnance as this flings back after the explosion with a force almost as terrific as that with which it has expelled the shell. The ship itself is composed of a nicely balanced scaffolding of steel, which is already subject to stresses through the weight of its armor-plate. The earthquake shocks of the recoil of eight or ten great naval guns must be so cushioned by the mounting that no strain is placed on the ship's structure.

It was the problem of devising such a mounting for the 12-inch gun which was utterly beyond the talent of every man is Germany. Only after years of labor and experiment did Krupps manage to get proper recoil chambers for an 11-inch gun. Then, at last, either by long study and costly trials or by the bribery of some British ordnance draughtsman, the problem was solved. Possibly the famous German master-spy overcame the difficulty, and at great trouble and expense obtained a working sketch of the British design.

If so, it was just like our Naval Intelligence Department to allow such a thing to happen. For while the happy Germans were hastily designing and building new capital ships to take the new 17-inch Krupp gun, our men, at the Coventry Ordnance Works, were busy making 12 1-2-inch guns, with a far larger range and striking power than the Germans even dreamed of! After this, the German Admiralty lost faith in its wonderful system of espionage. It had become only an instrument on which certain men in Whitehall played alluring tunes that doomed German battleships to destruction before they were even built.

Then when the Germans learned to make a 12 1-2-inch gun they learned to their horror that Britain had perfected a 15-inch weapon. The proof of its efficiency has been seen at the Dardanelles.

Russia's Foreign Legion.

Russia's Caucasian army has points in common with the famous Foreign Legion of France. It is recruited from all nationalities, and, like the Legion, boasts many warriors who have joined to forget the world and to be forgotten, and whose life histories might provide exciting reading could they be induced to tell them. Nevertheless, or perhaps for this very reason, the Caucasian troops are reckoned among the smartest of the Czar's fighting forces.

HARDWARE & FURNITURE : BROADWAY

WHAT IS INDIA?

This is a question which Sir H. Mortimer Durand answers in a most instructive and topical article on our great Eastern dependency in "Blackwood's." He says—

"In the first place, what is India? Seeley, in his 'Expansion of England,' goes so far as to say that there is no India. This is scarcely correct, but it would be little exaggeration to say that there is no such country as India and no such nation as the Indians, except in the sense that Europe is a country and the people of Europe are a nation. The tract of territory which we are accustomed to call India contains every variety of physical features, of climate, and of population.

"It has mountain ranges with peaks nearly twice the height of the Alps, rising from vast fields of perpetual snow. In the Himalyas—Him Alay, the abode of snow—there are literally scores of Switzerlands. India also has burning sandy deserts where rain is almost unknown, and Jungles where more rain sometimes falls in a week than in England in a year, and immense fertile plains tilled by swarming millions of men, where herds of wild elephants still roam in freedom.

"As to climate, an expert authority has said that 'the world itself affords no greater contrast than is to be met with at one and the same time within its limits.' As to population, India contains as many people as all Europe, excluding Russia, and there is at least as much difference between a Pathan from the north-west frontier and a Madrasi from the south as there is between a Norwegian and a Portugese. They stand completely apart, in race and character and religion, and the language of the one is wholly unintelligible to the other. Both are 'Indians' in the eyes of the European, just as the Norwegian and the Portugese are both 'Farangis,' Franks, Europeans, in the eyes of the Indian, but the two terms are equally broad and vague.

"It is true that India is cut off from the rest of the world by marked geographical boundaries. An immense chain or mass of mountains, two thousand miles in length, bounds it on the north; the ocean bounds it on the south; and to the east and west the mountain mass throws out great ranges which reach practically down to the ocean. It is true also that throughout this vast enclosure as large as all Europe, excluding Russia, one religion, known to us as Hinduism or Brahmanism, has established itself as the dominant faith, just as Christianity has established itself in Europe. But, on the western side in particular, the mountain mass is not impassable and for thousands of years fair-skinned races from Central Asia have poured down, wave after wave, into the Indian plains, and have mingled their blood with the dark native populations, whose origin no one knows.

"In the same way the Brahmanical religion, springing from the faith of some of the earliest of these northern races, has taken to itself the countless faiths of the aboriginal population, until it has become a mixture of different and often conflicting beliefs, maintaining an inner philosophy, but almost unlimited in its practical tolerance. It permits the worship of innumerable gods, 'deities who abhor a fly's death and those who delight still in human victims.' Hinduism, moreover, with all its infinite variations, accounts for only two thirds—two hundred millions—of the population. The great Mohammedan religion has broken into India, and numbers over sixty millions of adherents; while the adherents of other religions in India are nearly as numerous as the entire population of England.

"Therefore, though there are geographical barriers which have to some extent isolated India from the rest of the world, and given it to outside eyes a certain measure or appearance of unity, there has been room for the maintenance of many races and languages and creeds. Sir John Strachey tells us that 'the differences between the countries of Europe are undoubtedly smaller than those between the countries of India'; that there is no 'Indian nation'; and that a 'native of Calcutta or Bombay is as much a foreigner in Delhi or Peshawar as an Englishman is a foreigner in Rome or Paris.'

"Nor is this all. Not only is there no Indian nation, but there is no nation in India. The various countries in India are not nations, and never have been nations, in the European sense of the word. There have been, and there are, feudal chiefships, and tracts where one language is spoken; but no such country as France or Italy, inhabited by a compact organized nation of Frenchmen or Italians, has ever been formed in India.

Not least among the marvels of India is the English government of it, the way in which it has been held by a mere handful of white men for the many generations.

"Nothing is more striking than the small number of Englishmen employed in India compared with the large number of Indians. Sir John Strachey pointed out ten or twelve years ago that only about one thousand two hundred Englishmen were employed in the civil government of two hundred and thirty-two millions of people, and in the partial control of sixty-two millions more, the inhabitants of native States, and that by far the greater part of the actual administration was in Indian hands. He showed that between eight and nine hundred posts were ordinarily reserved for the civil service, to which Indians are admissible if they can pass the examination; and that, excluding those posts, there were about three thousand seven hundred persons holding offices in the superior branches of the executive and judicial services, of whom only one hundred were Europeans. Moreover, nearly all posts of minor importance, which are far more numerous, were held by Indians.

"Native officers manage by far the greater part of the business connected with all branches of the revenue and with the multifarious interests in land. Natives dispose of the greater part of the magisterial work. The duties of the Civil Courts throughout India, except the Courts of Appeal, are almost entirely entrusted to native judges. Native judges sit on the bench in each of the High Courts.

"Strachey went on to show that, with the possible exception of England, there was no country in Europe in which judicial and executive officers received salaries equal to those given in the native civil service of India. The state of affairs shown by Strachey is remarkable enough, but the number of Indians employed has gone on increasing since he wrote, and they have now been appointed to the highest posts. Indians sit in the Councils of the Viceroy and the Secretary of State, and an Indian is a member of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

"Whatever our enemies may think, we know that India is loyal to the British Crown. We know it not only because of her attitude now, but because we have proved her loyalty in the past, and because we feel that we have ourselves been loyal to India. As the British rose to dominion with the goodwill and co-operation of Indians, so they maintain their dominion, and desire in the future to maintain it. Their administration is largely in the hands of Indians; their army is mainly composed of Indians; they have not feared to give Indians the education they thought, rightly or wrongly, to be the best, even when it told in a measure against themselves; finally, though they are a handful of foreigners, far less than one in a thousand of the population, they have not feared even to take steps which tend to give India the national unity which she has never before possessed. They believe that the races of India understand, and are proud to belong to a great empire built up largely by Indians themselves—proud also to belong to the yet greater empire of which India forms a part.

"Therefore Englishmen who know and love India have seen with admiration, but nothing akin to surprise, the demeanor of her chiefs and people to-day. It is all that it could be, and it is what it was sure to be."

we sold it like ordinary fence, through agents and "middlemen."

Would a $8500 Salesmanager's salary add one cent to the WORTH of your fence? NO—but it WOULD add several cents a rod to the PRICE!

Would a $2500 Blockman's salary add one day to the LIFE of your fence? NO—but it WOULD add 20% to its selling-price.

When you buy from PAGE, you deal direct with the factory. You pay only one small profit between you and us. And you get the BEST FENCE at the LOWEST COST.

PAGE FENCE WEARS BEST, because it's honestly made throughout. All No. 9 wire—No. 9 locks—last laterals—evenly spaced uprights—heavy galvanizing—and the heaviest weight per roll of any fence.

THE LAST CALL.

One of Battleford's Old Timers Crosses the Great Divide.

J. W. Carroll, a Resident Upwards of Thirty Years, Answers Eternal Summons.

Saturday evening everyone was shocked to hear that Lieut. James W. Carroll, of the 9th Mounted Rifles, had died in the local hospital after an illness of less than twenty-four hours. The information could not be believed at first as only the day previous Mr. Carroll had been going about his duties as usual, and in conversation with a friend stated that he had not felt better for weeks. It seems that while at his duties at North Battleford about 5 p.m., he was seized with sudden pains of an excruciating nature and was hurried to his home where he retired to bed, but his agony increasing assistance was called in and everything that could be was done for his relief but of no avail. Saturday afternoon he was removed to the hospital where preparations for an operation were made by Drs. Millar and Jackson, but upon exploration it was found that there was a perforation caused by a duodenal ulcer, and that peritonitis had already supervened, rendering the case hopeless. The patient was made as comfortable as possible and when he came out from under the anaesthetic was apprized of his condition. Knowing that he had not long to live he met his end bravely bidding his friends farewell, and giving final instructions as to various matters. He remained conscious to the very end which came peacefully shortly before eight in the evening.

Arrangements were made for a military funeral, which took place on Monday afternoon, and was the most imposing ever seen in Battleford. Deceased was a member of both the Masonic and Oddfellows organizations, and the local lodges participated in the obsequies, and each were augmented by a number of brethren from the North Battleford lodges, who as well as the military were brought over by special C.N.R. train. Neither the local band nor that of our northern neighbors was in active organization, but a composite band was arranged and certainly deserve the greatest credit for their assistance. A short service was held at the late residence of the deceased, after which the procession was formed and marched to Gardiner Presbyterian Church, of which he was a member, where the regular service was conducted. The order of the procession was as follows:

Band
Members A. F. & A. M.
Firing Party under Lieut. Storer
Hearse
Horse with boots reversed
Chief Mourners
9th Mounted Rifles under Major Panton
Members R.N.W.M.P. in carriages
Members I.O.O.F.
Veterans and Old-timers on foot
Friends in carriages and autos.

At the church a short service was conducted by Rev. W. A. Cameron, who in the course of his remarks referred feelingly to the departed and his many good qualities. The choir was also present and contributed materially to the occasion. Special mention should be made of the rendition of "Thou Art Passing Hence," by Mrs. Felicia Hemens, and set to music by Sir Arthur Sullivan, sung in a most acceptable manner by Mr. Webster, who, with Rev. J. R. Craig, is conducting special services in the Presbyterian Church. The full choir was in attendance, and in addition to the usual hymns also rendered, "Oh, Rest in the Lord," from Elijah as a voluntary. At the close S. L. White played the Dead March in Saul as the remains were carried from the church and the procession reformed and marched to the cemetery where the last tribute was paid by his comrades firing three volleys in the air and the trumpeter sounded the "Last Post."

The pallbearers were S. S. Simpson, F. P., R. H. Speers, A. M. Speers, J. H. Speers and M. H. Merediths, brothers-in-law, and F. Atkinson, a personal friend.

The late James W. Carroll was born at Mullingar, West Meath, Ireland, on the 25th of November, 1862, and was therefore a few months over 52 years of age at the time of his death. His boyhood was spent in the old country learning the business of railroad telegrapher. He came to London, Ontario, in 1880, and in June of the following year, joined the North West Mounted Police, coming up the Missouri and overland to Fort Walsh at that time the headquarters of the force. The first two years of his enlistment were served at various posts in the south, including Medicine Hat, Macleod and Regina, coming to Battleford in 1883. Altogether he served fifteen years in the force, the period between 1883 and 1896 being spent mainly at Battleford and outposts from the divisional head-quarters, during which he was successively bugler, corporal, sergeant and drill instructor, and at the time of his leaving the force was reputed to be one of the best instructors in the force.

In 1885 he was a member of the little garrison under Inspector Dickens which was besieged by Big Bear at Fort Pitt, and made the now celebrated trip down the Saskatchewan to Battleford in the old scow when the post was evacuated. At Battleford he was one of the force which engaged Poundmaker at Cut Knife Hill on May 2, 1885, and "Patsy," as he was universally known wherever there were mounted police was always proud of his medal and clasp in commemoration of the North-west Rebellion.

After leaving the force he entered the Government telegraph service as operator, spending two years at Moose, whence he was transferred to Saddle Lake, where he was stationed until 1911, when he resigned being at that time also agency clerk for the Indian department and local sub-agent of Dominion lands.

He then came to Battleford where he engaged in the real estate business during the growing time, and in December, 1911, was elected a member of the town council, serving the full term of 1912 and 1913.

When the war broke out he at once offered his services to his country, but his age was against him when the first contingent was sent overseas. He however continued to give of his best to the militia dept., and for some time past was attached to the corps mobilized at North Battleford as drill instructor with the rank of acting lieutenant. Only a few days before his death he received word that his commission had been confined and dated back to December last year, and in addition he was assured that he would be given an opportunity to go to the front with either the 9th or another regiment, information which was the source of deepest gratification to him as he was a natural soldier.

In 1886 he married Sadie, eldest daughter of R. G. Speers, by whom he had two daughters, only one of whom, Mrs. Wyman P. Yoe, of this place, survives him. He also leaves besides his widow and daughter a grandchild, the infant of Mr. and Mrs. Yeo.

He was a member of the Masons, Orange Order, Oddfellows and Foresters and had $2000 insurance in the Oddfellows' Relief Association. He was a member of Gardiner Presbyterian church, and in January last was appointed secretary-treasurer of the board of managers of that congregation.

The display of flowers was large and beautiful and included wreaths from Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Speers, the relatives, H. R. and M. L. M. Skelton and family, Dr. and Mrs. Millar, Ladies' Aid of Gardiner church, Masons, Oddfellows, sword and shield from the officers, N.C.O. and men of "A" squadron, 9th C.M.R., Headquarters staff, machine gun section, Lloydminster, Supt. and Mrs. West, R.N.W.M. Police, Claredon Hotel Co., North Battleford, Mrs. J. G. Oliver, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. T. Brokovski, Messrs. MacLean & Hutchins.

The surviving relatives of the late Mr. Carroll have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement, the shock of his sudden taking off being felt by all.—Battleford Star, Mar. 20th.

MONO EAST PARISH.

Services will be held in the parish of Mono East on Sunday, Mar. 28th, as follows:—St. Paul's 11 a.m.; St. John's, Mono, 3 p.m.; St. John's, Mono Mills, 7 p.m.

Mr. Thos. Herod.

A sad death took place at Caledonia on Friday, March 16th, when Mr. Thos. Herod passed away after a few days illness from that treacherous winter malady, pneumonia. Prior to his last illness Mr. Herod was a healthy, robust man and from all appearances had many years of useful life still before him. He leaves a widow, formerly Miss Sophia Moon, of Mono Mills, and two sons, John Moon, of Mono Mills, and George Moon, of Kelwood, Man., are brothers-in-law. Sincere sympathy is felt for the sorrowing wife and family and also the other relatives. Mr. John Moon, of Mono Mills, attended the funeral last week.

Mrs. Walter Berry.

Mrs. Serena Berry, widow of the late Walter Berry, died at her home in Brampton on Tuesday morning of last week. Deceased, who was 32 years of age, had been in poor health for some time past. She was a daughter of Mr. J. F. Ward, of Woodhill, and moved to Brampton after the death of her husband two or three years ago. She leaves three small children. The funeral took place on Thursday, the remains being taken to Shelburne, where her husband is buried. Deceased was universally liked and respected and there is a great deal of sympathy for the bereaved family and orphaned children.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward, the parents, were in town on Friday on their way home from the funeral. Mr. Ward is the owner of a couple of houses on Zina St.

Death of Robert Shaw.

Robert Shaw, a former resident of Mulmur, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. Chapman, Niagara Falls, N.Y., on Saturday, Mar. 13th, at the age of 76 years. Of late years the deceased has lived in Shelburne during the summer and fall, but usually spent the winter at Niagara Falls, where three of his daughters reside. He is survived by three sons: Robert, of Banda, Samuel in the West and Thos. J., of Toronto, and five daughters, Mrs. H. Chapman, Mrs. Elliott Stewart and Mrs. Jos. Winker, Niagara Falls, N.Y., Mrs. Jacob Silk, Melancthon, and Mrs. Geo. Fraser, Mulmur. The surviving brothers and sisters are Johnston and Samuel Shaw, of Mulmur, William Shaw, of Mono, Mrs. Samuel Moore, of Nottawa, and Mrs. Hooker, of Toronto. The funeral took place to the English Church Cemetery at Whitfield on Tuesday afternoon following his death. Rev. W. F. Carpenter, of Hornings Mills, conducted the services at the house and grave. All the family were present at the funeral except the son, Samuel, who lives in the West.

Major Douglas Dead.

Major J. W. Douglas, barrister at law, for many years a resident of Shelburne, died at the home of Arch McNee, a well known newspaper proprietor at Windsor, Ont., on Thursday, March 11th. Deceased was a native of Perth and was for many years senior officer in the 47th Perth Regiment and was a Fenian Raid veteran. He practised law in Perth for several years before he moved to Rapid City, where he purchased a grist mill and saw mill, but his venture was not a success and he lost over $40,000 in the venture. He afterwards returned to Ontario and settled in Shelburne where he practised his profession until he moved to Ottawa some years ago. For the last five years he resided in Windsor. He is survived by his widow and three sons, Ted, Reuben and James, who are all occupying important positions in banks and financial institutions. In politics the deceased was an ardent Conservative and a member of the Anglican church. He was 75 years of age. His remains were taken to his old home town, Perth, for interment on Friday last. The bereaved widow and sons have the sympathy of a large number of old friends in Shelburne.—Free Press.

A DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

Barnardo Home Boy Killed Farmer's Daughter and Took His Own Life.

A Horrible Affair at R. J. Armstrong's Home in Caledon Last Thursday Morning.

An appalling double tragedy took place at the home of Mr. R. J. Armstrong, a prosperous Caledon farmer, living on lot 22, 1st line, east, between 8 and 9 o'clock last Thursday morning, James Stevens, a 15 year old Barnardo Home boy, who had been living with the family since last Easter, cut the throat of Violet Armstrong, a 14 year old girl and the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong, and then ended his own life in a like manner. The horrible deed was committed with a razor belonging to Mr. Armstrong. No person witnessed the deed and the motive which led to the double killing is shrouded in mystery. So far as can be learned the boy and girl had never quarrelled. The night prior to the tragedy they played cards together and were evidently on the best of terms.

The Armstrong household consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong, their daughter, Violet, an only son, Elmer, a lad of eleven years, and the Stevens boy. Mr. Armstrong has been preparing to build a barn during the coming summer and on Thursday morning left his home quite early to go for a load of lumber. Stevens was left at home to do the morning chores at the barn. After breakfast Mrs. Armstrong got Elmer ready for school and, after he had started away went out to the barn to do the milking, leaving Violet in bed. Before leaving the house, she spoke to her daughter telling her it was time to get up. The girl answered that she would be down right away and was evidently in her usual good spirits. When Mrs. Armstrong went to the barn she met Stevens, who had been chorring about the stables. Evidently he started for the house, which is about one hundred yards from the barn, almost immediately afterwards. Entering the kitchen he first divested himself of his boots, smock, cap and mits and then, arming himself with Mr. Armstrong's razor, which he secured from its accustomed place in the room, started upstairs to the girl's bedroom. What happened there can only be surmised, although the appearance of the room indicates that the boy attacked the defenceless girl and that a violent struggle followed. The girl had evidently used a hand looking glass as a weapon of defence and the blood marks seem to indicate that she managed to get out over the end of the bed after her murderous assailant had slashed her throat. Reaching the door she rushed downstairs, out of the house and got as far as the pump, about twenty yards away, on her way to the stable, where she knew her mother was milking, when she fell in the snow and quickly died to death. Apparently Stevens followed the girl downstairs but did not go out of the house. Everything indicates that he cut his own throat at the foot of the stairs and then staggered upstairs to his own room, where his dead body was found at the side of his bed. Probably it was the realization of the awful deed he had just committed that caused the murderer to end everything by taking his own life.

Mrs. Armstrong, who was only about fifteen minutes doing the milking, did not notice her daughter's body when she was on her way back to the house. The first intimation she had of anything untoward came from the sight of bloodstains on the verandah. Inside the house she was greeted by further blood marks and following the trail upstairs she found Stevens' lifeless body. Rushing to her daughter's room the horrified mother found it empty. Running downstairs again, she followed the bloodstains into the yard, where she was terrified to find the lifeless body of her daughter lying in the snow clad only in her nightgown. Gathering the body in her arms, the mother carried the girl into the kitchen and placed her on a sofa. She then telephoned to some of the neighbors, who came to the house as quickly as possible and rendered whatever assistance was in their power. Mr. Armstrong arrived home a short time after the occurrence. Word was also sent to Dr. Thomas, of Caledon, and Rev. G. W. Tebbs, of Orangeville, the family pastor, both of whom were on the scene at a comparatively early hour. Rev. Mr. Tebbs spent most of the day with the stricken family, comforting them as best he could.

Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong, who are both on the verge of prostration from the effects of the awful occurrence that has thrown their hitherto happy home into the deepest gloom, are at a loss as to the motive for the terrible deed. The boy had always got along well with the whole family. His conduct was exemplary and he was a willing worker. He was a boy somewhat below the average in height, but was sturdily built and strong for his years. According to Inspector Stanners, of the Barnardo Home, who came to Caledon to attend the inquest, he had always borne a good character. Mr. C. H. Black, secretary and acting superintendent of the Barnardo Home in Toronto, states that Stevens was sent out from London in 1912 and that his conduct since coming to Canada had been all that could be desired.

Violet Armstrong, the dead girl, was about the average size of girls of her age and quite prepossessing in appearance. She was a bright girl, attractive in her manner and disposition and was quite popular amongst her schoolmates and companions. She had passed her Entrance last June and was planning to start attending High School in Orangeville next September.

Dr. A. F. Reynar, of Palgrave, Coroner for Peel County, was immediately apprised of the affair, but owing to the wretched condition of the roads was unable to reach Armstrong's place until late Thursday afternoon. After empanelling the jury, which viewed the two bodies and made an inspection of the premises, the Coroner adjourned the inquest for one week. The adjourned inquest will take place in the Town Hall in Caledon village to-day (Thursday), commencing at 11 o'clock. Dr. Thomas, of Caledon, who made the post-mortem examination of the two bodies, will be one of the important witnesses at to-day's sitting.

The members of the Coroner's jury are W. J. Limebeer (foreman), E. E. Wilson, Dan. McKim, Wilmer Hillock, Thos. Delaney, Albert Hillock, Samuel Island, John Kirk, Ambrose Stubbs, Albert Smith and James Lamont.

Stevens' body was brought to J. H. Hulse's undertaking parlors, whence the funeral was held to the Forest Lawn Cemetery on Friday afternoon.

The funeral of the dead girl was held from her late home to the Forest Lawn Cemetery on Saturday. Practically the whole countryside was present at the stricken home where impressive services were conducted by Rev. G. W. Tebbs, assisted by Rev. J. Burkholder, of Caledon. Despite the awful condition of the roads, the funeral cortege was one of the largest that has been witnessed in this section for years. The remains were borne to their last resting place by Messrs. Jos. and William Leader, Vernet Speers, Willis Speers, Wesley Speers and Willie Delaney.

Profound sympathy is felt for the grief-stricken parents and other friends in the cruel bereavement that has overtaken them in such trying manner. Mrs. Armstrong, as many of our readers know, is a daughter of the late Thos. Duke, Prince of Wales Road, Mono. Mr. Armstrong, who is a member of one of Caledon's oldest families, is a cousin of ex-Warden Jas. Armstrong, of this town.

Death of Mrs. St. Croix.

Mrs. Rose St. Croix, a former resident of Orangeville, died at her home in Dundas on Monday, Mar. 15th, after an illness of only two days following a paralytic stroke. Deceased lady was born in Quebec about 70 years ago. She came to Orangeville after her husband's death and resided here for some 22 years. She was well-known and enjoyed the esteem of her numerous friends. She is survived by three sons and one daughter, namely, Messrs. Louis and Fred St. Croix and Mrs. John Dunne, of Hamilton, and Mr. Philip St. Croix, of Orangeville. The funeral took place from the home of her son, Louis, 49 Wood St., west, Hamilton, on March 11th. The remains were taken to St. Mary's Cathedral, where requiem high mass was said by Rev. Father Bonimi. Interment took place in the Holy Sepulchre cemetery, Father Maloney officiating at the grave. The pallbearers were her sons, Louis and Fred, her son-in-law, Mr. John Dunne, Mr. Herman Jones and Messrs. James and Thos. Dwyer.

Address and Presentation

On Monday evening, Mar. 15th, the home of Mr. and Mrs. John McBride sr., Caledon and Erin townline, was the scene of a very pleasant event, when their friends and neighbors assembled to the number of 140 for the purpose of bidding them farewell prior to their removal from the community. Mr. L. H. Willis, to whom was delegated the duties of chairman, called on Mr. Geo. Blair to read the address. Mr. McBride was made the recipient of a beautiful eight day clock, Mrs. McBride of a silver tea set and Miss Jean of a wrist watch. Mr. McBride made a very feelmb reply thanking those present for their expressions of goodwill toward the family. Speeches were made by a number of those present, all expressing the kindliest feelings toward Mr. and Mrs. McBride and Miss Jean and voicing their sincere regret at their approaching departure. Mr. and Mrs. McBride, who were taken completely by surprise, proved themselves a delightful host and hostess. After singing "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" supper was served. The remainder of the evening was spent in games and dancing. Excellent music was supplied by Campbell Bros., of Cheltenham, Messrs. Smith and Caslor officiating as floor managers. Mr. and Mrs. McBride will be very much missed in the neighborhood as well as in the church where they have been faithful members. The address read as follows:—

To Mr. and Mrs. Jno. McBride and Miss Jean.

Dear Friends,—

We, your friends and neighbors, having heard that you are about to remove from our midst, cannot part from you without some expression of regret. During the time that we have known you you have won our respect, and we have learned to appreciate your many sterling qualities. Your presence will be greatly missed from the public and social life of this community. We assure you of our continued respect and pray that the best that Heaven can afford may be your portion in the eventide of life and the pathway to the Heavenly Home may be as the brightening light, which shineth more and more unto the perfect day. We ask you to accept these presents as tokens of our appreciation.

Signed on behalf of the Committee.
F. E. Wrigglesworth.
W. J. Wilson.

Mr. Geo. H. Duke will offer a 200 acre farm, the east halves of lots 18 and 19, con. 3, east, Caledon, for sale by public auction at the Queen's Hotel, Orangeville, on April Fair Day, Thursday, April 8th, at 2 o'clock sharp. See bills for terms, description of property and other particulars. C. Cranston, Auctioneer.

Air Raids Require An Immense Amount Of Careful Planning

"THIRTY-FOUR naval aeroplanes and seaplanes took part," said the Secretary of the Admiralty, when announcing details of the recent air raid over German fortifications in Belgium, and thus an intricate piece of organization was lightly passed over with true British brevity. For such undertakings require an immense amount of detailed planning. The fleet of aeroplanes engaged have to be manoeuvred with the same precision that armies are controlled on land or ships at sea. At the outset the machines, twenty feet apart, are ranged in a long line—"the thin brown line," as it is humorously called in the army—and mechanics, having filled the tanks to the limit of their capacity with petrol, stand at attention ready to swing the propellers. Before climbing into his seat, each pilot interviews the commanding officer of the air squadron and receives his final orders, which differ in nearly every case. For a fixed destination is chosen for each flying officer. One has to make for a fortress on which to drop his explosives, another is instructed to blow up an airship shed, while the destruction of an important bridge is the mission of a third. By this means a maximum amount of damage is accomplished.

The pilot at the end of the line is the first to be ordered aloft, and his companions follow him at intervals of five minutes, until the squadron are flying towards their destination strung out like a flock of ducks. Each aviator steers his course by map and compass placed on a dashboard before him and surrounded by a nest of drawers which contain such articles as a Thermos flask, chocolate cubes wrapped in protective tin-foil, a revolver holder, and a despatch pad with sharpened pencils.

On the map is prominently marked the spot where the aviator is to drop his bombs, and he is not likely to miss his destination, for flyers' maps are ingeniously drawn to prevent pilots from losing their bearings. They are compiled on the principle that an aviator has to pick his way almost entirely by prominent objects that stand out from the landscape below. Isolated buildings, trees, and hills are distinctly marked in colors as near as possible to the hue seen by the aviator. Rivers are colored a bluish silver, woods and trees a dark green, roads a greyish white, and fortifications a deep black. Dangerous landing-places, telegraph wires, rail fences, and similar menaces to the descending aeroplane are promptly indicated on the map in red.

As an attacking air fleet nears its destination the aviators separate, and at a height of 5,000 feet make for their respective marks. When over the structure he has been instructed to destroy the flyer drops the nose of his machine and dives almost vertically until within 500 feet of the ground. With a foot pedal he then releases three or four bombs in rapid succession and shoots skywards to safety. He notes the damage he has done, and, climbing high into the clouds for safety from the enemy's gunfire, he turns his machine in the direction of the air base to which he has had orders to return within a certain limit of time.

Hot Time Promised.

A "Legion of Adventure" is about to be formed in London for service somewhere abroad, but—here is the romance—its destination is a point on which no announcement for the benefit of the enemy is to be made. An appeal is issued for 1,000 picked men "willing to serve together, wherever ordered, as infantry. But be good rifle shots, and of sober, steady habits." Lt.-Col. Driscoll, who raised and led Driscoll's Scouts in the South African War, has issued the appeal from 6, Adam street, Adelphia, London, and says those who join can be sure of having a hot time.

Most Wounded Return to Front.

Statistics recently issued by the French authorities go to show that only 3 1-2 per cent. of soldiers die from wounds. Nearly 60 per cent. are sufficiently cured to be able to return again to the front. The percentage of deaths from wounds, indeed is lower in the present war than it has been in any war, thanks to the wonderful advance in medical science.

Half Million Have Offered.

The complete tabulation of the number of recruits who have enrolled through the house-to-house appeal made throughout the United Kingdom has not yet been made, but it is computed that over 500,000 have handed in their names as willing volunteers to serve in the navy or army if called upon.

A Heroic Colonel.

A Russian colonel, who was seriously wounded in the legs at Skiernevice, ordered his men to place him on a stretcher, from which he led his troops to the attack of an important position. The enemy were dislodged, but the brave colonel died at the moment of triumph.

Losses In Crimean War.

In the Crimean war Britain lost altogether 20,656 men. Actual fighting, however, was only responsible for 12 per cent. of these deaths. Cold and disease were the causes of the other 88 per cent. of deaths.

One-Fifth on Service.

Including General Smuts, Minister of Defence, twenty-four out of 121 members of the South African Union Parliament are on active service.

War Review of the Week

PENDING a decisive advance on the western frontier, which is expected to do more than any other operation toward ending the war, the attack of the allied fleets on the Dardanelles has occupied the chief place of interest during the past week. That the forcing of the intricate channel will be expensive in life and equipment was borne home to the world last week when it was announced that two British and one French battleship of the third-class, were blown up by floating mines set adrift by the Turks and Germans just outside the narrows. Slight loss of life was sustained by the British ships, whose crews were saved, but owing to an explosion, which happened on the French ship, all but sixty-four of her complement lie thirty-six fathoms deep in the strait. The sinking of these men of war occurred after they had been bombarding the Turkish forts at close range, and were returning to their base. Other ships were damaged more or less by shells from the forts and the shore. The report of the Admiralty says that the damage inflicted on the Turkish forts was not yet known, but unofficial reports say that Forts Chanak and Kilid Bahr were rent by tremendous explosions, and had broken out into flames in several places by nightfall. The accident to the three warships did not bring about the discontinuance of operations against the forts. The straits holds in the narrows are, apparently, on the verge of falling. The British cruiser Amethyst sustained a considerable amount of casualties as a result of cutting the telegraph cable connecting Kilid Bahr with Chanak.

These ship casualties were anticipated by the Admiralty some time before, and H. M. S. Queen and irreplacable have been sent to reinforce the fleet. The ships destroyed were the Irresistible and Ocean, of the British navy, and the Bouvet of the French navy. Both are ships of third-rate importance, but of value for these operations.

Discussing the operations in Sunday's bulletin, the Admiralty made the significant remark that "the power of the fleet to dominate the forts by superiority of fire seems to be established. Various other dangers and difficulties will have to be encountered, but nothing has happened which justifies the belief that the cost of the undertaking will exceed what has always been expected and provided for."

The siege of Przemysl nears an end. The garrison, despairing of relief, and learning that the Austro-German army, which for two months has been seeking to open a way to the beleaguered city, has failed to piece the Russian lines, made an attempt to break out. The besiegers, who have recently brought up heavy guns against Przemysl and driven the Hungarian troops, who form the garrison, back to their inner defences, were too strong for the Magyars, and took 4,000 prisoners, besides killing and wounding many others. The fall of Przemysl will release 60,000 troops for service elsewhere.

Definite repulse of the Germans from North Poland, throwing back of the Austrians in the Carpathians, where their centre was pierced, necessitating a new alignment, and the apparent beginning of a new Russian invasion of East Prussia, from the extreme northeastern point sum up the achievements of the Russian armies in the past week. It can surely be said that the German and Austrian inroads into Poland have gained them no important strategical results so far.

Since the fall of Neuve Chapelle the British have been steadily pressing forward and consolidating the line. Monday's list of casualties, in which so many Canadians figured, including Col. Farquhar, commander of the Patricias, shows how expensive is life in the modern form of trench warfare.

The French troops have gained considerable advantages in the Champagne country where heavy losses were inflicted on the Germans. The French now hold north of Perthes a ridge which commands the country above to a considerable distance.

In the Vosges the French have driven the Germans out of Hartmanns-Weilerkopft, near the Swiss frontier, and have thus a point from which they can advance at an angle and sweep the Germans out of Alsace.

For the general advance Joffre has 3,500,000 fighting men, and about the same number more, who were untrained at the beginning of the war. To these must be added the men who are being supplied by Britain.

From India first comes word of attempts of German agitators and agents to incite revolts of tribesmen in Persia and to incite the murdering of British officers by the men of native Indian regiments, and next, of seditious actions by Hindus in Bengal and the Punjab, engineered from the Pacific coast of North America. The Government has taken effective measures to deal with both situations.

Gen. Botha reports a victory at Swakopmund, in German Southwest Africa, where 200 prisoners were taken.

Progress Not So Slow.

The slow rate at which the Germans are being dislodged from French territory is apt to test somewhat the patience of the British public; but the figures given in La Depeche, of Toulouse, show that the work is being done steadily, and by no means so slowly as many think. The total in square miles area occupied in September last was 16,917; in December it was 5,133, less than one-half.

Got Haul of Honey.

McKenna Bros. and W. A. Donaldson felled a large bee tree while cutting wood on the former's farm, lot 10, 7th line, east, Mono, one day recently. They secured 125 lbs. of excellent honey from the tree—a good sized pine—which was hollow for quite a distance from the ground. The hole, through which the bees entered and departed from their hive, was away up the trunk near the lowest branches of the tree.

An Oldt me Ladies Aid

On Wednesday evening, March 17th, the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Church gave an entertaining presentation of a Ladies' Aid Society Meeting at Mohawk Crossroads. The play, "If such it may be called, represents a Ladies' Aid Society Meeting of fifty years ago. The costumes and dialogues were decidedly quaint and furnished the audience with no end of amusement. The parts were skilfully taken and the ladies were heartily complimented on the excellent manner in which they staged and gave the reproduction. A pleasing musical programme added charm and variety to the entertainment. The numbers were a selection by Orangeville Male Quartette, instrumental duets by the Misses Hogg and Misses Gladys Ewing and Sprae Lathwell, solos by Miss Shaw and Thos. Huston, a duet by Percy Harding and Mrs. Bowles, and recitations by Misses Florence Annis and Verlie Smith. A good-sized audience appreciated and enjoyed the programme.

The performance was repeated before a good house on Tuesday night. Tuesday night's proceeds will be devoted to the Belgian Relief Fund.

Dufferins Reorganize.

The Dufferin Lacrosse Club held its annual meeting in the Public Library building on Monday night. Most of the old heads were conspicuous by their absence, but there was a splendid turnout of the younger players and followers of the game. Mr. Earl Stevenson, last years Treasurer, presided during the meeting. The Treasurer's report was very satisfactory, showing a balance of $33 on hand and no outstanding liabilities. The officers were elected as follows :—

Hon.-Presidents—Judge Fisher, Mr. R. H. Neilson and C. R. McKeown, M.P.P.

President—Mayor Campbell.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mr. C. V. Jeffers.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. A. A. Smith.
3rd Vice-Pres.—Mr. J. A. Whaley.
Manager—Mr. Jas. Armstrong.
Secretary—James Dawson.
Treasurer—Earl Stevenson.
Executive—H. Wilcox. A. Fisher, D. Densmore, S. Cranston, R. Scott, C. Morrison.

Delegates to O.A.L.A. Convention —Mayor Campbell and Mr. Jas. Armstrong.

Mr. Bert Booth was nominated as the Club's candidate for the O.A.L.A. Council. Booth is widely known as a lacrosse player and enthusiast and should make a strong candidate.

The Club will enter teams in the intermediate and junior O.A.L.A. series, but will probably concentrate its efforts upon the intermediate team. Last year's team was the strongest that has worn the green and white for many seasons and as most of the players will be again available the Executive does not expect to have any difficulty in placing a strong twelve in the field.

CALEDON.

Owing to the wretched state of the roads the entertainment given in the Town Hall on Wednesday, Mar. 17th, under the auspices of the Public Library did not draw nearly as large an audience as it would otherwise. While rather slim in numbers, the audience was decidedly appreciative and even enthusiastic. The chief entertainers, Mr. Spencer and Miss Reesor, did exceptionally well and made an extremely favorable impression. Mr. Russell Wallace's songs were very fine and the gifted young singer was given a deservedly hearty reception. Miss Cardwell Stubbs' violin selections were also well rendered and were very much appreciated. The Library Board deserves much credit for its enterprise in putting on such a high-class entertainment and it is to be hoped that its next venture along this line will be rewarded with a more generous patronage.

MILLINERY OPENINGS

Orangeville Establishments Make Their Usual Elaborate Displays

A Short Review of the Dominant Spring Styles and Effects

Springlike indeed were the hats that were shown by Orangeville milliners at the annual spring openings last week to entice their feminine visitors to buy the "last word" in stylish headwear. The weather was propitious on Wednesday afternoon, the first day of the openings, so that it was perhaps only natural that the ladies should turn out in large numbers and show their appreciation of the beautiful displays by thronging the different showrooms to overflowing.

Of the new spring hats it can truthfully be said that they are so lovely that one would like to own a hat for every frock. As a rule they are made of the finest Leghorn, Milan or Neapolitan straw and the bouquets, or garlands, of flowers rival nature's bloom in form and line. Ribbon velvet or grosgrain ribbon is trimmed off the brim and a flower is often used to loop the streamer up under the ear. Thus, even in this advanced age, we have a revival of all the fashionable coquettish effects of the hoop-skirt days.

It may be said that there is a marked difference between the hat designed for street wear and the model for nice, dressy occasions. There seems to be no "between" hat. The former is severely plain and spare of ornamentation, while the latter has all the frills and furbelows that we have been wont to associate with the early Victorian period. With sailors of rough chip or whole straw in all the lovely tones of blues, red, greens and tans and in black and white is worn black or sand-colored veils, either having a plain mesh with a border or made in all-over figured designs. Barnyard straws and tagel braids and all manner of soft satin strains are shown mostly fawn. For wee girlies leghorn and Java straw are frequently combined with silk. Many of the hats shown for misses' wear are of the large sailor variety, either oval or round in shape. A noticeable feature is the transparent brim of tulle with a puff crown and trimmed merely with a wreath of the tiniest flowers and a bow of velvet ribbon and long streamers. As is to be expected in this time of war the military effect is not lacking. Little torpedo and helmet shapes trimmed with military pom-poms and buckles are obtainable for both big and little people. Ribbon, of course, chiefly narrow, appears in almost every model and in such delightful colors as Belgian blue, the new rose and cherry red. Some very charming effects are shown with these vivid hues on sand color, white and navy straws.

The styles this season offer quite a wide choice and the lady patrons of the millinery houses will have every opportunity to gratify their tastes in reasonably priced hats. Children's hats are, if possible, more dainty than ever, being shown in the softest shades and effects, with the prettiest of ribbons and tiny flowers that would gladden the heart of any small child.

An account of the distinctive features and some of the models displayed by each of the local establishments would doubtless be of interest to our lady readers, but unfortunately space will not permit of this in this issue. All that we can say is that the show rooms have never looked prettier and that our milliners have made elaborate preparations to serve the needs of the ladies of this district. At Hill & Co's., Miss Robinson, an Orangeville girl who has spent several seasons in Eastern Ontario, is the chief milliner this spring. Miss Hoideman, of Stratford, is her first assistant. Miss Buchanan, who is well and favorably known to the ladies of Orangeville and vicinity, is again in charge of Marshall Green & Co's. establishment. Miss Hinch, of Tweed, is her chief assistant. Miss Beatrice Reid, formerly head milliner with W. E. Rogers, has opened attractive millinery rooms in the premises just east of the Adamson Hardware Co's. store, where she is making an inviting display of all the newest spring modes. Miss Lowrie Reid is her principal assistant. Her many friends and customers will be glad to learn that Miss Brooks is back at T. S. Parkinson's as head milliner and has Miss C. Hayward, her chief assistant last season, with her again.

William Henderson Dead.

Mr. William Henderson, father of Councillor Thos. Henderson and Mrs. Jas. A. Patterson of this town, died at his home, 746 Lansdowne Ave., Toronto, on Monday evening at an advanced age. Deceased lived at Mono Mills until his removal to Toronto a few years ago. The burial took place at the Union Cemetery, Caledon East, yesterday afternoon.

For King and Country.

Mr. J. B. Aiken, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Aiken, who has volunteered for service in the third Canadian contingent, left for Toronto on Monday morning to commence active military training. Aiken, who has been attending High School here, was given a rousing send-off. The male students of the institution marched to the station in a body headed by the H. S. Cadets bugle band in full uniform. A number of citizens also assembled at the depot and joined heartily in the send-off. Aiken is a fine type of young Canadian manhood and will make a first-class soldier. We understand that he will be attached to the machine gun detachment. His many friends unite in sincerely hoping that he may return safely.

MEMORY.

Aptly Defined as the Picture Gallery of the Soul.

"Tipperary" Alright, but Children Should be Taught to Sing Psalms and Hymns, says Rev. W. M. Morris.

On Sunday night, Rev. W. M. Morris, pastor of St. Andrew's Church, preached the second of a series of special Sunday evening sermons on "The Higher Powers of the Soul." The particular Power under discussion was "Memory" and upon this theme Mr. Morris delivered a thoughtful as well as a very suggestive discourse.

We are so familiar with our power of memory, said the preacher, that we are often unmindful of our great debt to this wonderful endowment. Yet when we consider we realize how absolutely impossible it would be for us to have any real knowledge of ourselves were it not that memory serves us by keeping a record of our past experiences. Deprived of the power of memory we would be intellectual pigmies. We are so constituted that each experience as it goes leaves its sediment in the memory, which is assimilated by what is already there and forms an image that may be recalled at will for further uses. Character is formed, not so much by the things a man sees, feels or hears, as by what he remembers. Some one has said, "Tell me the things a man remembers and I will tell you what manner of man he is."

The most popular definition of memory is that it is the reservoir of past impressions. We have the poet's description of Memory in Alice Carey's "Pictures of Memory," where she says :—

"Among the beautiful pictures
That hang on Memory's wall,
Is one of a dim old forest,
That seemeth the best of all."

This, the poetess goes on to say, is not because of the trees, vines or flowers, but because of the memory of her brother who is buried in the lap of the old forest. She in this way defines memory as the picture-gallery of the soul.

One man says that he has a bad memory because his power of recollection is at fault. Another man says he has a good memory, because at his beck and call the things he wants to recall come leaping back to consciousness. In that sense no doubt some memories are bad and some are good, but in another sense the probability is that memory is perfect and that every thought and feeling is registered on the sensitive film of the mind. The fact that I cannot recall it now is no proof that a thought or fact is not recorded in my memory. It may come to me to-morrow, at some crisis in life or in old age. Some trivial incident may set in motion a train of associations, by which something, that had been forgotten years ago, may be brought to mind again fresh and vivid.

The possession of such a power involves a tremendous responsibility. How shall we treat this faculty? What kind of pictures shall we hang on memory's wall? All the thoughts which we cherish and in which we delight are making their impression on memory. The sins we sin to-day are not over and done with when they are committed. They do their part in moulding the soul to evil and will return to-morrow as an unhallowed memory urging us to further iniquity. The friends of a University student were alarmed at the deterioration of his character and requested a Christian friend to cultivate his acquaintance and help them to reform him. When he had access to the young man's room he was struck with the lewd pictures on the walls and the low companions who were his associates. When the student became conscious of his moral degeneracy and was ready for suggestions that would help him to a better life the friend persuaded him to replace the pictures with fine engravings, saying that "ballet girls and gambling boys will not remain long where there are good pictures on the walls."

"I am told," continued Mr. Morris, "that the great phrase of Dr. Chalmers, 'the explusive power of a new affection' was suggested to him by an incident which happened during his ministry at Kilmany. A man who was taking him out to make a pastoral visit one day suddenly gave the pony he was driving a savage cut with the whip, seemingly for no purpose. When Chalmers remonstrated with him he replied, 'You see yonder white gate post. The pony has a habit of shying at it and so, whenever he gets near it, I always give him a cut with the whip, just that he may have something else to think about.' We may not admire the man's horsemanship, but we can see the soundness of his philosophy, and applying it to our theme to-night we may learn the lesson that we may keep loud pictures out of the memory by furnishing it with good ones."

All have been struck with the fact that old people have a more retentive memory for things of childhood than for the experiences of more recent years. It is a testimony to their early training when they are able to recall things that are worth while. We have observed how the psalms, paraphrases and hymns memorized in childhood have all come back to them in old age. When the men and women have played their part in life and the little children, for whose religious training they are responsible, shall have become the aged, what shall their memories recall to the younger folk? Shall it be a psalm, the words of a noble hymn, or merely the strains of "Tipperary"? Nobody has any objection to the children singing "Tipperary," but all Tipperaries and no hymns do not make the best pictures for Memory's wall.

To remember means "to mark," "emphasize" and "especially note." The text chosen for this discourse urges us to select the very best things that memory contains and emphasize them into prominence. A nation selects its heroes and erects monuments bearing their names to assist the memory of succeeding generations. So may each individual give value to his memory by choosing the most helpful things it contains and putting forth an effort to cherish them. We are always meeting a variety of persons and circumstances and we are influenced by a variety of thoughts and feelings. We have make mistakes, encountered difficulties and done many good deeds. Memory has kept these hanging on her walls. Shall we refuse to consider what memory retains and teaches? Shall we violate our obligation to this God-given power? Or shall we find in this great picture gallery of the soul warnings, hints and counsels for the guidance and the bettering of our lives?

Next Sunday night Rev. Mr. Morris will give the third sermon of the series, taking Reason as his subject

Constipation, Indigestion and Horrible Backaches

Searched for a Cure for Years—Advised to Try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Was Cured.

Where there is poison there is pain. This is a provision of Nature to warn you against conditions that are likely to prove serious.

Constipation of the bowels is undoubtedly the greatest source of disease and suffering. By using one of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills at bed-time as often as is necessary to keep the bowels regular you can cure constipation and the consequent indigestion, and remove the cause of backache, rheumatism and other painful diseases.

PROF. SMITH.

"Daily movement of the bowels" is the greatest law of health. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you to form this habit, add to your years, and bring comfort in old age.

Professor A. T. Smith, 1 Mt. Charles street, Montreal, and formerly of Boston, Mass., writes:—"I suffered for many years from bad digestion, constipation and horrible backaches. I have been treated by many doctors, without any results. One day a friend in Boston advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. After using two boxes I noticed great improvement, and after the fourth box I was completely cured. My digestion is good. I never feel any pain in the back. My head is clear, and I feel like a young man. I think Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are one of the best medicines on earth."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

JOE HOWE'S LAST OPPONENT.

Hon. Monson H. Goudge is called "Nestor of Liberal Party" in Nova Scotia.

By L. H. Martell, B.A., in Maclean's Magazine.

There is a man in Nova Scotia, now in the evening of his days, who is called down there the "Nestor of the Liberal Party." His name is Monson H. Goudge—familiarly known to the older people of the province as "Monty." He is now president of the Legislative Council of Nova Scotia.

It is a far cry back from 1915 to 1869, the stirring days of the stern fight that many Nova Scotians made to have the British North America Act repealed. There was much bitterness over Nova Scotia's joining in the federation. The Liberals opposed it tooth and nail, and foremost among them was Joe Howe. His chief lieutenant in the county of Hants in Nova Scotia was Hon. "Monty" Goudge, who, with such men as Hon. R. M. McHeffey, Captains Tom and Fred Curry, Edward O'Brien, Bennett Smith, William Laurence, David Scott and Arthur McNutt Cochrane, waged the battle of the Anti-confederates.

But Joe Howe, most outspoken of leaders, most valiant of rebels against the idea of Confederation, suddenly forsook the cause of the Anti-confederates, accepting a promise from Sir John A. Macdonald of better terms for Nova Scotia.

Mr. Edward O'Brien followed Howe, but Messrs. McHeffey, Goudge, Smith, Lawrence, Scott, Cochrane, and Captains Tom and Fred Curry refused to support him in a step which they considered to be gross treachery to the cause of the Anti-confederates and inimical to the best interests of the province of Nova Scotia. These men had received food for their Anti-confererate thoughts and arguments from Howe's speeches, and though previously they had idolized Howe, they could not follow him. By so doing they would be setting the seal of approval on the destruction of Nova Scotia without the consent of the electors and also approving what they considered to be deception and treachery.

It has been urged by many that these men, as well as the other Anti-confederates, were wrong, both as regards the matter of Confederation and their treatment of Howe. But they have only heard one side of the question, and their opinions are as a consequence formed from 'ex parte' evidence. From what I can gather from conversations with Anti-confederates in the county of Hants, and from a perusal of the records, I fail to find anything to justify a verdict of guilty against the Anti-confederates for their treatment of Howe.

However, let us hear the story from a man who speaks "that he knows." This is what Hon. Monson Goudge, Joe Howe's one-time lieutenant and his last opponent, says: "We were with Howe heart and soul in his every fight up till 1869, for we idolized him and had implicit faith in his sincerity. Many of his actions between 1867-1869 would have caused some to doubt his sincerity of purpose, but we did not, for we were his idolators. For instance, I was in London on personal business in 1868, when Howe, Annand, Troop and Smith were there as a delegation from the Assembly of Nova Scotia to demand the repeal of the British North America Act so far as it related to Nova Scotia. Dr. Tupper was also there as a representative of the Government of Canada to oppose the action of the Nova Scotia Repealers. Many of my evenings were spent with the Nova Scotia delegates, and on one occasion while we were assembled together, a messenger came to say that a gentleman wished to see Mr. Howe. On returning to the room one of the delegates asked Howe who his caller was. Howe replied, 'Tupper has been to see me!'

"I said, 'Howe, what have you to do with Tupper?'

"He replied, 'I wanted to see his hand. Do not mistrust me, gentlemen, I am acting for our best interests as I see things.'

"Subsequently Howe and Tupper went to visit the Duke of Buckingham and, when Howe returned, I was present at the hotel where the Nova Scotia delegates were staying. William Garvie, a young Nova Scotian, at that time studying law in London, who afterwards became Provincial Secretary of his native province, was also present. Howe was very reticent. Garvie noticed this, and said to the delegates, 'Gentlemen, Howe is a changed man; look out for him.'

"When Howe came back to Nova Scotia he was still received and regarded as the hope of the Repeal party. In spite of what we had seen and heard in London, the delegates could not bring themselves to mistrust him and as a result public meetings and receptions were held, in which Howe was lauded for his championship of the cause of the Repealers, and an uncompromising determination to carry on the struggle for repeal was everywhere expressed. But events were developing. Howe would not appear in the House of Assembly with the other delegates to receive the thanks of the Assembly for his work as a member of the delegation to London to secure repeal. He seemed to be in touch with Tupper. He did not consult his colleagues and friends, but treated them, including the members of the delegation who had been in London with him, as nonentities, and assumed the attitude of master of the situation. He continued having conferences with representatives of the Government at Ottawa, but during all this time he requested the Anti-confederates of Nova Scotia to have faith in him. Even when he was about taking a position in Sir John A. Macdonald's cabinet as president of the council he telegraphed me, and other friends in the county of Hants saying: 'Do not be alarmed; I shall do nothing that will bring discredit upon my friends.'

"We had hardly received this telegram when we got another sayin- 'I have accepted the office of President of the Privy Council and will see you later.' At the time of receiving this last telegram, I was in my office at Windsor, and with me were the Hon. R. M. McHeffey, Edward O'Brien, and Captains Tom and Fred Curry. The telegram almost left us speechless but after a time Captain Tom Curry exclaimed: 'My God! Would Howe do such a thing as that, and be guilty of treachery toward us?' Shortly after this he came down to the county of Hants and called his friends together to give his reasons for his change of faith. After he had made his explanation the Rev. John Murdoch, at that time Presbyterian minister at Windsor, said to him: 'Howe what business had you as a good general to lead your army up to a stone wall and leave them there unless you were prepared to scale the wall or to lead them in an honorable retreat from it?'

'Howe could make no reply.

"Howe was sworn in as President of the Privy Council on January 30, 1869, and decided to contest the county of Hants, for which he was then sitting as member. A writ for the election was issued and I was selected by the Liberals to oppose him. The campaign was one of the most hard fought and bitter in the history of single elections in Nova Scotia, for it was recognized that the struggle was one of life or death to the cause of repeal for Nova Scotia. I was supported at the hustings by the Hon. A. G. Jones, Mr. Otto Weeks, and other Anti-confederates. Howe's friends were not inactive. During the campaign he became sick and the writ was cancelled. While Howe was ill the Anti-confederates ceased from campaigning, but as soon as he was feeling himself again, a new writ was issued naming a later date for the election, and the fight once more began. On nomination day Howe's prospects for election were not very bright, and such was freely admitted by his supporters. Word was then received from Ottawa to the effect that Howe must be elected at all costs. Confederates poured into the county from all directions. Money was sent from Ottawa to bribe the electors, and in many cases sums ranging from one hundred to four hundred dollars were paid for a single vote. I have been told that it cost the Government at Ottawa sixty thousand dollars to elect Howe. The campaign was the beginning of electoral corruption in the province of Nova Scotia."

In 1873, in the bye-election rendered necessary by Howe having accepted the position of Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, Mr. Goudge was elected to represent his native county of Hants in the Parliament of Canada, defeating Captain George Armstrong, a wealthy shipowner of Kempt in Hants county, by a good majority.

In 1874 he was again elected, this time defeating Henry Allison, of Newport. It was in the election of 1874 that Sir Wilfrid Laurier first entered Parliament. During this Parliament the Canada Temperance Act, better known as "The Scott Act," was enacted, and Mr. Goudge, who took part in its drafting says that "It was forced upon the MacKenzie Government by some of its supporters, like myself, led by George Ross, who told the Government that if they did not do something for temperance he would introduce a private bill looking towards the enactment of stringent temperance legislation." The result was the enactment of "The Scott Act." Mr. Goudge, while a member of Parliament, also took part in the debate concerning riparian rights, and was one of those who secured for the provinces of Canada, and particularly for Nova Scotia, its just due in the premises. The fourth and last election of Mr. Goudge was run in 1878, when after four years of power, the MacKenzie administration appealed to the people, and on this occasion, like a great many others of MacKenzie's supporters, he was defeated by a small majority, his opponent being the same Henry Allison whom he had defeated in 1874.

In 1884 Mr. Goudge was appointed to the Legislative Council of Nova Scotia to succeed the Hon. Arthur Cochrane. Immediately on taking his seat he was appointed Chairman of Public Accounts, and a short time after, Chairman of Bills. In 1903 he was appointed President of the Council in succession to the late Sir Robert Boak, the duties of which position he discharges with much merit, to the great admiration of his many friends. The utility of the Legislative Council finds in Mr. Goudge one of its greatest defenders.

In his younger days Mr. Goudge, with many other Nova Scotians, found in the shipping business the sort of life he wanted. He stayed in it and made a success of it until about twelve years ago when he retired from commercial life.

Hon. Mr. Goudge is a sincere Christian gentleman. He is a member and elder of the Presbyterian congregation in the town of Windsor. He is a frequent attendant of the prayer meetings of his church, and in religion, as in public matters, he wishes to have thorough understanding of everything that is transpiring. It is related of him that on one occasion at prayer meeting a friend of his who possesses a rather low voice, was not praying in a very audible manner, and Mr. Goudge was heard to exclaim in meeting: "What's that James? Speak louder James, speak louder, for you must pray with understanding as well as with spirit if you wish me to concur."

Mr. Gouge is now in the evening of his days, but his interest in philanthropic work and political matters is not diminished. He is prominent in the counsels of his church, and by the Liberals of Nova Scotia is referred to as "The daddy of us all."

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Doucette Tells of her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.

Belleville, Nova Scotia, Can.—"Three years ago I was suffering badly with what the doctors called Change of Life. I was so bad that I had to stay in bed. Some friends told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me from the first. It is the only medicine I took that did help me and I recommend it. You don't know how thankful and grateful I am. I give you permission to publish what your good medicine has done for me."—Mrs. Simon Doucette, Belleville, Yarmouth Co., Nova Scotia, Canada.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

TRUE PEACE.

In the welter and chaos of war whose ghastly and exaggerated records are spread before us each day, the only way to possess the peace which is Christ's gift is to hold constantly in our vision the abiding things. The soul's complete dependence on God is its independence of this world, even when it threatens most. When this terrible tempest sweeping over the nations shall have rolled away, it will have left destruction and wreckage in its path. But it will have cleared the air that had grown murky with selfishness, discontent, distrust, evil ambitions. It will have revealed to the survivors of the storm hitherto unthought of values of things eternal. It will have given a new meaning to the Christmas bells ringing their good tidings of great joy, peace on earth.—Ex.

IDLENESS.

Idleness can go hand in hand with hard work. Hard work may not keep us free from the failure of idleness. For some of us who know what hard work is unfortunately sandwich in longer or shorter periods of idleness between our working spells that sadly mar the product as a whole. It has been said "That man is idle who does less than he can." Not what we accomplish, but what we fail to do that we might have done, is the test of our industry or idleness. We must, of course, take times of recreation and relaxation, rest and sleep; that is not the idleness that handicaps a life. But are we habitually doing less than we can? If so, we are idlers; and God can free us from this failure.

Separate School Teacher Speaks

Tells of the Good Dodd's Kidney Pills Have Done.

She Had No Faith in Them, But the Results and Health Obtained Convinced Her.

Grates Cove, Trinity Bay, Nfld.—Mar. 22nd (Special).—Among the thousands in Newfoundland who pin their faith to Dodd's Kidney Pills is Miss Mary Bridget Whelan, teacher in the Roman Catholic School here.

"I am exceedingly grateful to Dodd's Kidney Pills," Miss Whelan states in an interview. "I was very much run down in health. Close confinement to my work brought on my trouble.

"Reading of the many cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills I began to use them and I must confess with very little faith.

"Before I had taken one box I was not only cured but my strength was growing rapidly, and I felt a great improvement in every way."

Miss Whelan gives the real reason of the popularity of Dodd's Kidney Pills. They do not cure the ailment aimed at at the expense of some other part of the body. They build up health all over the body. They do this by curing the Kidneys. Cured Kidneys mean pure blood.

Bankruptcy In the Court of Love

A Story For New Year's Day.

By MILLARD MALTBIE

"Bella," said Mr. Dudley to his daughter on the 31st of December, handing her a birthday present and giving her a kiss, "don't you think that a girl of nineteen is old enough to settle down and take some thought for the future?"

"I certainly do, papa."

"Today you begin a new year in your life, and tomorrow you begin a new year of the calendar. Suppose you do some thinking as to your actions during the past few years, make up your mind as to what is necessary in your case and form such resolutions as may seem essential to your future happiness."

"Tell me what you think necessary."

"The main thing I have in mind is this: The most important event in a woman's life—so I consider it—is her marriage—that is, if she is to be a wife. I have noticed in you an unfortunate propensity to regard those things which are preliminaries—in this country, where people usually marry for love—to the union of a man and woman, with the consequent rearing of a family, very much as you would consider a game of tennis.

"This, my daughter, is all wrong. Love is nearer akin to divinity than any other part of our nature. It is serious—very serious. I, your mother, your brothers and sisters, we who form a group so closely cemented, are held together by this one element in the composition of life—love."

"Oh, papa, how beautifully you talk!"

A shadow passed over the father's face, realizing from this remark that he had not produced the impression he desired. He was turning away disappointed when his daughter caught his hand.

"Really, papa, explain what you mean, and I will do what you wish me to do."

"Well, then, to come down to plain language, stop flirting."

"Oh, that's what you are driving at!"

"Yes. Tomorrow morning when you wake up refreshed after a good sleep think over your treatment of worthy and worthless young men, which is based merely on your fancy, and make a resolution that if you have any encouragement to bestow upon any one of them it will be given to some one who should you marry him—and you are now at a marriageable age—will make you a worthy husband, one you can be proud of before the world."

Bella sat musing.

"A penny for your thoughts," said her father.

"I was thinking that tomorrow morning will be a better time to make such resolutions than now."

"Why so?"

"Well, tonight I go to the Seymours to see the old year out and the new year in."

"What has that to do with resolutions?"

"Why, Jimmy Halliday will be there, and yesterday, just because I accepted a rose from Tom Erskine, he passed me on the street, pretending he didn't see me."

"Well?"

"Why, papa, you don't think I'm going to stand that, do you?"

"Do you care especially for Halliday?"

"Care for him! Of course not."

"Then why should you trouble yourself about him?"

"Oh, papa, how stupid you are! You don't understand such things at all. I will give Jimmy tonight as good as he has given me. Tomorrow morning I will make your resolutions"—

"My resolutions!"

"I mean that I will reform as you desire."

Her father, who adored her, gave her another kiss and left her, feeling that his words had been without effect. Not so Bella. She had really been impressed, but not for such general reasons as had been mentioned by her father.

Far down in the bottom of her heart was a soft spot into which a certain quiet, reserved young man, Edward Corwin by name, had settled himself without asking her permission. She had treated him in accordance with her usual methods, with the result that he had locked himself up—to speak figuratively—and all her efforts to get at him had signally failed.

Miss Dudley passed the evening of the 31st of December at Seymours', danced the cotillion with Tom Erskine, failed to favor Jimmy Halliday, smiled on Elliott Tracks and sat out a figure with Fred Swords, when she made up a spat with him, throwing him into ecstasies. Then, when all were assembled about a round table feasting the new year in, she exchanged bonbons with Bob Sparkles, reviving a hope that had nearly died out. As for Edward Corwin, he was not present.

On New Year's morning Bella awoke and, looking at a tiny clock on a bracket, saw that it was 11 o'clock. Then she remembered her New Year's resolutions, and a troubled expression passed over her young face. New Year's morning was not so good a time for reform as she had supposed. A flower lay on a table that she had accepted graciously from Erskine, and she had agreed to go out with him for a ride at 3 in the afternoon. Halliday had been brought to his senses—so she considered it—and had received permission to call at 4 for the purpose of making a humble apology. Sparkles was due in the evening to say something very particular, but since Swords was also expected she did not see how he would have an opportunity.

Bella was very much ashamed of herself. It was easy for her to make resolutions, but how was she to keep them? Keeping resolutions is largely dependent upon freedom from temptation. But she had provided temptations that would beset her all the afternoon and evening of New Year's day. To make matters worse, she remembered several other engagements she had made with young men the day before the evening spent with the Seymours.

The word bankruptcy is usually considered to pertain to financial matters. Nevertheless there are a great many kinds of bankruptcy. There is social bankruptcy, where one is swamped with invitations; there is bankruptcy in one having assumed more duties than he can attend to. Miss Dudley's bankruptcy was that she had permitted too many young men to believe that there was a possibility for each of winning her. It occurred to her that the first resolution she should make was to apply for a discharge in the court of love. After such discharge she might make her resolutions not to become further involved.

Suddenly an idea occurred to her. She would simply "fail." She had heard of merchants failing, which she understood to mean that they simply lay down and let the throng of creditors pour over them. She would cut all her engagements—every one of them.

But how escape them? Flight occurred to her—ignominious flight. But flight alone was repugnant to her nature. Then she considered keeping her appointment with one of her suitors. No; that wouldn't do at all. Next came an idea of making a brand new engagement. She lay for some time turning this last proposition over in her mind, then made one fundamental resolution upon which a superstructure of good intent should be based.

It was 12 o'clock noon on New Year's day. Edward Corwin, lawyer, had been spending the morning in his room at home over an intricate case that he was obliged to work out and was thinking about luncheon when there came a ring at the telephone.

"Mr. Corwin?" came a woman's voice.

"Yes, I am Corwin. Who is it?"

"Bella Dudley."

"Oh, Miss Dudley! Happy New Year!"

"Same to you."

There was a brief pause, after which Miss Dudley proceeded: "This is a fine, sunshiny day. I suppose you are free on a holiday? It seems a pity to stay in the house with nothing to do. I wish they would revive calling."

"I am disengaged for the afternoon."

"How would you like to drive me in the runabout?"

"Very much. But I am surprised that you have no engagement for the day."

"If I told you that I have a lot of them and propose to break them all for you you wouldn't believe me."

"And if you told me you had had no opportunity to make them I wouldn't believe you."

"True. Therefore never mind my engagements. Come at 3 o'clock and we'll have a spin."

"I'll be with you, most assuredly."

"One moment, please."

"A dozen, if you like."

"I would prefer to dine somewhere. Suppose we go to Summerset and dine at the Antlers. That would suit me if it will not be too cold for you coming back at night. Summerset is thirty miles, you know."

"I'll stand the cold."

"Very well. Summerset it is, with dinner at the Antlers, 3 o'clock. We'll go round by Turneraville."

"That will be fine. Goodby."

"Goodby."

* * * * * * *

"Bella," said Mr. Dudley on the morning of the 2d of January, "didn't you find it cold riding last night?"

"We had plenty of robes."

"What time did you get home?"

"About 10 o'clock."

"Several young men called in the afternoon," said Mrs. Dudley, "and two in the evening. They all seemed disappointed in not finding you."

"Did they, mamma. Please pour my coffee."

When the family rose from the breakfast table Bella told her father that she had something to say to him and, taking his hand, affectionately led him into the library.

"Papa," she said, "I've reformed."

"How long will the reformation last?"

"Always. I'm engaged."

"Bugaged?"

"Yes, engaged."

"For how long?"

"Forever."

"To whom?"

"Mr. Corwin."

The father embraced her.

"Do you believe the engagement will stick?" asked Bella.

"Yes," said the father.

"Why this man more than the others?"

"The others were Tom, Dick and Harry. This is Mr. Corwin. But how did you figure it out so quickly, sweet heart?"

"I concluded to go into bankrutcy in the court of love. But, realizing that I would get in the same fix again, I concluded to marry the man I really want and remove temptation."

However that had the same result as bankruptcy for marriage gives a clear ance for all outstanding love debts.

AFRAID SHE WAS DYING

Suffered Terribly Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, Jan. 27th, 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered so much that I would not dare eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives". I did not wish to try them for I had little confidence in them but, seeing my husband's anxiety, I decided to do so and at once I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was cured. While sick, I lost several pounds, but after taking "Fruit-a-tives", I quickly regained what I had lost. Now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am completely cured, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives".

FOR THE CUISINE.

How to Serve Cheese Daintily and With Satisfaction.

The housekeeper of economical mind should not fail to make a thorough study of cheeses. They go far toward giving zest to a meal and are really nourishing. They contain nitrogenous matter and are therefore a muscle or tissue building food. Cheese is a concentrated food, however, and should be eaten in small quantities as a relish rather than as the fundamental element of a meal.

The common Canadian cheese is generally supposed to be the most digestible of its family. In reality it is not so easily digested as those which are known as ripe or old cheeses such as Camembert, Roquefort and Brie. The housewife of systematic habits will stock up her pantry with different cheeses for different purposes. For flavoring, making rabbits and for cooked dishes she will use a good grade of cheese or Parmesan. The latter can be bought ready grated in bottles.

The best cheese to serve with salad are the medium rich, such as pineapple, Edam, English dairy and Canadian full cream. The Neufchatel or cream cheese is also served with salad, but is less easy to digest than are the medium rich cheeses mentioned before.

The most popular after dinner cheeses are Roquefort, Camembert, Stilton, Limburger, Brie, Schweitzer and Gorgonzola, all very rich and ripe. Presumably they are imported cheeses. Quite often, however, they are made in Canada and it is found they give just as good satisfaction as the imported article.

When cheese is served both with the salad and with the coffee course a very dainty accompaniment is a green salad with French dressing. It is this: Spread thin saltines with a mixture of grated Canadian cheese and butter in the proportion of two tablespoonfuls of cheese to one of butter. Dust lightly with cayenne pepper and stand for a moment or so in a quick oven. For cheese served with the final dinner course there is nothing more appropriate than hot crackers split and toasted a golden brown.

War Brings Mice.

One curious result of a foreign invasion is recorded in the letters of Prince Metternich to Mme. de Lieven. From Judenburg, a small town in Styria, the prince writes: "The burgomaster here has been expatiating to me on the large amount of damage done by mice to farms in the surrounding district. On inquiring how long they had been afflicted in this way, I was told, 'Since the French were here.' 'Do you mean to tell me the French brought mice with them?' I asked. 'No,' replied the burgomaster; 'but they ate so much bread that they covered our fields with crumbs, and since then all the mice in Styria appeared to have settled here.'"

Real Excitement.

A city man who owing to a bad business deal was obliged to live for some time in a small railroad town frequently felt the need of excitement. Once when he was really depressed with the monotony of his life he saw a wildly excited crowd gathered on a vacant lot. President citizens were there hopping up and down, gesticulating and shouting, and he felt that the unexpected had happened and something was doing. He rushed to the lot and grasped one. "What's the matter?" he excitedly shouted a rampant citizen. "Matter! Why, we are going to have a swarm of bees!"

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

REPLENISH YOUR BLOOD IN THE SPRING

Just now you are feeling "out of sorts"—not your usual self. Quite exhausted at times and cannot devote real energy to your work. Sleep does not rest you and you wake up feeling "all tired out." Perhaps rheumatism is flying through your muscles and joints, or may be your skin is disfigured by rashes, boils or pimples. Headaches, twinges of neuralgia, fits of nervousness, irritability of temper and a disordered stomach often increase your discomfort in the spring.

The cause—winter has left its mark on you. These troubles are signs that your blood is poor and watery, that your nerves are exhausted. You must renew and enrich your blood at once and restore tone to your tired nerves, or there may be a complete breakdown. The most powerful remedy for these spring ailments in men women and children is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, because these Pills cleanse bad blood and strengthen weak nerves.

New, rich, red blood—your greatest need in spring—is plentifully created by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and with this new, pure blood in your veins you quickly regain health and increase your strength. Then your skin becomes clear, your eyes bright, your nerves strong, and you feel better, eat better, sleep better, and are able to do your work.

Begin you spring tonic treatment to-day for the blood and nerves with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills — the Pills that strengthen.

These Pills are sold by most dealers, but do not be persuaded to take "something just the same." If you can't get the genuine Pills from your dealer they will be sent you by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Test of a Fire Insurance Policy is

—FIRE—

Every fire tests the kind of service a company gives its policy-holders but the supreme test is the great conflagration that leaves a big city in ashes, forces many insurance companies out of business and makes policy-holders all over the country anxious about the security back of their insurance.

At such times the man who holds a policy of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company never worries. He knows that his policy is backed by ample assets and more than a century's record for the prompt payment of every honest loss.

That's one reason why we represent the Hartford here. There are other reasons equally good. May we talk to you about it?

THE BANNER

THE BANNER, APRIL 1st, 1915.

City and Country Labor.

The unemployment problem is still existent in the cities and the scarcity of labor is still complained of in rural districts. The question is how can the one be reconciled with the other, and the one brought to supply what the other needs and the other to take what the one possesses in excess. After the war there may be a rush of immigration, but that cannot be for a year at least. We must, therefore, make the best of the situation and try to get along with what we have. A Toronto paper has been publishing letters from a number of men who have accepted positions on farms. They all, without exception speak in good terms of their experience. The pay is not lavish, but the food is good and abundant, the bed clean and life in the open brings a keen appetite for meals and a pleasant desire for sound, refreshing sleep. One man writes: "I have tramped miles and miles after deer and dropped too exhausted to eat or sleep. Here when I'm hungry I have a good meal to go to and when I'm tired there is a nice clean bed waiting. You know how I hated to break from the city, but now Mary and I are both glad we came. You should see her with her skirt tucked up bustling to and from the barns. It's the pastoral life for us all right. Men who wander cities idle and hungry while there are opportunities like this offering are crazy."

Perhaps readers of this may think the writer of the foregoing has hit upon a soft spot. It is more than likely, however, that he is possessed of that Mark Tapleyism that should accompany all desire for work, that hopefulness which leads to success and, at this period of time, begets some fulfilment of the scriptural injunction to bear one another's burdens. Every man, yes and every woman, who goes to work in this strain of spirit, and to all it is possible, is helping to take the handicap off somebody else's shoulders and is contributing to the welfare alike of his own country and the Empire. He is uplifting his fellowmen, he is assisting in the clothing and feeding of his countrymen, may be his townsmen at the front, and he is setting an example that cannot be too extensively followed. He is doing his share towards reconciling the wants of the city with the needs of the country. He is also probably prolonging his own life as well as making matters easier for others. Above all he is proving himself a true patriot in earnestly doing his best to promote production.

C. V. Jeffers' Drug Store Benefits by New Business Idea

Exclusive Agent for Well-Known Line

In all lines of business old ideas are giving place to new, and modern efficiency is showing better ways of selling goods.

Almost everyone is familiar with the famous Nyal's Family Remedies and Toilet preparations and has been accustomed to seeing them in almost every drug store and almost every family medicine cupboard.

Very recently the Company have made a far reaching change in their plan of doing business. In the future Nyal preparations will only be obtainable through selected drug store agencies who are shareholders in the company.

It is a proven fact that agents, selected because of their ability and business standing and more intimately connected with the manufacturers are able to market goods more economically and at the same time give better service to the buying public. Much of the friction of competitive business methods is eliminated and the public benefits therefrom.

Mr. C. V. Jeffers is to be congratulated on securing the Nyal Agency in our town and will in the future make these preparations a more prominent feature of his business.

President Falconer Coming.

The recently organized Canadian Club will hold its inaugural meeting and a banquet on Wednesday evening, April 14th. President Falconer, of Toronto University, will be the guest of honor and will deliver an address on the subject "Perversion of Patriotism." The executive of the Club is fortunate indeed in securing the services of a speaker of such outstanding ability as President Falconer for its opening meeting.

A Business Change.

Mr. T. J. Brown has sold his drug business and stock to Mr. N. T. MacWilliam, of Dutton, who will take possession on April 1st. Mr. Brown, we understand, has not decided definitely on his plans for the future, although he has a couple of promising business propositions under consideration. The acceptance of either of these will, we regret to add, probably mean his removal from town. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are both quite popular socially and should they decide to leave Orangeville their departure will be regretted by a wide circle of friends.

Mrs. Neil McDermid, of Nottawasaga township, died at her home near Dunbrae the other day at the ripe age of 84 years.

THE ARMSTRONG INQUEST

Jury Condemns Barnardo Authorities for Lax Methods.

Home Should Exercise Stricter Supervision of Its Boys and Girls.

Coroner Dr. A. F. Reynar, of Palgrave, and his jury resumed and concluded the inquest into the deaths of Annie Violet Armstrong and James Stevens last Thursday. The unfortunate girl was foully killed in her own home on the preceding Thursday morning by Stevens, a Barnardo Home boy, who subsequently ended his own life by cutting his throat with a razor. Much interest was taken in the proceedings at the inquiry which was held in the Town Hall in Charleston. The Hall was filled almost to the doors by neighbors of the Armstrong family and other interested spectators. The Court met at 11 o'clock and at 3.15 p.m. the jury retired to consider its verdict. Two hours later the jury reported its finding, which contained a strong arraignment of the Barnardo Home methods and made some important recommendations looking toward the safeguarding of Canadian homes from importations of an undesirable character. The verdict was worded as follows :—

"We, your jurors, after viewing the bodies of the late Annie Violet Armstrong and James Stevens and also making a close inspection of the surroundings and hearing the evidence, are unanimous in our finding that the said Annie Violet Armstrong came to her death by having her throat cut by one, James Stevens, and that the said James Stevens came to his death by afterwards cutting his throat with a razor and thereby committing suicide.

"This jury is strongly of the opinion that the Barnardo Home should pay more attention to the selection, and preparatory training of its boys and girls before placing them in our Canadian homes.

"Whilst we willingly recognize the importance of the work that this institution is doing, we are convinced that much better results would be secured if the boys and girls were kept under the direct supervision of the Home long enough to learn something positive of their character, habits and tendencies for good or evil. If found undesirable we would recommend that they be deported.

"We also recommend that it be compulsory for the Home to notify applicants as to the character of the boys and girls, especially when they have been previously returned to the Home.

"If this course were followed the jury is convinced that there would be fewer heart-rending tragedies such as the one which has made it necessary to hold this enquiry."

The verdict was signed by W. J. Limebeer (foreman), E. E. Wilson, D. McKim, Wilmer Hillock, Thos. Delaney, Earl Harrison, Albert Hillock, S. L. Island, John Kirk, Ambrose Stubbs, Albert Smith and James Lamont.

The witnesses examined were Constable Thos. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. J. Armstrong, the parents of the dead girl, Elmer Armstrong, her young brother, Dr. Thomas, of Caledon, who made the post mortem examination, Miss Margaret and Albert Hillock, neighbors of the Armstrong family, Walter Peck, formerly a farm hand at the Armstrong place, and Inspector Stanners, of the Barnardo Home. Mr. W. H. McFadden, of Brampton, County Crown Attorney for Peel, was present in the interests of the Crown. The Coroner, Crown Attorney and jury were severe in their condemnation of the Barnardo Home management. Much of the censure was due to the fact that the evidence proved that Stevens had been sent back to the Home by a former employer, who had found the lad unmanageable. This evidence was in the form of a letter from Mrs. Bruce Sales, of Seaforth, who stated that the boy had lived with the Sales' family and had been sent back to the Home because neither Mrs. Sales nor her husband could manage him. Despite this the Barnardo people allowed Stevens to be sent to Mr. Armstrong without saying a word to him about the boy's record or the trouble he had with his former employer.

HAD NARROW ESCAPES.

Former Caledon Boy Writes About Trench Warfare in Northern France.

Mr. Homer Hillyard, of Caledon, has received the following short but interesting letter from Pte. Fred. Malyon, a former Caledon boy, who is now in France with the First Contingent :—

Mr. Homer Hillyard,
Caledon.

Dear Homer,

I received your letter dated Feb. 8 and sure was glad to hear from you.

Well, Homer, it is but little that I can say on account of the strict censorship which is on; now that we are in the firing line and owing to the time it takes to read so many letters we are requested to only write one page.

Well I am still living and well but had a few narrow escapes while in the trenches. The mud is knee deep over here. It rains most of the time and keeps very smoky and foggy on account of the heavy gun fire which is going on mostly all the time.

We are resting now for a few days, then we will be back at it as hard as ever. Four days in the trenches and four out. Such is life at the front.

Good bye,
FRED.

TUBERCULOSIS FIGHT

Field Secretary of National Sanitarium Association Will Speak Here.

Orangeville is again to be favored with a Lecture by Mr. J. B. Watson, the Field Secretary of the National Sanitarium Association. Doubtless many remember the Lecture given some time ago as intensely interesting, thoroughly instructive and eminently practical. We understand that much new information, a number of special views and most interesting Moving Pictures are to be presented at the Lecture, which will be given in the Opera House on Sunday evening, the 4th of April, at 8.20 p.m.

Dr. Campbell has kindly consented to occupy the chair.

No charge will be made for admission.

We cannot too heartily commend this Lecture to our readers.

Conferred With Presbytery.

Rev. Robert Laird, Secretary of the Board of Finance of the Presbyterian Church, was in town on Monday for the purpose of conferring with a Committee of Orangeville Presbytery on the budget for 1915. We understand that the congregations in the Orangeville Presbytery gave $1950 more for missions in 1914 than in 1913. The contributions for 1914 were upwards of $7000.

MARSHALL GREEN COMPANY

MISS CRANSTON WON

Orangeville Girl Secured Prize Piano in T. S. Parkinson's Contest.

The contest for the handsome Mozart-Heintzman Piano offered by the firm of T. S. Parkinson & Co., general merchants, was brought to a successful close at 10 o'clock on Saturday night. The final summing up of the votes recorded for the different contestants was made by Messrs. A. E. Annis, V. A. Statia and A. D. McKitrick, who had consented to act as judges. Mr. Annis announced the result to a large and eager crowd in front of Mr. Parkinson's store shortly after the completion of the count. Miss Laura Cranston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Cranston, 1st Avenue, won the first prize, the fine piano already referred to, with upwards of one million votes. The second and third prizes, two valuable rugs, went to Miss Barclay, who was competing on behalf of Lord Dufferin Hospital, and Mrs. Robt. Marshall, of Camilla. The fourth prize, a suit case, was won by Miss Batters, of the Public School staff. The standing of the leading competitors follows :—

	Votes.
Miss Laura Cranston	1,069,974
Miss Barclay ... ... (Lord Dufferin Hospital)	804,393
Mrs. Robt. Marshall ... ... (St. Andrew's Ch., Camilla)	466,345
Miss Batters ... ... (Orangeville Public School)	439,909
Rev. G. W. Tebbs ... ... (St. Mark's S. S.)	339,955
Miss Carney	303,329
Mrs. Glassford	14,285

Following the announcement, Miss Cranston and other prize winners who happened to be present were heartily congratulated upon their success.

Granted Leave of Absence.

At a meeting of the High School Board on Monday night Principal Steele, whose regrettable illness has already been referred to in these columns, was granted leave of absence until the midsummer vacation. Miss Boyle, of London, who was recently engaged to fill Mr. Steele's place while he was off duty, was appointed acting Principal. Miss Boyle is a graduate of Toronto University and a specialist in Mathematics.

A Whiskey Seizure.

License Inspector Robinson and Chief Ewing seized two cases of Imperial Whiskey on the Hotel Alexandra premises on Monday night. The whiskey had just been brought in from Fraxa Junction by "Banker" Jimmy Robinson and a companion. Robinson is hostler in the Alexandra stables. Interesting Police Court proceedings will likely follow the seizure.

CRANEVILLE.

It looks like a young winter around here.

Quite a number from this burg snowshoed to Whittington last Sunday.

Mr. William Smith has commenced crushing this season.

Messrs. Robert and John Falconer attended a Pastor Russell meeting at Elba last Sunday.

Messrs. Willie Dale and John Jackson held a very successful woodbee last week cutting about twenty-five cords.

Mr. Bert Jackson purchased five head of Holstein cattle last week. It looks as if Bert were going into business.

Our pathmaster, Mr. T. Buchanan, is rather slow about opening up the roads this spring.

We wonder when W. A. and A. M. are going to pay us another visit.

RICH HILL.

It was a beautiful March morning and the feeling of Spring was in the air. The sky was cloudless and the birds sang cheerily as two young people from a neighboring hamlet passed merrily through our burg on their way to our great C. P. R. depot. They were in the best of spirits and were eagerly discussing their plans as to how they were intending to spend their vacation and were, we are afraid, paying but slight attention to either the horse or the road they were travelling. Everything went "merrily as a marriage bell" until they had almost reached the depot when the peacefulness of that beautiful spring morning was abruptly disturbed by a series of screams and sturdy shouts for assistance. Our mayor, who chanced to be passing that way, on hearing the cries of distress, hastened to render them "first aid."

On approaching the scene of the accident he found the carriage to be in a state of partial collapse and the travellers, who had been ignominiously hurled to Mother Earth, standing in some three or four inches of ordinary spring mud, presenting an extremely woe-begone and deplorable appearance as they ruefully surveyed each other's pitiable plight. However, with the aid of the mayor's jack-knife and a few binder strings, the broken parts were soon put into a temporarily serviceable condition and the unfortunate, though thankful (that matters were no worse) young couple continued their journey, reaching their destination without further mishap. And the peacefulness of the beautiful spring morning had again attained its wonted tranquility.

Owing to the recent soft weather the sound of the sleighbell was fast becoming obsolete, but Sunday evening's snow storm refreshed our memories with the joyful sound.

Mr. and Mrs. Davey Still, of Shelburne, who have been engaged for the summer by Mr. George Maharg, are moving into the house recently vacated by Mr. Thomas Cooke.

Quite a number of our youth and beauty took "tie-tickets" for Shelburne last Saturday afternoon as the roads were impassable for vehicles.

The old adage "Opposition is the life of trade," is being forcibly brought to our notice by the pleasant rivalry of our two mail couriers, Messrs. Allen and White, who seem determined to deliver His Majesty's mail even if they do so on foot.

Several of our young people attended the annual "At Home" given by the C.O.C.F., of Shelburne, last Monday night.

Messrs. D. and W. Spence entertained a few of the local young men one evening last week.

Miss Rintoul, of Crombie, was the guest of Miss Annie Kingsley over Sunday.

CALEDON EAST.

The Epworth League of the Methodist Church were entertained by the Presbyterian Guild on Wednesday evening of last week. The League rendered a nice programme in Knox church after which they repaired to the S.O.S. hall where the Guild served a dainty lunch and an enjoyable time was spent.

Sister Susie's sewin shirts for soldiers. Who will help her. The Red Cross Society have bought material to be made into shirts for the soldiers. Will those who are willing to help in this work call at the home of Mrs. White where the material can be obtained.

Miss Mary Brown, of Toronto, is holidaying for a few days with her cousin, Miss Annie White.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Sullivan and Miss Sullivan, 3rd line, Albion, attended the funeral of their uncle. Mr. Patrick Hanrahan, at Tottenham on Monday, and Mr. and Mrs. James Haragan, 5th line, Caledon, also attended, the deceased being an uncle of Mrs. Haragan.

This spring will be long remembered as the moving spring in the village. Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Coulter, of Milton, have moved back again and taken up their abode on their farm which has been tenanted by Mr. R. W. Burrell for a number of years past. Mr. Coulter will take the farm into his own hands, having engaged a man to work the place, while he himself will have an important position at Cardwell Junction brickyards.

Mr. McElwain has moved into the upper part of the Cranston old store and the lower part will be stocked with implements of the Cockshutt Co., of Brantford, which company Mr. McElwain will represent as their agent. Mr. John Rawn has moved in to the house just vacated by Mr. McElwain and which Mr. Rawn recently purchased. Mr. James Cannon is moving into the house opposite the G.T.R. station. Mr. Geo. Young will move out next week and Mr. Boyce, who recently bought the place, will take possession, and several others will move from one place to another in the village in three or four weeks' time as soon as arrangements can be made.

Mr. Henry Clarridge has bought a lot on Emma St. and is busy erecting a new house.

After an extended, active and vigorous decapitating tour throughout the Dominion, the "axe" of the government spoils system department has at last reached Caledon East and has taken off the head of the mail courier who carried the mail between the G.T. and the post office, and who has been superseded by Mr. Michael Perdue, who commences his duties next week.

Mr. P. Soall has opened out a boot and shoe repair department at Mono Road.—Enterprise.

—War Atlas for sale at The Banner Bookstore. Complete set of War Maps.

Hand Gashed by Saw.

While putting wood to a portable sawing machine on Mr. John Hewitt's farm, Centre Road, Mono, on Wednesday of last week Fred Sproule, son of Mr. Oliver Sproule, one of Mr. Hewitt's neighbors, got one of his hands badly gashed by the saw, the wound extending across the back of the hand from the wrist to the second finger. Dr. Kyles, who was summoned to dress the injured member, found it necessary to put in sixteen stitches. The young man was brought to Lord Dufferin Hospital, where he is receiving every attention.

A Minstrel Show.

Orangeville will have one of the biggest Minstrel Shows in years in the Opera House on Tuesday evening, April 13th, when a local company of over twenty minstrels and trained singers, with an orchestra specially organized for the occasion, will give a performance that will savor strongly of the cotton fields. Mr. C. R. McKeown, M.P.P., will act as interlocutor and will have the assistance of six end men, who will serve up a choice assortment of original jokes and local hits. Several carefully prepared specialties will feature the entertainment of the evening. A banjo, mandolin and guitar quartette will discourse plantation melodies, two colored Scotchmen, said to be the only pair of the kind in captivity, will give selections on the bagpipes and a couple of "cull'ed ladies" will treat the "common white trash" down in the audience to the latest variations and intricacies of the tango. The Company is turning net proceeds over to the Hospital Building Fund. Admission 35 and 50c. All seats reserved. Plan of Hall will open at Brown's drug store on April 6th at 10 o'clock a.m.

Women's Institute.

Orangeville Women's Institute has elected the following officers for 1915 :—

President—Mrs. W. J. Gordon.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. T. G. Legate.
Secretary—Mrs. H. Endacott.
Programme Committee — Mrs. Hulse, Mrs. Torrie, Mrs. Gillespie, Mrs. Trimble, Mrs. McPherson.

Auditors—Mrs. Wm. Gillespie, Mrs. T. G. Legate.

CALEDON.

A great number of our citizens are suffering from la grippe.

The Box Social on Friday night attracted quite a fair audience, roads and weather being considered. The boxes were beautiful and costly, the bidding brisk and the auctioneer all that could be desired. About $30 was realized and everybody reports a good time.

Reeve Quinn attended a special meeting of the Peel County Council this week.

Miss Louise Laughlin, who has been attending McDonald Institute at Guelph, is home for the Easter vacation.

Ibe are pleased to be able to state that the report that Pte. Fred Malyon had been wounded is not correct as Mr. Homer Hillyard has received a letter from him bearing the date of March 12th, which appears elsewhere in this issue, and shows that he was in the best of health and safe and sound at that time.

(Intended for last week)

On Sunday morning last the Angel of Death again passed over our community and claimed as its victim Mrs. David Patterson, a highly respected resident of our village. Mrs. Patterson has been a long but patient sufferer, having spent the last eleven months in bed and suffering intense pain for the last part of that time. She bore her suffering with great Christian fortitude and was most cheerful under extremely trying circumstances. Mrs. Patterson was the eldest daughter of the late Joseph Warnock and is survived by her husband, three sisters and three brothers, who have the sympathy of the entire community in the sad loss which they have been called on to bear. The funeral on Tuesday last was largely attended. Rev. Mr. Burkholder conducting the service at the grave and in Knox Church, of which deceased was a consistent member.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Vanwyck, of Detroit, Mich., attended the funeral of the latter's sister, Mrs. David Patterson, on Tuesday of this week.

Mr. David Laughlin's sale was largely attended and good prices were realized for nearly everything that was offered. Wellington Hull, of Erin, wielded the hammer with all his old time vigor and also took occasion to hand out some good advice to some of our young men, and they would do well to follow it too.

Mr. Jas. Sweeney, of North Dakota, is visiting his parental home here. Mr. Sweeney is one of our Caledon boys who has prospered under the Stars and Stripes, but still has a warm spot in his heart for the land of his birth.

Mr. Robert Cruikshank, of Beamsville, is visiting friends in this community and attended the funeral of his niece, Mrs. David Patterson.

PILES Do not suffer another day with Itching, Bleeding, or Protruding Piles. No surgical operation required. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and as certainly cure you. 60c. a box; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Sample box free if you mention this paper and enclose 2c. stamp to pay postage.

James McKinney, of Caledon East, held an auction sale which realized about $3,000.

Walkerton is making application to the Legislature for power to consolidate its debt.

REASON AND RELIGION.

If Man Exercises His Reasoning Faculty It Will Invariably Lead to Belief in God

Christ Urged His Hearers to Use Reason to Solve Problems of Religion.

In St. Andrew's Church on Sunday night Rev. W. M. Morris delivered the third of his series of special sermons on "The Higher Powers of the Soul," taking "Reason" as his subject. The discourse, which was followed with close attention by an unexpectedly large congregation, considering the stormy, disagreeable night, which doubtless prevented many people from venturing forth from their own firesides, was based on the text, "Come now and let us reason together, saith the Lord," Isaiah 1 : 18. The following is a synopsis of the sermon :—

It has been said that religion has suffered from nothing so much as the false notion that men must sacrifice to religion some essential elements of their nature. When we look back over history we find that some men, when they began to cherish religion, warred against their social affections and lived solitary lives. Others warred against their senses, abjured all pleasures and lived ascetic lives. Again there were others who warred against religion and superstitiously feared to think. It was surely a mistaken notion to believe that the exercise of faith is opposed to the exercise of reason. Religion is a universal principle, spreading its influence through man's whole being and over every faculty, reason included. Shall the man who studies the science of law, or the science of medicine, or the science of pedagogy, exercise his reason, and the man who studies the science of theology have his reason bound? Is God served and worshipped by those who believe but do not enquire? We sing that in his blindness the heathen bows down to wood and stone and forget that it is in his blindness. The aim of Christianity is not to stultify reason, but to bring out the whole nature of man, including all his faculties, in harmonious development.

A feeling of sadness passes over a community when the judge passes the death sentence upon a fellow-man. It seems cruel to deprive another of the pleasure of living. I do not know of any statement that should take more courage to make than to say to the prisoner "Thou shalt not Live." It is a debatable question, however, whether life is worth living for the man who does not think. If an ecclesiastical court should pronounce sentence upon a man saying "Thou shalt not think," and had power to enforce the sentence, it seems to me it would be more cruel than if it deprived him of life itself. There are many in our asylums today who are dead while living, because their minds have lost the power of reason.

The faculty of reason may be defined as man's power to distinguish truth from falsehood. He exercises his reason when he pierces below the surface of the phenomena of the universe to find out the explanation of things. He uses this faculty when he tries to interpret and understand the facts of his own experience. He should put it into operation in determining what his life work shall be and not be the creature of accidental circumstances. It would be well to use reason in the choice of associates rather than make casual acquaintances intimate friends.

When we come to the sphere of religion we find that the Scripture writers represent God as making His strongest and highest appeals to man's reason. Our text reads, "Come now and let us reason together." In our endeavors to bring life into harmony with God we have made appeals to imagination and the emotions, but perhaps not as frequently as we should to man's intelligence. Look into the New Testament and what do we find? The Lord and Teacher pressed over and over again upon his hearers the absolute necessity of bringing their minds to bear upon the problems of religion. When but a child of twelve He confronted the learned doctors of divinity and not only heard them but asked them questions. In His public ministry He habitually turned upon His hearers with such questions as "Whether is it easier to say, 'thy sins are forgiven' or 'Rise, take up thy bed and walk?'" "Who thinkest thou was neighbor unto him who fell among the thieves?" "What think ye of Christ?" That was his method of compelling them to exercise their understanding on high and holy things. And when we pass on from the work and method of the Master to the Apostles, we find that they make a similar appeal to reason. It was the custom of the Apostle Paul to enter the synagogue and reason with his audience out of the Scriptures and Peter exhorted his readers to be able to give a reason for their Christian hope.

Reason asserts the existence of a personal God. Atheists tell us the universe is but an accidental arrangement of the particles of matter. You go into the Bell Telephone office and talk with an unseen friend many miles away. You think of the batteries, machinery and system and you know that there must be a mind behind it all that planned and willed it. Nobody would consider it a reasonable explanation to be told that all this machinery simply fell together by accident and that the whole system gave no evidence of mental force behind it all. Or you go into some great railway depot where hundreds of trains are coming and going and are at once impressed with the magnitude of the mind that controls the system. Have you ever thought that this earth is a train carrying millions and millions of passengers along the unseen track of space? Have you ever thought that it is never behind time? Have you ever thought of the uncounted suns and worlds of this system moving in harmony through eternal space? Is there not evidence of mind and power in all this? In this and many other ways we are led to conclude that if man exercises his God given faculty of reason he is inevitably led to believe in God.

Crown Prince Boris of Bulgaria Veteran Of Balkan Campaign

SINCE war broke out in Europe there have been various rumors as to the attitude of Bulgaria toward the fighting powers. She would remain neutral. She would join the allies. She would fight with Germany. Recent events, however, point to the conclusion that should Bulgaria enter the fracas it would be with the idea of being in at the dismemberment of Turkey, should that event occur.

Bulgaria, which made such an extraordinary military record in the first Balkan war that the world expected to see her enter Constantinople, emerged from the second Balkan war humiliated and almost destroyed. The king's name is Ferdinand, and Crown Prince Boris is his son.

Crown Prince Boris recently celebrated his twenty-first birthday. A short time ago it was rumored that he was to wed Princess Elizabeth of Roumania. But it seems that event is not to take place, at least not at present. Such an alliance would not please some of the powers. Boris is a veteran of the Balkan wars, where he fought so valiantly that he was a hero among his soldiers, his future subjects. Boris through his father is related to almost every other royal house in Europe.

ROME CRYING FOR HELP!

Roman Catholics in the United States, who a short time ago were boasting of making America Roman Catholic, are now crying for help. The effect of their propaganda was to arouse public opinion against them. This took the form of keen criticism of Rome and her policy in the Church papers, and in a number of anti-papal journals established for that purpose. The few papers whose particular mission it is to expose the errors and crimes of Romanism have reached a phenomenal circulation. One of them sends out a million and a half copies each week. It has developed sentiment among the American people against Rome which threatens disastrous results to the Church, and to her children who so largely fill the public offices in the United States.

The situation between Romanism and Protestantism in the Republic has become so acute that at least one Protestant lecturer has been murdered. The Knights of Columbus have raised a fund of $50,000 to prosecute a campaign against the editors of the opposing papers. In many other ways Roman Catholics have attempted to stem the tide of popular feeling against their Church.

The latest proposal is from the Rev. Frederick Lynch, secretary of the Carnegie Peace Union, proposing a conference between Protestant organizations and Roman Catholics. He says this age-long controversy between Protestants and Catholics has just now reached an acute crisis. There can be no doubt that what he says is true. But the fault lies with the Roman fanatics like Father Whelan, of St. Louis, who stated in his paper, "The Western Watchman," that if a Roman Catholic were required to choose between the Pope and the Republic, he would say "To Hell with the Republic." That is the kind of thing that has aroused the latent Protestant spirit of the American people.

We do not think a conference such as Mr. Lynch proposes will have any influence whatever in placating the Protestants of America. They seem determined to protect the integrity of their nation by removing from important public positions the men who are first subjects of His Holiness the Pope.

There is one thing certain, that if the Protestants of the United States begin to temporize with the Roman apologists it will not be long before they are led into camp. There can be no compromise with Rome. The reason is that Rome herself will not compromise. She stands immovable, demanding recognition not only of the astonishing doctrines of the Church, but of the principle that the Pope shall exercise temporal power.

The Papal party in the United States has been boldly declaring their solidarity in politics. It is this that has aroused the people, and it is this that they are organizing for the purpose of ending.

It is a pretty spectacle that they present at this time. After boasting that they can control the country, they are now crying for help! Help! HELP! against those whom they have stirred up by their aggression, and their disloyalty.—Orange Sentinel.

Archduke Frederick Demands Cessation of the Servian Campaign

ARCHDUKE Frederick of Austria, directing head of the entire Austrian army, who has just demanded of the Austro-Hungarian Government that the futile campaign against Serbia be abandoned and that Prince Eugene be sent with his army to aid the stricken forces in the Carpathians, is a cousin of Emperor Francis Joseph. Frederick is acting head of the army because of the age and feebleness of the Emperor. Gen. von Hoetzendorf, chief of staff, who is second in command, is the strategical expert and author of Austria's plans of campaign in the present war. So far as is known the archduke has not visited the battle lines. He is reported to have been deeply chagrined from the failure of the Austrian campaign against Serbia.

ARCHDUKE FREDERICK.

Archduke Frederick is the richest man in Austria and also the most wealthy member of the Austrian Imperial family. His income is said to be more than $2,000,000 a year and is remarkable because Austria is not a country of very rich men. Less than thirty citizens of the empire have incomes of more than $200,000.

Archduke Frederick is fifty-eight years of age and is the father of seven daughters and one son. It was not until July, 1907, that a son and heir was born to him. The archduke is a brother of the dowager Queen Maria Christina of Spain, and during the Spanish-American war he spent much time at Madrid in the role of military adviser to his sister.

Russian Prayer for Horses.

The Russians are in the habit of using the following prayer for their horses before going into action.

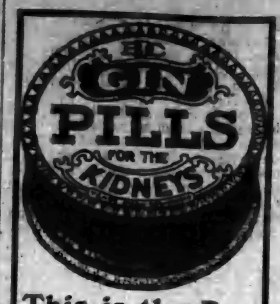
"And for these also, O Lord, the humble beasts who with us bear the burden and heat of the day, and offer their guileless lives for the well-being of their countries, we supplicate Thy great tenderness of heart, for Thou has promised to save both man and beast, and great is Thy loving kindness, O Master, Saviour of the world. Lord have mercy."

Those also who have traveled over some of the wide spaces of Russia and Siberia, adds Country Life, will appreciate the simple trust shown in it, for Russians have often to face dangers alone on horseback in their great country even in times of peace.

More Intelligent Than Before.

The curious effect of a bullet wound in the head is related in the monthly circular of the Paris Society of Medicine. Dr. Peraire, speaking of a patient who has a fracture of the skull, says: "He is doing well. He reads the paper, writes to his parents, and astonishes everybody. Nevertheless, the bullet has passed transversely through his skull. It is an exceptional case. I know nothing resembling it. This man is perhaps more intelligent than he was before, for the bullet which has opened his skull has possibly increased the development of his brain."

A Gasoline War.



In the present European war gasoline has come to be regarded so much a necessity that it has been referred to in some quarters as a war of gasoline. Should the supply give out and no substitute devolop, it may play a large part in the termination of hostilities. Possibly the demand for a motor explosive may cause the European chemists to develop a substitute for gasoline or a means to supplement a limited gasoline-supply.

The Krupp Works.

To-day Krupps' works cover 1,000 acres of ground. Even before the war-rush commenced the firm were employing 60,000 men at their main works at Essen and thousands of others in their collieries, shipbuilding yards, and private testing grounds. It is estimated that over 300,000 people depend on Krupps for their livelihood. At the Krupps' works 40,000 cannon are turned out every year.

Flint Industry Revived.

England's oldest industry, the flint knapping business, which is still carried on in Brandon, Suffolk, is experiencing a brisk business as a result of the war, the flint knappers being busy in their workshops fitting up tinder-boxes for the use of the Tommies at the front.

THE MINISTRY OF SILENCE

God uses silence in nature. He unbinds the roaring cataract and rolls the thunder into the air, but he also calms the torrent into placid smoothness and stills the air into the silence of night. These moments of restful cessation have their uses in nature as well as its tumultous activities; and as God thus works in nature, so also in providence and revelation He not only speaks but also at times keeps silent.

The power of speech is one of the glories of man, the sign and means of his thought and a mark of his divinity. But the serviceableness of any power depends as much on what it does not do as on what it does do. It is quite as important that the locomotive be able to stop as that it should be able to start. The dampers that hush the strings of the piano are as necessary as the hammers that make them vibrate; for silence is as essential to music as sound. So the serviceableness of the human tongue depends as much upon its power to keep silence as upon its power to speak. Incessant speech would be intolerable, and one spoken word may do irreparable harm where silence would have been golden wisdom. There is a time to speak, and there is a time to keep silence; and the silence may be as useful and beautiful in its time, as rich in meaning and as full of growth and fruitfulness and joy as the most urgent and eloquent speech

Canadians at the Front

FREDERICK PALMER, the famous war correspondent who has not missed a campaign since 1897, thus describes a visit to the Canadian trenches a few days ago:

"Gangway! Look out for that bunch of wagons!" a voice with an American accent called, and one knew he was near the part of the line held by the Canadians.

It was pitch dark and at the hour when the supplies go to the trenches. There was not a light on any vehicle or on any habitation, but after stumbling along the correspondent passed through an open door and the darkened hall of a farmer's house and entered the brilliantly illuminated room, with thickly curtained windows of the brigade headquarters. An officer was talking over the telephone. He had just had word that a man had been shot in the back by a concealed sniper in the rear of the trenches.

The commander and his officers gather around the correspondent from the United States, whose request to go into the trenches had been gladly granted. The correspondent soon was on his way down a dark road, with a sergeant from Ottawa, as his guide to the battalion headquarters.

Passing through the ruins of a village, the sergeant remarked: "The Germans are not satisfied yet. They chuck a few shells into the wreckage every day. The shells make us kind of nervous at first, but we are used to them now, all right."

In a peasant cottage, battened as tight as a photographer's darkroom—an enemy fires at a light—the correspondent found the battalion commander, who was from Quebec. He sleeps in the cellar and the other officers of the battalion staff in dugouts. The officers remarked that a shell had knocked off a piece of the roof the other day, but that the missile did no harm except to make some dust. The colonel was going down into the trenches himself for the night, and took the correspondent with him.

"Lookout for that narrow footbridge and here you are likely to slip off into the ditch," warned the colonel as he advised the correspondent to keep close behind him in the inky night. "Right along here is a favorite place for the Germans to loosen up with a machine gun, for they have a clear field for fire," the colonel added when an open space was reached.

"There is nothing to it but to lie flat and wait until they are done shooting."

A German searchlight's rays swung toward the colonel and the correspondent and then rested on the clear spot.

"Stand still," said the officer. "That's the rule until it sweeps off. Thus they are not able to spot us."

Occasional shots were heard behind the trenches. "That's a sniper in our rear," the colonel said. "Occasionally one gets through. We don't know how. He is always in khaki. We are out after this fellow, and we will get him before morning."

The colonel and the correspondent kept passing lone soldiers carrying food and ammunition to the trenches or returning from the trenches empty-handed. The colonel spoke to them as "boys," a greeting which one never hears from an English officer.

As the trenches were entered a sudden command war given to someone showing an electric flash to turn it off, as the "patrols are coming in." Several men who had been out crawling up in Indian fashion to see if the Germans were up to anything new, came hustling over the top of the trench. Some bullets swept overhead. The Germans had noted the movement and fired, but hit nobody.

"We got within seven feet of the bunch in that old house and heard them whispering," said one of the patrol.

When the strapping, tall Canadians took the position over from an English regiment they found the crest too low for their height and had to raise it several inches. The Canadians have shown characteristic ingenuity, and initiative in arranging the trenches to suit themselves, and, besides, have made them wholly dry and comfortable.

"This beats Salisbury Plains, they kept saying, referring to their experience in drilling and waiting in England. "All we needed was to be in," said the colonel. "We came from home to fight and we are fighting. There is no trouble about discipline. Every man is keyed up and right on the job."

The entire contingent of Canadians was as chipper as a winning baseball team. "We won't care for the fireworks anymore when we return home," said a man from Ontario, who asked the correspondent if he knew Toronto and Buffalo. "We get enough of German flares," the man added as the flares kept rising at intervals, illuminating garishly the 300 yards of space between the trenches. "They are worried lest we are going to spring an attack on them, and we shall, pretty soon, too, I hope," the soldier said.

Occasionally as the correspondent walked along he could hear distinctly the sounds of snoring. In their shell-proofs the men, wrapped in blankets in frontier fashion, and despite the German flares and firing which go on all night, were sleeping until their turn came to go on watch.

"The absence of exhaustion among the men as they came out from the trenches is the cause of universal comment.

"They say we are making good, and I believe we are," the colonel declared when he bade the correspondent good night.

WORLD'S GREATEST KIDNEY REMEDY

"Fruit-a-tives" Have Proved Their Value In Thousands of Cases

WONDERFUL RECORD OF A WONDERFUL CURE

Only Remedy That Acts On All Three Of The Organs Responsible For The Formation Of Uric Acid In The Blood.

Many people do not realize that the Skin is one of the three great eliminators of waste matter from the body. As a matter of fact, the Skin rids the system of more Urea (or waste matter) than the Kidneys. When there is Kidney Trouble, Pain In The Back and Acrid Urine, it may not be the fault of the kidneys at all, but be due to faulty Skin Action, or Constipation of the bowels.

"Fruit-a-tives" cures weak, sore, aching Kidneys, not only because it strengthens these organs but also because "Fruit-a-tives" opens the bowels, sweetens the stomach and stimulates the action of the skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c, or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

HOW TO GET WARM.

Warmth is a sign of life. That is also a very desirable part of comfort is realized by many a one who reluctantly leaves a warm bed and shiveringly meets the winter cold, indoors or out, these winter mornings. If there is an open fire or a heater near by, it is a great temptation to try to get warm without taking in all the heat we can get from such a source. But some have learned a better way. They shut out heat from other sources, and make it for themselves. By brisk exercise of their bodies, by the healthy shock of a cold sponge, by an energetic walk before taking the car the make and give out warmth, and the cold demon is routed. And this is the better way in all spheres. Creating warmth is better than borrowing warmth. Your own smile of greeting to another will bring more warmth into your life than you can get depending on another's. Your own loving word, your own unselfish act, brisk and unhesitating, with perhaps its healthy shock as of a cold sponge, will set your spiritual circulation to tingling in a way that will warm you to the core. Try it some cold day.

LONDON HEROES LEAD

SEVENTEEN DEATHLESS NAMES ON HER LIST OF CHILDREN.

Devon Was the Birthplace of Ten Famous Soldiers and Sailors, While Kent Follows With Seven Names, of Which That of Wolfe Is the Greatest—Scotland Has Twenty-Four and Ireland Sixteen.

Which county has produced the most famous soldiers and sailors? Taking in the first place the four countries into which the United Kingdom is divided, we find that England gave birth to no fewer than one hundred of our naval and military heroes—thirty-six soldiers and sixty-four sailors. Strange though it may seem, however, among the great cities of England, only London, Bristol, and Newcastle-on-Tyne can claim the honor of being the birthplace of either a naval or military hero.

London has been the birthplace of seventeen heroes, including Gordon, Captain A. Conolly, Lord Cornwallis, Gen. Pollock, Sir W. Peel, and Gen. Sir H. Norman, and Admirals Munden, Keppel, Vernon, Lord Howe, Lord H. Hudson, Lord Hawke, Sir Sidney Smith, and Sir E. Berry. Bristol was the birthplace of Sir William Penn, and Newcastle-on-Tyne that of two naval heroes, Lord Collingwood and Admiral Bullen.

Of the English counties, Devon comes first with ten names, including those of Drake, Marlborough, Raleigh, Hawkins, Sir Redvers Buller, and, the most recent addition to Devon's illustrious dead, Captain Scott. Curious enough, Cornwall, which is even more maritime in character than Devon, has only produced three great sailors—Sir Richard Grenville, Admiral Boscawen (afterwards Lord Falmouth), and Admiral Sir Thomas Graves, who was second in command to Lord Nelson at the Battle of Copenhagen.

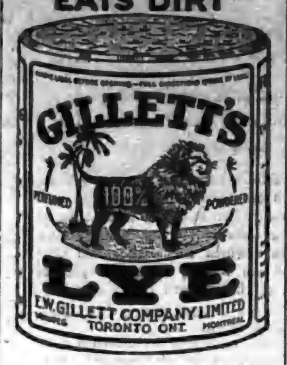
Kent is second to Devon with seven names, the greatest of which is Wolfe, the hero of Quebec. Sir Philip Sidney, Byng, Harvey, Pellew, Inglefield, and Jeremy Smith, men whose names are writ large in the history of the British navy, were all natives of Kent, says The Strand Magazine. Sussex and Essex have one name apiece, the former that of a soldier, Gen. Sir W. Lennox, who distinguished himself in the Indian Mutiny, and the latter a sailor, Admiral Nicholas Haddock, who, at his death in 1746, was commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean squadron. Surrey with no coastline produced three distinguished naval men — Lord Rodney, Sir John Balchen, and Sir John T. Duckworth.

Hampshire can claim three great soldiers — the greatest of whom is Lord Cardigan, who led the Balaclava charge. Shropshire has five names, those of Lord Clive, Viscount Hill, who was with Wellington at Waterloo, Sir Herbert Edwards, one of the ablest soldiers India has ever seen, Admiral Benbow, and Admiral Jennings.

Staffordshire outpaces Shropshire in the matter of naval heroes by being the birthplace of Lord St. Vincent, Lord Anson, and Lord Alan Gardner, while Norfolk has a glory all its own in having produced the matchless Nelson. It was the birthplace, too, of Sir Cloudesley Shovell and Sir Christopher Myngs. The county of Huntingdon was the birthplace of Cromwell.

Cambridgeshire claims Sir Harry Smith, after whose wife Ladysmith was named; Gloucestershire, besides Admiral Penn, Lord Ragian, and Sir Edward Codrington; Somerset, Blake and Admiral Sir Samuel Hood; Dorsetshire, two other members of the Hood family, who distinguished themselves in the navy, and Sir Thomas Hardy, captain of Nelson's ship, Victory; and Oxfordshire, two royal soldiers, Edward the Black Prince and Richard I.

Yorkshire can claim four distinguished seamen — Frobisher, who shares with Drake and Hawkins the glory of the defeat of the Spanish Armada; Capt. Cook, the discoverer of Australia; Sir Hugh Palliser, and Sir John Lawson. The rival county of Lancashire can claim but two names—Admiral Hornby and Admiral Sir John Norris, while Durham claims a great soldier, Sir Henry Havelock.



Wales has only contributed two distinguished sons to the services—Sir Thomas Picton, who was killed at Waterloo, and Admiral Thomas Matthews. Scotland contributes twenty-four of our greatest soldiers and sailors, thirteen of the former and eleven of the latter. Edinburgh and Glasgow being the only great cities that can claim any of their names. Glasgow is proud of the fact that Sir John Moore, of Corunna, and Lord Clyde (Sir Colin Campbell), the savior of British rule in India, were born there. Lord Dundonald, Admiral Cochrane, was also born in Lanark. William Wallace was born in Renfrew and Robert Bruce in Dumfries.

Ireland can claim sixteen naval and military heroes, six sailors and ten soldiers, though if contemporaries were taken into account the list would be much longer. Dublin can claim the greatest military hero of all in Wellington, not to mention Nicholson, a hero of the Indian Mutiny, and the late Lord Wolseley. Of the sixteen names claimed by Ireland, which include Sir Hugh Gough, Admiral Otway, Sir George White, and Admiral McClintock, six belong to the province of Ulster.

Drawbridge and Moat.

At Helmingham Hall, in Suffolk county, in England, the drawbridge is always raised every night over the historic moat, which is more than 700 years old. The moat is not dry like so many of ancient date, but is filled to the brim. This is the only English castle where the historic right of raising the drawbridge has come down from the days of chivalry.

GILLETT'S LYE EATS DIRT"

James Farrall, of Streetsville Junction, Still Persists in Selling Booze.

On March 11th, two detectives sent out by the Provincial License Department visited James Farrell's place at Streetsville Junction. As they entered the hall, Mr. Farrell came out of the sitting room in which two men were seated at a table with glasses before them. Farrell had a bottle partially filled with whiskey in his outside coat pocket, and it was taken from him. The glasses from which the men had been drinking were also taken. One of them contained some whiskey, The other had held beer but was empty. A search of the premises brought to light a bottle of gin and a gallon keg containing a quantity of beer. Farrell was again summoned to appear to answer to a charge of keeping liquor for sale. He was defended by Mr. W. S. Morphy. The detectives gave the facts as above stated. One of them had questioned one of the men in the sitting room and attempted to detain the other in order to ascertain his name but he left the house before this could be obtained. Farrell swore positively that he had sold no liquor and had served none, save to his son and himself. He denied positively that there were two men in the room, but swore that the only person in his house that morning, with the exception of his own family, was a tramp to whom he had given some breakfast. The detectives saw young Farrell in the kitchen but he was not the man whom they had questioned in the sitting room. Farrell was found guilty, and fined $100 and costs. He at first decided to take the alternative penalty and serve three months in gaol, but thought better of it and paid the fine.—Brampton Conservator.

Shed Your Winter Complexion

Winter weather and Spring winds have roughened and harshened your skin and it requires care and proper treatment to bring back its rosebud freshness and softness. "Your Complexion" is the title of a most useful Book just issued by the Nyal people and obtainable free from any Nyal Agency Drug Store. It tells all about this most important subject, care and treatment of the complexion, including full directions for massage.

King Bonverd II.

A Legend of a Lost Kingdom.

By F. A. MITCHEL

Since the dawn of history the map of Europe has been changing. Many years ago there was a nation the very location of which has been lost, but it is supposed to have occupied a part of Austria and a part of northern Italy. There is a legend connected with this country which has been handed down by word of mouth for many centuries. Traces of it have been found among German speaking people and among Italians.

There was a king of this country—so the story goes—who was at continual war with a people living to the east of his territory, supposed to have been Slavs, whose descendants now occupy the Balkans. He appears in different versions of the tradition under different names, but usually Bonverd. The name of the nation he governed was Thungaria, supposed by some to have been the origin of Hungary.

While King Bonverd was hard pressed by his enemies a son was born to him. There was a prophecy that the Serbs would overpower Thungaria, but that a Bonverd born at the time of the conquest would re-establish the kingdom and subject the conquerors. This prophecy, which reached the Serbs, filled them with a desire, should they succeed in fulfilling the first part of it, to nullify the second part by either killing the infant who was, when grown, to work their destruction or make him a captive.

At the birth of the heir to the throne (Bonverd II., if he lived) his mother was unable to nurse him, and a peasant woman who gave birth to a man child at the same time was called in to give suckle to the prince. She was assigned rooms in a wing of the palace and brought her own child with her.

The woman, whose name was Josepha, was dark and her child was of like complexion, while the heir apparent to the throne was fair, with blue eyes. The king, when Josepha and her son, who was called Herman, were brought to the palace, called upon his councilor to make an inspection of the two infants in order that the peasant boy could not be substituted for the prince. They reported to the king that, since one was light and the other dark, any one who had seen them, knowing which was the prince, would always be able to judge correctly between the two. This satisfied the king, and he made no objection to Josepha having her own son with her.

Meanwhile the Serbs were slowly approaching the capital of Thungaria, their king, Boris, being a great general and matched against a commander who was his inferior, for King Bonverd was not a warrior and was obliged to yield the command of his troops to another. This man risked all on one battle and was defeated, and the whole of Thungaria was open to the enemy, who had advanced rapidly on the capital. Indeed, they came as fast as the news that they were coming.

One morning Josepha heard a din below and, looking through a window, saw the street filled with the enemy's troops. The prince was asleep in his cradle, covered with drapery of the finest texture and bearing the royal arms.

Josepha's own son was in his own cradle, made of oak and unadorned. Hearing a noise in the corridor and believing that the Serbs had broken into the palace and would murder the prince, she laid him in her son's cradle and put her son in the place of the prince. Then, passionately embracing her offspring, she went into an adjoining room that she might not see him killed.

She had scarcely done so when the nursery door was thrown open and armed men entered. In a few minutes they were gone, and Josepha went back, expecting to see the body of her murdered son. The cradle was empty, and the prince was lying where she had placed him in the oaken cradle.

King Bonverd was killed fighting at the head of his bodyguard, and all his courtiers who outlived the taking of the city were scattered. Josepha, carrying the prince, who was supposed to be her child, escaped from the palace and made her way to her home in the country. She dared not let it be known that the babe was heir to the throne of Thungaria lest the fact reach the conquering king and he should be killed. She therefore kept her secret.

Twenty years passed. Thungaria was a province of the kingdom of Boris, governed by a viceroy. Bonverd was brought up by his foster mother under the name of Joseph Bernstein and unlike his father, manifested a predisposition for a military life. At an early age he enlisted in the army of King Boris in a corps stationed in Thungaria. Being a fine soldier, he was rapidly promoted till at twenty years of age he was made a captain.

A few years later a young man came to Thungaria and announced that he was Bonverd II., king of Thungaria. He declared that when the Serbs had conquered the country he had been taken by order of King Boris from his cradle in the palace and carried to the king, who had turned him over to one of his officers to be dispatched. The officer, not relishing the work of killing an infant, had turned him over to a common soldier, who in turn commissioned his wife to strangle him. The woman reported that she had done so, but instead had concealed him and afterward brought him up as her own child.

Great changes had taken place since the conquest of Thungaria. King Boris had died and had been succeeded by his son, Boris IV., who was a weakling. The young claimant to the throne of Thungaria called upon his people to rise and throw off the yoke. It was quite likely that he would have succeeded in putting himself at the head of an army at once had not several of King Bonverd's councilors, who had been commissioned to inspect the prince and his foster brother when they were babes, still lived. They at once visited the claimant to the throne and pronounced him an impostor. He was of dark complexion, while the true prince was fair.

Joseph Bernstein was at the time serving with the army and had risen to be colonel. He seldom saw his foster mother, and she had never revealed to him the secret of his birth, fearing that he would attempt to lead a revolt which would surely fail, and instead of gaining a crown he would lose his head. Bernstein heard of the pretender and espoused his cause, thinking it better that even a false pretender should lead the Thungarians to liberty than that they should remain subjects of their conqueror.

A secret meeting took place between the two men. Bernstein reported that the corps he commanded was largely composed of Thungarians and he could begin a revolt with it. The offer was accepted, and suddenly the viceroy and all the Serb civil officers of the government were arrested. The news spread rapidly, and the people sprang to arms. Not only was a sovereign at hand in the claimant, but a military chieftain in Bernstein. The army through a long term of years—a quarter of a century—had become largely Thungarian and only needed a leader. Bernstein therefore found himself at the head of an army almost immediately.

But a force composed entirely of Serbs was sent to put down the rebellion, and many battles were fought. At first it was a losing game for the Thungarians, but under Bernstein's leadership they held their own until, gaining strength, they were able to meet the enemy under more advantageous circumstances. Finally when their general found himself in a position to strike he sent his adversaries back in a rout, dictating terms of peace in their capital which restored the independence of Thungaria.

When Bernstein returned with this treaty at the head of a victorious army one of the first persons he met standing at the foot of the steps leading up to the palace, where he was going to report to the pretender, was his foster mother.

"Hail King Bonverd!" she said, kneeling before him.

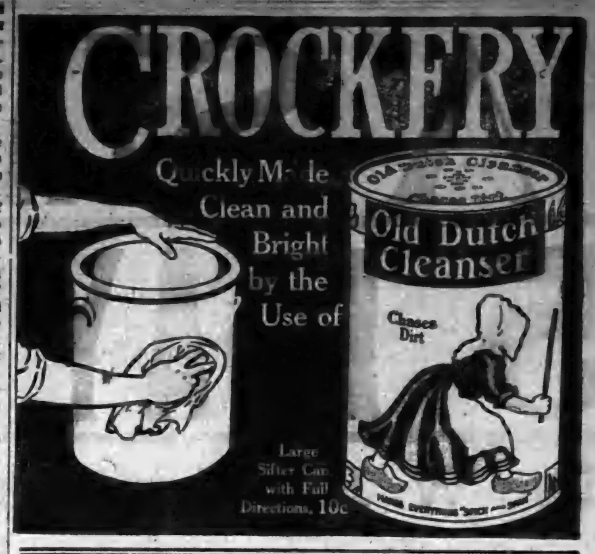
"What do you mean, mother?" he asked.

Before the throng that were crowding upon the young victor she told the story of how she had been his nurse, how she had put her own son in his place when the Serbs broke into the palace and how she had taken him away and brought him up as her own son.

At that moment an old man who had been a member of King Bonverd's cabinet came forward to congratulate the man who had freed his country, arriving in time to hear Josepha's story. He remembered Josepha and, looking from her to the man she had saluted as king, dropped upon one knee and kissed his sovereign's hand. The crowd, recognizing in the old man one prominent as a minister of their last sovereign, rent the air with loud huzzas for King Bonverd II.

The claimant, as became a sovereign, was waiting in the palace to receive the homage of his general, when, hearing the shouts, he directed an attendant to go and learn what they meant. The man returned and said:

"Please, your majesty, they have acclaimed General Bernstein king."



The pretender, rising from his seat, hurried out and appeared with clouded brow before the king and the group about him. Josepha threw her arms around the pretender's neck, exclaiming:

"My son, my son; I believed they had killed you! Happy day that both my children are restored to me! Salute your king!"

The proof that the blue eyed general was king of Thungaria was so complete that he who had believed himself king was convinced and gave his adhesion to the true sovereign. King Bonverd made him his prime minister and treated him as a brother. As for Josepha, the king had always believed that she was his mother and loved her as such. He insisted that she occupy quarters at the palace and be treated with the respect due a queen dowager.

When the Serbs heard the story of how their late king had failed in his attempt to thwart a prophecy it became a universal opinion that what fate had decreed it is useless to oppose.

They were very much dissatisfied with their own king, and when later King Bonverd, yielding to his subjects' clamor for revenge at their long subjection, marched at the head of an army to their country they declined to make any opposition. For had not it been foretold that he would conquer his father's conquerors? So Bonverd entered their capital, took possession of their government and made his foster brother their king. Since their new sovereign had been brought up among them they were well satisfied.

MAY LOSE BOTH HANDS.

A terrible accident occurred about three miles north of Ivy one day last week when a son of Mr. Isaac Speers lost a hand and sustained injuries to the other one which may render necessary its amputation also. Authentic details are difficult to get, people living in the neighborhood even not being possessed of the facts. It seems that the young man, who is about nineteen years of age, was working with others at a saw driven by a steam engine. The belt controlling the governor balls on the engine broke and the engine commenced to run at a terrific speed. The tension of the high speed on the drive pulley attached to the saw lifted the shaft out of the bearings and swung it around. Young Speers evidently put out his hands to keep the saw from coming in contact with him and missing the shafting, or the pulley, or whatever he attempted to grasp, the saw struck both his hands. A Thornton doctor was hastily summoned. An examination revealed one hand so badly lacerated that to save it was an impossibility and amputation was performed at once. The other hand, also badly lacerated, was fixed up and the unfortunate young fellow sent to the hospital at Barrie, where there would be every facility for saving the remaining hand. Latest reports are to the effect that the surgeons expect to get this hand into shape again and preserve it, but it will probably be of little use as the ligaments are severed.—Alliston Herald.

THE DIFFERENCE.

Two soldiers lay in a trench looking up at the stars.

Said Jack—"What made you go into the army, Tom?"

"Well," replied Tom, "I had no wife, and I loved war, Jack, so I went. What made you go?"

"Well," returned Jack, "I had a wife, and I loved peace, Tom; so I went."

I Never Want to Be Without Them

What Mrs. A. Averon Says of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Alberta Lady Feels it Her Duty to Tell Friends of the Benefit she has received from Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Faith, Alberta, Mar. 29th. (Special).—"I never want to be without Dodd's Kidney Pills," so says Mrs. A. Averon, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of this place.

"I am an old lady, sixty-eight years of age," Mrs. Averon continues, "and had Kidney trouble for twenty years. My heart bothered me, my muscles would cramp, and my back ached. Neuralgia was added to my troubles.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills are the only medicine that have helped me and I cannot recommend them too highly. I feel it my duty to tell my friends what Dodd's Kidney Pills did for me."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are the favorite remedy of the old folks. They cure the Kidneys which are the first of the organs of the body to feel the strain of years. By curing the Kidneys Dodd's Kidney Pills ensure pure blood and pure blood gives renewed energy all over the body. That's why the old folks say "Dodd's Kidney Pills make me feel young again."

To the Panama Pacific Exposition via the Canadian Rockies.

At the present time a great many are planning their annual tour. Considerable numbers visit the popular California Resorts, while many prefer the unsurpassed Resorts, Palatial Hotels and magnificent scenery of the Canadian Rockies. This year why not combine the two by a visit to the Panama Pacific Expositions?

Numerous people in comfortable circumstances, well able to afford this trip have mistaken the idea that a journey of this nature is most expensive. This is not so; thanks to modern railway facilities, an extensive trip, both interesting and educational, can be made with speed and comfort at a comparatively small cost. Why not investigate?

Those contemplating a trip of any nature will receive full information from any C.P.R. Agent; or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

THIS IS NO TIME TO THROW MUD.

Both political parties at Ottawa seem to be sparring for position. They expect something is going to happen, and if we are to believe the party press that something is an election. Some time ago we heard a great deal about the "party truce" which was established at the special war session last fall, but there never was a "truce" in the party press. Nasty little paragraphs have appeared in papers politically biased to one side or the other ever since that war session. They have gradually carried more and more of the sting of partyism, and now each side in the House is accusing the other of cavilling to bring on an election. At this time nothing could better suit the purposes of Canada as a nation within an Empire at war than a suspension of hostilities on the part of two political parties. We have followed Britain's lead in other things, why not follow it again in connection with parliamentary procedure? Great Britain stands out pre-eminently as the fountain-head of good government and over there government and opposition are working together, are talking together, are thinking together for the good of the nation. In Canada it is different. Under cover of the white flag of truce the political mire has been and is being stirred up, and the sharpshooters and snipers on each side are busy throwing mud at the other fellow on the floor of the House as well as through the ever-ready press. Canada is engaged in a more serious business than should permit of political mudraking. It requires the best ability of our statesmen to look after our real national welfare rather than to ferret out party inefficiencies, which are all too numerous no matter which party is in power. Let our representatives in parliament guard well our country at this time, and let them join hands to pilot our great ship of state until it reaches the harbor of peace to which we all look forward. Mud-slinging, loyalty and carping criticisms of past party records are not in order now. There is a bigger and more important task before our country, and our politicians on both sides should be men of larger calibre than to break a "truce" in which the thinking public concurs over anything, but important business vital to the present interests of Canada. —Farmers' Advocate.

ADMIRAL JELLICOE'S TEXTS.

Admiral Jellicoe was recently asked by the Scripture Gift Society to send two texts for the sailors, and his choice fell on the following :

"Be strong and of good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed : for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest."

"Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the king."

FATHER SAVED CHILD.

Physicians Transferred Blood to Patient's Veins as Last Resort.

Remarkable Operation which may Save Life of an Owen Sound Girl.

A remarkable operation, which is likely to save the life of Aradine, the thirteen-year-old daughter of Mr. J. W. Connell, Sixth Ave., E., was performed this week, when a quantity of blood was transferred from the father's arm into the veins of the little girl. For some weeks she has suffered from bleeding at the nose, the loss of blood being so great that her condition became so critical that it was feared she would bleed to death. Apparently nothing could be done to stop the constant hemorrhages that were sapping her life away, although the physicians tried every expedient. From her nose, her eyes and even her gums the blood ran and the case baffled the doctors who were attending her. Sometimes the bleeding was stopped for a day or so, only to start again and hopes for her recovery were almost given up. Finally, it was decided to transfuse a quantity of blood from some other person to the body of the little girl in a last effort to save her life. Her father, who is a big, healthy man, volunteered to give the blood and on Monday the operation was performed by two of the local physicians. An incision was made in the father's forearm, about half a pint of blood was taken out and after it was strained to take the clot out, was injected into the little girl's side. The effect was wonderful, for in a short time, the bleeding ceased and she is now apparently recovering. While she is still very weak, the doctors now hold out every hope that she will be restored to health and strength. The bleeding from the child's nose has been going on ever since the new year and her strength and vitality were almost gone. The operation is one of the most remarkable ever performed in Owen Sound and especially remarkable is the fact that the transfusion of blood caused a cessation of the continual hemorrhage.—Owen Sound Sun.

AGAINST DRINKING.

Large Industrial Concerns Are Taking a Pronounced Stand.

To the Editor,—

"Of course we all know that railroads have long maintained strict rules in regard to drinking among employees; but do we know that within the last few years practically every great industry in the country has established similar rules."

"Drinking will now spell prompt dismissal for you if you are an employee of the Hershey Chocolate Co., the International Harvester Co., Sherwin Williams Co., Sheffield Car Works, United States Steel Corporation, Western Electric Co., Pullman Co., Edison Co., Western Union, Interborough Co., Standard Oil Co., or any one of a thousand other American firms of the first rank.

"This magazine could be crammed from cover to cover with instances of the big front industry has assumed against alcohol during the last two years."

"And not this: C. L. Close, Manager of the famous Bureau of Safety of the United States Steel Corporation, a man who knows the social side of the industry as few men do, declares his opinion that in ten years, through the combined efforts of the American industries, the manufacture and sale of liquors will be at an end in the United States."

January issue of the Technical World.

How I wish that every one could get a copy of the Journal from which the above extracts are taken. There would be few who would not be convinced that alcohol is the greatest evil in the world to-day.

TRENCH WARFARE

Sniping and Night Suprises Are a Prominent Feature.

Canadians are Proving Themselves Skilful and Resourceful Fighters.

The following extracts from letters, which his parents have received from Lieut. H. B. McGuire, furnish interesting information about the trench warfare which the Allies and Germans are waging along the greater part of the Western battle front.

France, March 9th, 1915.

My Dear Mother and Folks:

Friday night last we marched from our billets to the trenches and took our place there for four days. The relief was carried out in good order. We marched through devastated areas and broken down towns and right up to our trenches. We found our section of the trenches in a deplorable state, lots of water and mud and fortifications shelled down affording poor protection for us. We set to work immediately and kept at it all night. I had 100 men to look after and the building of their trenches. Hundreds of sand bags were used. We had to do all our work by night and my section is only 130 yards from the Germans. Part of the men kept watch and the rest worked hard. By morning we had the parapet built to a fairly good protection and the parados built up a little. The wire entanglements in front of our trench were also strengthened. When morning came and everyone was standing we were very tired, wet and covered with mud. Parts of the trench had water and mud over our knees. During the night flashes, searchlights and flares are constantly being thrown upon us as also we do on the Germans. During these periods the snipers get a chance at us, but by little tricks we fool them a little. It is wonderful the system of trenches. Wood, coal and food are brought up at night by parties who manage to dodge the stray bullets.

As a rule at night the fighting calms down a great deal for both sides have a lot of work to do. By day our trenches are further strengthened inside and the mud and water bailed out.

There are a number of dugouts in which the men take turns in sleeping. We have two dugouts, one for sleeping and one for eating. In these we get a lot of comfort. Stoves, tables and chairs are carried into these from ruined houses. An officer is on duty all the time but on account of the condition of my section of the trench I took very little sleep, only in the day time when I would fall asleep in a chair and then the artillery could not even waken me. The four days we were in we had lots of work and succeeded in making a fairly comfortable trench. On account of the wet and cold the men are better for working all night, but a lot of them suffered from the cold. In the trenches, too, we have braziers and the men burn coal and wood to keep warm. We are short two officers in our company, thus making it harder for us.

All day long there is continual firing, sniping and artillery. We have some good shots, who prove to be good snipers and many of their snipers were bowled over by us. We can get a good view by means of telescopes and periscopes. Their artillery did not manage to find us. Our artillery is vastly superior.

Lieut. Miller and myself took patrols out each night we were in. This takes us out into the black, beyond our friends, into "no man's land" as it were. We managed to get valuable information though. I got over 100 yards in front and located German listening posts, patrols and locations. The second night I was fired upon, but the shots went wild. There are many suspicious movements on the German part, but we have got them.

Quite frequently aeroplanes go overhead and it is wonderful how they miss the guns. We can see the shells from the air-craft guns explode all around the planes.

We came out of the trenches last night with no casualties—not one of us getting hit. Several have gone to hospital with "trench feet" as we call it. This comes from exposure, constantly wet and muddy feet, and frost bites. We had a hard march back but the guns were silent when we came out so we were safe enough. Everyone's feet were more or less sore on the march and mighty glad we were to get to bed at midnight. We are in billets near the trenches as Brigade Reserve. We were wakened too early this morning by the artillery. The enemy's shells fell thick enough to get us, but somehow missed our billet. Their explosives seem to be getting weak.

To-day seems to be the starting of an advance. The army corps on our right has already advanced and we may be in it to-night. We are getting the Germans on the run and then it will be "farewell to Germany."

Our men are cheerful and sing at all times, even in the trenches. They would cheer the Germans every time they opened fire and did not get a hit.

Trench warfare is comparatively safe—very few casualties these days. Do not worry about me for I am alright. I am doing what I came for and enjoy it, though at times it is hard work. The opinion is that the war will be over in a few weeks, but it is hard to tell.

March, 12th, 1915.

I have been very busy since coming out of the trenches. I was given the job of constructing a bath house for the battalion. We had to make them out of beer barrels and "rustle" boilers and stoves from ruined houses. We go to the trenches again to-morrow night. The town is being heavily shelled and frequently shells burst near by. One hit the bath house corner just as I had got inside the door.

Our billets here are constantly being shelled though the shells seem to go just wide enough. "C" Company had a narrow escape while marching along the road. An 85 pound shell fell near them and pierced the ground 16 feet and did not explode. It is so big it would have wiped out a whole platoon had it exploded.

We had a splendid divine service in our billet last night. Major Beatty, of Cobourg, Chaplain to the Brigade, came along and we placed all the men in the hay mow and there we had a grand service. He is a mighty fine man and is working constantly. All the boys like him.

The Brigadier personally sent a congratulatory message to Capt. Collins, Miller and myself for our patrol work and information obtained in front of the German lines the other night.

In the Trenches, March 16th, 1915.

Your letter of February 28th was brought in to me last night, just before I went out on a patrol. The boys receive quite a lot of mail and are right jolly glad to get it too.

I dare say the Canadian papers get some weird stories about us. The reporters are not allowed in this campaign, so all they send to Canada will be enlarged stories based on all rumors they hear. Probably they will be allowed to come shortly from what I hear. Then watch for big stories. French's reports are the best. He gives in small detail what is going on. He is a wonderful man and the Empire owes him a great deal.

We are in the trenches for four days again, probably longer this time on account of the advances. On our right and left there has been some very heavy fighting and vast advances. We are holding our own here. All day to-day I have been locating the enemy's sniping posts by means of high power glasses. Some appear very bold, and we could distinctly see them. I had a sniper on my right, who would fire on the objects I located and we got them in this way several times. It is interesting to note the ground around them and the constructions, etc.

I was out for five hours last night and found them working in a ruined house in front. We have our suspicions also along their front. They have a very elaborate system of signals, which seemed to be used to centre star shells on us, for three times their flares fell on us. But by hugging the ground tight, fairly eating it, we cannot be seen. We got closer than ever to their wire entanglements. They use all sorts of colored sand bags and bogus loopholes for deception. Our bombs are going to be used on the ruins one of these nights and ought to stir them up some.

General Alderson says we are full of resource. If you had seen us marching to the trenches you would have thought so. The boys were laden down with supplies, coal, coke, etc., for brazier fires, and cabbages, carrots and potatoes, which they located somewhere. The canned beef, or bully beef, is cut up with the vegetables and soup powders which the boys cook over the braziers and a splendid mess they have too. At night parties go out for wood, water, rations, etc. Last night there was quite a chatter between lines, whistling and singing, and then a few well directed shots would remind us that they were treacherous. They have some beastly wicked machine guns, but they waste a lot of ammunition on the spry Canucks. Our artillery is dropping some splendidly directed shrapnel just now, which "Fritz" does not seem to like.

Mrs. Collins sent us a box last night containing soups, cakes, dates, chocolate, etc. She is still in London, but seems anxious to get to France. There are thousands of nurses all kept very busy. How they manage to care for all the wounded is a question. Of course the advance field hospitals and first bandaging stations are all male help and at the hospitals in England is where they are really busy. It is wonderful how the sick and wounded are transported hurriedly to hospitals. A wounded man can be in a hospital in England in 36 hours.

There are millions of soldiers here and naturally there are a few casualties, but we are not going to take too many chances just yet awhile, so don't think we are not taking care of ourselves. We cannot dodge artillery or rifle fire but we do not as a rule stand up as a mark. Our trenches are in pretty good shape now and comparatively dry, which is keeping our sick list down considerably.

Well this will be all just now as it is getting dark and we must be all alert.

HARRY.

Mrs. William McKinley.

Mrs. McKinley, wife of the late William McKinley, one of the early residents of the Sleswick district, passed away at her home, lot 28, 1st line, Albion township, on Tuesday, March 23rd, in her 83rd year. A large gathering of friends and neighbors followed her remains to Caledon East Cemetery, but few if any of the companions of her youth were there. Nearly all had preceded her from this transitory abode of the human race. Deceased was born in Armagh, Ireland, in 1833, and came to America with her parents when only three years old. The time occupied in the passage was nine weeks and three days. The old passenger boats were then towed up the St. Lawrence river by oxen, occasional stops being made to rest the oxen. When a stop was made the children would be allowed to go ashore to play and pick berries which grew along the banks. The subject of our sketch was taken ashore by her father at one of these stopping places and got lost for a time. When he found her, the child's father had to hustle some to overtake the boat at the next resting place. The little immigrant first settled with her parents on what is now Yonge St., Toronto, near if not on the ground now occupied by the T. Eaton Co. store. Moving from there to Caledon the family settled in what was then called Tubtown, now Belfountain. From Belfountain they moved to lot 11, 5th line, Caledon, where Mrs. McKinley was married in 1853, afterwards moving to her husband's place in Albion, where she lived for nearly sixty years and was overtaken by death. She is survived by a family of two sons and three daughters. These are Robert, on the farm in Albion, W. J., of Caledon, Mrs. McBride, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Patterson, all living near Caledon East. A daughter died some 20 years ago. Mrs. McKinley was a woman of many estimable qualities and was greatly beloved by her friends and close neighbors.

Mark Brambles Death.

Mr. Mark Brambles, an old and widely known resident of the Farmington district, passed away at his home on lot 5, 3rd line, Amaranth about 12.45 o'clock Wednesday (yesterday) morning. The old gentleman retired at night apparently in his usual health. About midnight his son George and wife, with whom he resided, were awakened by the tapping of the old gentleman's cane on the wall of his bedroom. When his son entered the room he found his father grasping for breath and in evident distress. He asked for water but when his son returned with some he was unconscious and passed away in a few seconds. Deceased was in his 83rd year and was born in Yorkshire, England. He came to Canada 56 years ago shortly after his marriage to Miss Hannah Brown, who passed away three years ago last Thanksgiving. Mr. and Mrs. Brambles first settled in Chinguacousy about two miles from Brampton. They moved to Amaranth in 1870, settling on the 5th line. Five years later they moved to the 3rd line, where the deceased has since resided. His son, George, is the only surviving member of the family. The late Mr. Brambles was a member of the Methodist Church and a Liberal in politics. He was a quiet, industrious man, a good neighbor and a devoted husband and father. The funeral will be held to Greenwood cemetery on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Service will be held at the house at 1.30. Much sympathy is felt for the son, George, and his wife in their bereavement.

Mr. James Brown.

Orangeville has lost another of its old citizens in the person of Mr. James Brown, who passed away on Tuesday in his 81st year. Deceased had been in failing health for the last year or so and his death was not unexpected. The late James Brown was born at Enniskillen, Fermanagh County, Ireland, but came to this country with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Brown when a mere boy. The family settled on lot 25, 10th line, Albion, where the subject of our sketch resided for upwards of fifty years. About sixty years ago he was married to Miss Margaret Trimble, of Chinguacousy, by whom he is survived. Twenty-five years ago Mr. and Mrs. Brown decided to retire from farming and moved to Orangeville, where they have since resided. They were a most exemplary couple and as neighbors and citizens enjoyed the esteem and good-will of every one with whom they were brought into contact. Mr. Brown was a man of strong religious convictions and early in life identified himself with the Methodist Church, of which he was a useful member. He was recording steward of Churchill Methodist Church until his removal to Orangeville and was also superintendent of the Sabbath School for a number of years. After his removal here he was an office bearer in Orangeville Methodist Church for several years. Deceased was public-spirited and generous in his interests and sympathies. In Albion he served his township in the municipal council and as school trustee. He was a member of the Orangeville Town Council for a number of years and was highly thought of in this capacity, his energy and practical knowledge of road and bridge work making him a useful public representative. He was a Conservative with strong independent leanings and an enthusiastic Orangeman. He was a Pastmaster of Enniskillen L.O.L. No. 260, Albion, and Aaron L.O.L. No. 427, Orangeville. Naturally modest and unassuming, Mr. Brown did his work without parade or ostentation. His was a warm, genuine nature that won lasting friendships and many there are who will mourn his death, cherish his memory and sympathize with his aged widow in her sorrow and loneliness. The funeral will be held from his late residence, Little York St., at 9 o'clock this (Thursday) forenoon. The remains will be taken to Churchill cemetery in Tecumseth for burial. Rev. G. W. Robinson conducted a short service at the house last night.

A Presentation

Last Wednesday night the members and ex-members of the Orangeville choir gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Liddy. The event was a surprise party at which Mrs. Liddy was presented with a handsome pair of large cut-glass vases. Mrs. (Pr.) Bowles made the presentation and in a few remarks on behalf of the choir expressed their appreciation of Mrs. Liddy's many years' service in connection with the choir as member, organist and leader. Both Mr. and Mrs. Liddy replied in a fitting manner. Mrs. Liddy was always very faithful and ever willing to render assistance in connection with any branch of church work. The choir succeeded in making the event a complete surprise and a very pleasant social evening was spent in music, song etc., after which lunch was served.

Worked With Billy Sunday.

Miss Jean Lamont, one of Billy Sunday's Bible Teachers in his big evangelistic campaign in Philadelphia, is spending a week or so visiting her father, Mr. D. C. Lamont, and her sisters, Miss Lamont and Mrs. Adamson. On Sunday afternoon Miss Lamont spoke to St. Andrew's Sabbath School, delivering an extremely interesting address on the work and methods of the famous evangelist and the far-reaching results of his now world-famous campaigns. Monday night she spoke along similar lines at a union meeting of the Methodist Epworth League and St. Andrew's Young People's Guild. The meeting which was held in the Methodist Church was largely attended. Miss Lamont who was only engaged with Sunday for his Philadelphia campaign leaves town on Friday to rejoin the Honeywell Evangelistic Party, with which she has been connected for the last three or four years.

MOTHER'S PRAISE BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. S. E. Laurie, Grafton, Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets ever since my baby was two weeks old and would not be without them as I consider them the best medicine in the world for little ones." What Mrs. Laurie says thousands of other mothers say. Simply because they have found the Tablets safe and sure and pleasant to take. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Lacrosse Notes.

It looks as if the Dufferins are capable of selecting a good Manager, in addition to being able to play good lacrosse. Mr. James Armstrong, the new man on this job, has already shown that he has not outgrown his old time love and enthusiasm for the best game on earth.

Although not yet a week old as manager, he has held an executive meeting and plans for the season are well under way. This is what we call hustling with a vengeance and augers well for the success of this year's team. "Jimmie" has the confidence and esteem of the boys, and usually makes a success of anything he takes hold of. Well known to the public and liked by all, absolutely no better choice could have been made. Here's to you James.

The juniors are getting the fever and are making a great attempt to get a good juvenile team going. This is a move in the right direction and the older boys will certainly do all in their power to help the youngsters along. With the material there is in town there is no reason why Orangeville should not have a rousing team in the lower series. Get busy boys and you will find the right men behind you.

Dr. J. Garfield Bailey.

Dr. J. Garfield Bailey, surgeon on H. M. S. Hythe, graduated from Queen's University in 1910. After his graduation he went to London, Eng., where he took a special course in surgery. While in England the war broke out and Dr. Bailey at once enlisted for service in the Royal Navy and was assigned to H. M. S. Hythe. He has 500 of India's soldiers under his special care. Dr. Bailey is a son of Mrs. J. W. Bailey, of Rosemont, and a brother of Dr. Trueman Bailey, of Orangeville.

ODDFELLOWS' NIGHT

Brethren of the Mystic Links Hold Successful Lodge of Instruction.

The Oddfellows of the Dufferin district held a successful Lodge of Instruction in the Oddfellows Hall here on Wednesday night of last week. Members of Maple Leaf Lodge of this town showed enthusiasm and enterprise in their method of giving the visiting brethren a fitting welcome to the town. A band composed entirely of Oddfellows dressed in "Fifth Avenue" style and accompanied by the "lodge goat," which proved docile enough to lead on a halter, met the incoming trains and escorted the visiting brethren from the station to the lodge room. Shortly after the procession had left Broadway it assumed large proportions, as the High School boys had got wind of the affair and brought up the rear of the marching column in a body. After the visiting Lodges had further swelled the ranks at the station the march up town was made in truly imposing fashion.

The evening was given over to a Lodge of Instruction followed by a banquet. The following lodges were represented at the gathering:—Grand Valley, No. 256; Alton, No. 377; Credit (Erin) No. 257; Dundalk, No. 186; Thornasburg, No. 293; Markdale; Queen City (Toronto) No. 56; and Integrity (Toronto), No. 373.

In the unavoidable absence of the Grand Master of Ontario, who was to have given instruction in the secret work of the Order, his place was very ably filled by the Deputy Grand Master, of Toronto, W. Bro. Roger Crocker, who gave the lodges present a clear conception of the signs, secrets and mysteries of the Order. W. Bro. John A. McGregor, D.D.G. M., of Erin, was also present, and gave assistance in the work of instruction.

Grand Valley Lodge, which was represented by about 20 members, exemplified the 1st degree in a most creditable manner. The 2nd degree was put on by the Orangeville Lodge.

After the close of the Lodge, the assemblace, to the number of nearly 100, sat down to satisfy the cravings of the inner man. W. Bro. D. B. Brown filled the position of toastmaster in his usual clever and original manner. A number of toasts were proposed and responded to. Songs and instrumental music were freely rendered by several of the brethren who are musically gifted. The singing of Auld Lang Syne brought to a close a memorible evening in the history of Oddfellowship in this District.

Mission Band Meeting.

The Methodist Church Mission Band meeting was largely attended on Monday last, when many of the mothers were present to enjoy an interesting programme and to assist in and partake of the refreshments that were served. Between eighty-five and ninety children were present.

63 Years Married.

On Friday last Mr. and Mrs. David Scott, of Leith, celebrated the sixty-third anniversary of their marriage, and are receiving the congratulations and best wishes of their many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott were born in the North of Ireland, coming to Canada in their youth. They were married at Port Hope, where they resided for a few years, then coming to Owen Sound, and after a short stay here, going to their present home at Leith, where over half a century of happy married life has been enjoyed. There were six sons and five daughters, of whom all but two are living in different parts of Canada and the United States. Mr. and Mrs. Scott are aged 84 and 85 respectively, and both enjoy the best of health. The Advertiser joins a host of friends in the hope that the worthy couple may be spared to enjoy still many years of happy life on the old homestead.—Owen Sound Advertiser.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott are the parents of Mrs. W. H. Hunter, The Maples, and Mrs. Ewing, of Shelburne.

Fined $20 and Costs.

Four Orangeville young men were up before Police Magistrate Crawford, of Brampton, in Alton on Tuesday of last week on a charge of being drunk and disorderly in a local option town. The quartette drove from Orangeville to Alton on a recent Sunday night and created a disturbance in the village hotel. One of them fell in the stable yard and was carried into the stable and placed in a box stall where he remained until ten o'clock at night, before he was in a fit condition to leave for home. Five witnesses swore positively that he was drunk, but this the Orangevillian strenuously denied, maintaining that he had taken a chew of tobacco for the first time and it had made him deathly sick. The hotelkeeper, stable man and three other witnesses were firmly convinced that he was under the influence of liquor and he was fined $20 and costs. His companions were discharged as there was no evidence against them of drunkenness. One of them swore that he had never in his life tasted liquor or tobacco.

SHELBURNE'S AUDIT.

One Treasurer Paid over More Money Than He Actually Received.

But Two Others were Somewhat Short in Their Accounts.

The Shelburne Economist states that the report of the special Auditors engaged to make an audit of the books of the municipality for 1911-1912-1913-1914, was presented at the last meeting of the Town Council. The report discloses a number of discrepancies in the accounts, but fortunately they are not of a very serious character and are evidently due to loose bookkeeping rather than any wrong intent. Continuing, the Economist states:—

"The audit of 1911-12-13, which was looked on as more in the nature of a special audit, was presented in the form of a summary only; that of 1914 was presented in detail. The books of the Town Treasurer, School Treasurer, and Public Library Treasurer for the four years were all gone into (those of the Public Library for thatperiod including the Carnegie building account). Mr. H. Falconer was Town Treasurer during 1911 and 1912, Mr. R. J. Watson during 1913, and Mr. T. J. Harrison during 1914. Mr. R. A. Riky has been School Treasurer during the whole period covered by the investigation and Mr. T. F. E. Claridge has been Public Library Treasurer. The report as presented shows that in 1911 Mr. Falconer had deposited to the town bank account $64.60 more than he actually received. During 1912 he deposited $25.84 less than he received, which still left a balance coming to him of $38.76. The report shows that Mr. Watson (for 1913 and to 17 Jan., 1914) will require to give the town $107.50 in order to make his books balance, and that Mr. Harrison (for 17th Jan., 1914, to 31st Dec., 1914) will need to give the town $416.26 in order to make his books balance. Of the $107.50 owed by Mr. Watson, $100.50 represents an amount sent to him in August, 1914, in error. Of the $416.26 owed by Mr. Harrison, $20 is still in dispute. The report shows the current liabilities at the end of 1914 to have been in excess of the current assets by $470.67, and this without adding the $38.76 due Mr. Falconer, which for some reason was not placed among the current liabilities, and which would bring the excess of current liabilities over current assets from $470.67 to $509.43. In regard to Mr. Harrison's books the Auditors state that we are informed that in the first place the cash book was not placed in the hands of the Treasurer until the year was far advanced, and second, it was handed over in an incomplete state, as receipts and deposits occurring between the 1st and 17th January were not recorded. Again, we find that the amount collected from R. Watson on the 14th of April was collected by the Auditors. It was deposited on the same day by the Auditors to the credit of the Village, but the Treasurer had not charged himself with the amount, as he apparently did not know of it. If all monies were deposited as soon after their receipt as possible, and an agreement made between the cash book and the bank pass book occasionally, an error or omission would be immediately detected. We would suggest in order to prevent a recurrence of anything of this kind that it be made incumbent on the Treasurer to deposit all monies as received, and that he make his deposit slips out in duplicate, having the duplicate initialed at the bank. This duplicate would prove of great value for audit purposes." The Auditors, among many criticisms, have this to say:—"The Collector's Roll is kept in an incomplete manner. Special columns are provided therein for discounts allowed, percentages added, and dates of receipts of payments; none of these columns are ever entered up, and it would be of very material assistance in facilitating the checking of the Roll afterwards. We would suggest that the Collector in making up his deposits make a duplicate slip and have it o.k.'d by the bank at the time of each deposit. If a duplicate receipt form, numbered, were used, it would also be of much assistance and provide a better check on the Collector." The Auditors made no criticism of the School and Library books, so that those Treasurers have nothing either to receive or pay back."

Council decided to have two hundred copies of the report issued in printed form. The Clerk was also instructed to notify Messrs. Watson and Harrison of the amounts they owe the municipality as shown by the audit. A motion was put through, authorizing the present Treasurer to refund Mr. H. Falconer the sum of $38.76, the amount overpaid by him in 1911 and 1912.

Bell Changes Managers.

Mr. A. A. Smith, Orangeville Manager for the Bell Telephone Co., has been transferred to Newmarket, where he has been made manager of the local exchange. His place here has been taken by Mr. Ed. Schnurr, local Plant Chief. The Company has decided to unite the two departments under the supervision of Mr. Schnurr, the new local manager. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have been excellent citizens and their departure from town will be generally regretted. Mr. Smith is a capable and energetic business man and has also taken a very active interest in lacrosse, bowling and curling. Altogether he is the type of man whom the town can ill afford to lose. Mr. Schnurr, the new manager, has filled the position of local Plant Chief for nearly two years and is therefore well-known in and about town. He is well-liked and will make a popular Manager.

Hospital Notes

The next meeting of the Daughters of the Empire will be held at the residence of Miss Hewat, Second St., on Friday, April 9th. Members are requested to bring their knitting.

The young men in Orangeville are getting up a Minstrel Show to be given on April 13th. The proceeds will be donated to the Hospital Building Fund. This promises to be one of the best performances put on in Orangeville for some time and should meet with a generous patronage, more especially as it is in aid of such a worthy cause.

MAXWELL — At Inglewood on Sunday, Mar. 14th, 1915, to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Maxwell, a daughter.

IN LOVING MEMORY of our dear Annie, beloved wife of A. E. Richardson, who departed this life at Winnipeg, March 31st, 1914.

Not now but in the coming years
It may be in the better land,
We'll read the meaning of our tears
And then sometime we'll understand.

We'll catch the broken chord again,
And finish what we here began;
Heaven will the mystery explain,
And then up there we'll understand

We'll know why clouds instead of sun
Were over many a cherished plan;
Why song has ceased when scarce begun,
Up there sometime we'll understand

God knows the way, he holds the key
He guides us with unerring hand;
Sometime with tearless eyes we'll see,
And then up there we'll understand.

UNIQUE RESPONSE TO A LOYAL TEACHER.

One of our teachers the other day suggested to her pupils to bring some pictures which might be used in explaining lessons. She was much surprised next day to receive from a little son of one of our European families an old lithographed marriage certificate in colors, in blanv. While possibly willing to receive such a document if properly filled up, she hardly knew what to do with this one, but gracefully accepted it as a sincere tribute from a loyal pupil.—Acton Free Press.

A COMEDIAN'S TRICK.

Ruse By Which He Escaped Arrest and Had His Debts Paid.

Many amusing stories are told of Joe Haines, a comedian of the time of Charles II., sometimes called "Count" Haines. It is said that he was arrested one morning by two bailiffs for a debt of £20, when he saw a bishop to whom he was related passing along in his coach. With ready resource he immediately saw a loophole for escape, and, turning to the men, he said, "Let me speak to his lordship, to whom I am well known, and he will pay the debt and your charges into the bargain."

The bailiffs thought they might venture this, as they were within two or three yards of the coach, and acceded to the request. Joe boldly advanced and took off his hat to the bishop. His lordship ordered the coach to stop, when Joe whispered to the divine that the two men were suffering from such scruples of conscience that he feared they would hang themselves, suggesting that his lordship should invite them to his house and promise to satisfy them. The bishop agreed, and, calling to the bailiffs, he said, "You two men come to me to-morrow morning and I will satisfy you."

The two men bowed and went away pleased, and early the next day waited on his lordship, who, when they were ushered in, said, "Well, my men, what are these scruples of conscience?"

"Scruples?" replied one of them. "We have no scruples. We are bailiffs, my lord, who yesterday arrested your cousin, Joe Haines, for a debt of £20, and your lordship kindly promised to satisfy us."

The trick was strange, but the result was stranger, for his lordship, either appreciating its cleverness or considering himself bound by the promise he had unintentionally given, there and then settled with the men in full.

My First Book.

Rudyard Kipling's story of his first book, which was a collection of poems which he had contributed to the Indian Civil and Military Gazette and Pioneer, of which he was sub-editor from 1882-89, is not without its humor.

"There was built a sort of book," he says, "a lean, oblong docket, wire-stitched, to imitate a D. O. Government envelope, printed on one side only, bound in brown paper, and secured with red tape. It was addressed to all heads of departments and all Government officials, and among a pile of papers would have deceived a clerk of twenty years' service. Of these 'books' we made some hundreds, and as there was no necessity for advertising, my public being to my hand, I took reply-post-cards, printed the news of the birth of the book on one side, the blank order-form on the other, and posted them up and down the empire from Aden to Singapore, and from Quetta to Colombo.

"There was no trade discount, no reckoning twelves as thirteens, no commission, and no credit of any kind whatever. The money came back in poor but honest rupees, and was transferred from the publisher, the left-hand pocket, direct to the author, the right-hand pocket. Every copy sold in a few weeks, and the ratio of expenses to profits, as I remember it, has since prevented my injuring my health by sympathising with publishers who talk of their risks and advertisements."

Near Garden of Eden.

"We are here very near Adam and Eve's abode, the garden of Eden," writes a lance corporal with the British forces fighting the Turks in the country back of the Persian Gulf.

"It is very hot, and the country is no place for a white man. We live on bread, tea and dates. The greatest hardship is the scarcity of water. I have not had a shave or a wash for seventeen days.

"We captured two forts and a telegraph office without the loss of a man. The Turks lost forty. Some of the methods of the Turks in action are curious. A favorite trick of theirs is to fall down in close action as if dead, and then, after the line of British has passed them, they get up again and fire at them from behind.

"While retreating the Turks frequently discard numerous articles of clothing lest they should impede their flight. Before their retreat has lasted long they have on nothing but their shirts and ammunition belts. No matter how hot the fighting is one cannot refrain from laughing at the spectacle of several hundred men running at top speed with their long shirts flapping around their bare legs."

Barrie and Kipling.

Mr. Barrie was one day at Waterloo station in a hurry to catch a train. He was hastening from the bookstall laden with papers, "a good many sixpenny ones among them," he dolefully relates, when, in rushing around a corner, he fell into the arms of Rudyard Kipling, equally in a tearing hurry. They turned on each other with scowling faces, then smiled in recognition and asked each other whither he went. Then Kipling, exclaiming, "Lucky beggar, you've got papers!" seized the bundle from Barrie, flung him some money and made off. "But you did not stoop to pick up his dirty halfpence, did you?" queried one of Mr. Barrie's hearers amusedly. "Didn't I, though?" returned Barrie, and added ruefully, "But he hadn't flung me half enough."—St. James Gazette

The Largest Book.

In the great library of the British Museum is to be seen the largest book in the world. This is an atlas of beautifully engraved ancient Dutch maps, bound in leather and fastened with clasps of solid silver. It is nearly seven feet high, weighs 800 pounds and was presented to King Charles II. before leaving Holland in the year 1660.

DANDIES IN WAR.

Fancy Dress Fighting Common Enough In the Peninsula.

Dandies were much in evidence in the Peninsular War, and an officer of the famous Light Division has recorded how some of the officers were "rigged out in all the colors of the rainbow. Some had grey-braided coats; others brown; some again liked blue; and the comical appearance of a number of infantry officers loaded with leather bottoms to their pantaloons, and huge chains suspended from the side-buttons, was amusing enough . . . . The 'cut-down' hat, exactly a span in height, was another rage; this burlesque on a chapeau was usually topped by some extraordinary-looking feather"!

The Duke of Wellington, however, never troubled what his officers wore, so long as they brought their men intact into the firing line with sixty rounds of ammunition apiece; and one of the chaplains, known as "The Fighting Parson," always wore a red hussar jacket, whilst during the Battle of Vittoria Gen. Picton wore, instead of the usual cocked hat, a round and very old hat, and carried "a huge white umbrella, lined with green."

In the war against the American rebels in 1777 Sergt. McGregor, of the old 42nd Foot, seems to have been allowed to dress himself as though he were going to a ball instead of a battle. For, unlike Capt. Crawley, who donned the oldest clothes he could find to fight in at Waterloo, the dandy sergeant spent a considerable time over his toilet, and finally appeared in "a new jacket with silver lace, and large silver buckles in his shoes, and a watch of some value." A sturdy rebel, his avarice excited by the sergeant's attire, attempted to carry the latter off on his back; but the sergeant turned the tables neatly and captured the rebel.

When the 10th Hussars were brought hurriedly from India to reinforce our army fighting in the Crimea, it was found necessary for them to be all dressed in plain clothes and marched thus across the Arabian desert to Alexandria. But it is doubtful if any regiment has ever been dressed more strangely than the old Portsea Volunteers who, in 1797, wore gold and scarlet cords, golden rosettes, feathers, cockades, white waistcoats, "gold wings" (to quote the official description), and "frilled skirts largely figured." Hence their nickname, "The Golden Goldfinches."

An Artful Dodger.

Mr. Balfour is credited with knowing more good stories about the British House of Commons than any other member. One of his best is the following, which he told at a public dinner some time ago:

"I remember hearing of a distinguished gentleman," he said, "who reported in the press gallery just about 100 years ago. He had had an excellent dinner, washed down with excellent wine. He was bored with the debate. He was wearied with the superfluity of rhetoric, which prevailed just as much 100 years ago as to-day. He got bored, and he got up and asked the speaker for a song.

"The speaker of that day was Mr. Addington, a gentleman who was nothing if not proper. The whole House, except the speaker, was convulsed with laughter.

"The sergeant at arms was appealed to. He went to the gallery and he inquired. The culprit retained the presence of mind to point to a respectable and venerable Quaker sitting below him, and this unfortunate gentleman was actually taken into custody."

Indian V. C.

The proud distinction of being the first Indian to win the V. C. belongs to Sepoy Khudadad Khan, of the 129th Duke of Connaught's Own Baluchis, one of the first two regiments of the Indian corps to come into action in Europe. On Oct. 30th, at Hollebeke, Belgium, the regimental machine-gun section, which occupied a critical point in the line, was practically annihilated. Man after man was hit, but the brave detachment continued to serve their guns, inflicting severe loss on the enemy. Eventually one of the guns was put out of action by a direct hit of a shrapnel shell, while the team of the remaining gun, fighting to the last, were bayoneted at their posts. Khudadad Khan, the sole survivor, though badly wounded, did not quit his gun till he had ensured that it would be valueless to the enemy, and managed, after a time, to rejoin his company.

The Earth's Motion.

The great Newton declared that the motions of all bodies in space are suffering retardation and that their velocity is steadily becoming less and will eventually cease, and all the ascertained facts of present day astronomers are decidedly in favor of Sir Isaac's idea. The earth, with its mass of 3,000 trillions of tons, traveling through space at the speed of something like 1,000 miles a minute, is slowly but surely coming to a standstill through the friction of the tides and other causes. It has been calculated by eminent astronomers that the earth loses about an hour in 16,000 years and is therefore gradually coming to a rest.

Pearl Worth $40,000.

A large pearl found recently in Western Australia was reported on as follows by the Secretary of the Fisheries Department: "The gem was found in a blister in the adductor muscle of a 5 pound mother-of-pearl shell. The blister was 1 1-4 inches long, 1 inch wide, and 7-8 inch in length. This blister, on being opened, was found to contain a perfectly round pearl of 100gr., being cleaned down to 96gr. The pearl, although marked slightly, is a very valuable one, and if it can be cleaned to a perfect lustre and should retain its shape, it should realize $40,000."

THIS WOMAN'S SICKNESS

Quickly Yielded To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Baltimore, Md. — "I am more than glad to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I suffered dreadful pains and was very irregular. I became alarmed and sent for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly until I was without a cramp or pain and felt like another person, and it has now been six months since I took any medicine at all. I hope my little note will assist you in helping other women. I now feel perfectly well and in the best of health." — Mrs. AUGUST W. KONDNER, 1632 Hollins Street, Baltimore, Md.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

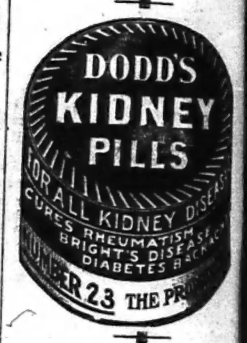
For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A JAPANESE STORY.

An old farmer lived in great peace and contentment in his mountain home, worshipping the spirits of his ancestors, a good husband, a good neighbor and a happy man. One day he made a journey to town, and saw for the first time in one of the shops a mirror. Stopping to look at it he was astonished to see the likeness of his long dead father looking at him from the mirror. He was a frugal man, and never spent money needlessly, but here was a chance to do honor to his dead father. So he paid the price of the mirror, and went home with his heart full of joy.

Carrying the mirror into the loft of his home, he arranged a shrine with flowers and rice before it, and every day he would go up alone and gaze with admiration into the eyes of his dead father, whose spirit had taken up its abode in the wonderful mirror.



Up to this time the farmer and his wife had lived in peace, but now a change arose. The wife had never been told why her husband should retire every day to the smoky loft. So one day when her husband was out she climbed the steep ladder to satisfy the cravings of curiosity. What was her horror and indignation to find set behind the rice and the candles the figure of a woman in the mirror. To think that her husband whom she had loved and trusted should be daily climbing up to the loft to worship the picture of a woman. She met him at the door with a torrent of reproaches and abuse, while he stoutly maintained that he had done nothing but worship the spirit of his dead father. She knew it was a woman, and he knew it was his father, so their peaceful home became the scene of daily quarrels. Her bitter tongue could only be silenced by the use of the bamboo stick.

One day a good old recluse living near by heard the noise of their quarrels, and came over to find out what had happened in the once peaceful home.

"He goes up to the loft every day to worship the picture of a woman," said the wife.

"It is nothing but the picture of my dead father that I saw and bought in town," said the husband, and the quarrel broke out more fiercely than ever.

"Let me settle this matter," said the recluse. So she climbed the ladder alone to see which was right, the man or his wife. After a long time she came back and reported that it was certainly the picture of a woman in the mirror, but that she was old, had shaved her head and turned nun, so the wife need feel no uneasiness or jealousy at all in regard to her.—Ex.

A COSTLY FLIRTATION.

An interesting case came up at the Spring Assizes in Walkerton last week, when Bruce Bucton was charged with assault for kissing Olive Watson, who resides near Hepworth. It appears that Bucton went to the Watson home on the 20th of February to exchange a few bags of potatoes for a quantity of hay, and finding Miss Watson alone in the house, started a flirtation, kissing her more than once and tickling her under the chin.

When the girl's father came home and learned of the proceedings, he went to Bucton and made him hand over 10 bags of potatoes and his note for $18 for six months, for his flirtation. Bucton claimed his advances were not rebuked by the girl, and that he took no advantage of her.

MASTERY OF SELF.

To overcome evil with good, anger by kindness, hatred by love, greed by liberality, and the inroads sin has made upon our moral nature by a patient continuance in well doing, is to gain victories for God and righteousness, and to raise barriers against the tide of evil threatening to flood the earth. God has admonished us to "endure hardness as good soldiers of Christ Jesus," fighting the "good fight of faith" in behalf of our own souls and the souls of others.

"No soldier in service entangles himself in the affairs of this life," but holdeth the mastery of himself and so directs his why as to "please him who enrolled him as a soldier."—Christian Leader.

Cured Fifteen Years Ago of Piles and Eczema

By Using Dr. Chase's Ointment—Certifies That the Cure Was Permanent.

Some people have tried so many doctors and so many treatments in their search for cure for piles and eczema that they find it difficult to believe there is an actual cure.

MR. KETCHESON

The strong point about Dr. Chase's Ointment is that it not only brings relief promptly, but brings about actual and lasting cure.

In 1897 Mr. Ketcheson, 88 Douro street, Peterboro', Ont., wrote as follows:—"I was troubled for thirty years with itching piles and eczema. I could not sleep at night, and when I got warm the itching was terrible. Eczema covered my legs down to the knees, perfectly raw. I have tried every preparation I could hear of. Seeing Dr. Chase's Ointment advertised, I procured a box, and this Ointment effected a complete cure."

On Sept. 28, 1912, Mr. Ketcheson wrote as follows:—"I received a letter from you to-day, saying that you found on file a statement made by me 15 years ago. I have always given Dr. Chase's Ointment a good name since it cured me, and shall tell you how I came to use it.

"I had suffered for many years from eczema and piles, and had tried doctors and everything I could hear of in vain. Reading about Dr. Chase's Ointment, I purchased it at once, and was soon completely cured. That was fifteen years ago, so there can be no doubt of the cure being a permanent one. I have met a great many people who have been cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment."
